

THE ROYAL VISIT TO IRELAND

Much Speculation Regarding the Reception of King and Queen on Irish Soil.

John Redmond in Favor of National Participation--He Says the Home Rule Cause Would Be Benefited if Irish Party Takes Official Part.

London, July 1.—There is much speculation regarding the Royal visit to Ireland, which begins next Friday. Disclosures in to-day's Irish Independent show that John Redmond is earnestly wishing that the Nationalists would take this opportunity of publicly vindicating their views against England. Addressing a meeting of Irish Nationalists, called to discuss the non-attendance of the party at the coronation in the abbey, Mr. Redmond, in an impressive speech, said that in his opinion and in the opinion of others well qualified to judge, and whom he had consulted it would be of untold benefit to the cause of home rule in the English constituency and in the House of Commons, if Irish members took an official part in the coronation ceremonies.

KING GEORGE V.

John Dillon, however, declared that any advantage which might accrue to the home rule cause in England, by the party attending the coronation, would be more than counterbalanced by the unpopularity of such a step amongst the great numbers of the supporters in Ireland. The strong bond between the Irish people and the Irish party was also emphasized, which latter was always displayed in regard to English State ceremonies.

"It's simply terrible," gasped the residents of Evanston, who thereupon boosted a reporter up on a neighboring fence so that he might gaze. He saw numerous females, tanned of skin, swinging drowsily in hammocks, lazily wielding fly-swatters. On a signal from the sanitarium the sun bathers covered themselves with the fringe of hammocks and later emerged in bath robes.

The police, to make a test case, arrested Joseph Vivic, attired him in a bath robe and held him for vagrancy. The women were not molested. They are separated from the men by a high fence heavily padded.

GIRL HEROINE ROUTS BURGLAR

Rescues Aged Nurse Attacked by the Intruder--Man Dives Through Window

Frightened by Daring Resistance of Young Woman, Rufian Makes Escape--Police Can Find No Clue.

Cleveland, O., July 1.—With presence of mind and bravery, Miss Myrtle Eldridge, twenty-four years old, prevented a burglar in her home yesterday morning from probably killing an aged nurse and robbing the household. The burglar escaped by diving head foremost through an open window.

The burglar is believed to be the man who shot and robbed William Kane in a Lake Shore freight car, Monday night.

The only persons on the lower floor of the Eldridge home yesterday morning were Mrs. Eldridge's invalid mother, Mrs. C. E. Bell, ninety-one years old, and Mrs. Lena Behnke, sixty-two years old, a nurse. Mrs. Eldridge, Mrs. Eldridge and their daughter were asleep upstairs.

About 1.30 o'clock Mrs. Behnke was awakened by sounds in the next room. She arose and saw a man in tattered clothing in the front hall, where Mrs. Eldridge's pocketbook had been left. The burglar had the pocketbook in his hands.

Mrs. Behnke screamed and started to run into the sitting room. She stumbled over a chair and fell to the floor. The burglar rushed toward her, as she regained her feet.

Miss Eldridge had been awakened and jumped out of bed. Clad only in her night gown, Miss Eldridge reached the first floor and saw the burglar attacking Mrs. Behnke.

Without a moment's hesitation, Miss Eldridge ran toward the burglar and screamed. The burglar turned and Miss Eldridge struck him in the face with both hands. He ran for an open window through which he had entered, and dove headlong through it. Miss Eldridge dashed through the back yard. Eldridge ran downstairs then and into the yard. All trace of the burglar was lost.

Miss Eldridge telephoned to the Detroit avenue station and Sergeant Gallagher and a squad of patrolmen went to the house.

The police believe the burglar left the freight in which Kane was shot and remained about the neighborhood. The Eldridge home is only two blocks from where the Kane shooting took place.

To Get Evidence for Divorce--After Summoning a Detective With an Electric Buzzer He Chased Barefooted Visitor Across Snow.

Toughkeepsie, N.Y., July 1.—A suit for divorce brought by Dr. Julius M. Blakeley, of Highland, was tried here before Justice Marchauser.

Dr. Blakeley, on the night of December 19th, 1910, hid himself in a closet in his wife's bedroom, according to the story he told in court, and by means of an electric buzzer, summoned Thomas McDonough, a private detective, when he decided that he was sufficient to bring action for divorce. The detective burst into Mrs. Blakeley's room and found there, he said, Clifton Carpenter, son of a wealthy Highland fruit grower. Dr. Blakeley, the detective testified, had a revolver and chased Carpenter, barefooted, across the snow-covered lawn.

Servants told of having seen Mrs. Blakeley, who is an attractive blonde in the kitchen. The cook declared that the young man paid frequent visits to the house and used his long and thin the doctor's wife while the family dinner was being prepared.

The Blakeleys were married in 1909. They have two children, a boy three years old and a girl of seven. Mrs. Blakeley entered an emphatic denial of misconduct with Carpenter and brought counter accusations against her husband. Justice Marchauser reserved decision.
