

A REEVE FIRED

And Shot A Young Man In The Back.

SEARCH FOR A WIFE

LED TO FAMILY TROUBLE AT BRIDGE END.

Farquhar McKee is in Jail in Cornwall—The Bullet Entered Victim's Lung, Who is in a Precarious Condition.

Cornwall, July 4.—There was trouble at Bridge End, a village north of Lancaster, Saturday, and as a result Chief Smith, of Cornwall, has Farquhar McKee, reeve of Lancaster township, in the Cornwall jail for shooting William Shaw, a drug clerk of Carp, in the back with a forty-calibre rifle. Shaw accompanied Dr. McKee, in whose employ he is, to Bridge End, in search of Mrs. McKee and child. The doctor's brother and a chauffeur composed the party and they travelled by auto. When they reached their destination they went to the residence of Mrs. McKee's father, D. C. McKee, but the latter said the doctor's wife and child were not there. Farquhar McKee, an uncle of the doctor's wife, appeared on the scene and the trouble arose. Two rifles and an axe were brought out, and the auto party tried to get out of harm's way, but Farquhar McKee fired his rifle and shot Shaw, in the back, the ball entering the left lung. The victim was taken to the general hospital here, and made an ante-mortem statement, according to Farquhar McKee of the deed. The McKees are prominent in Glengary and are well-known throughout the district. The bullet has not yet been removed from Shaw's lung. McKee has been held pending the result of Shaw's injury.

Mrs. (Dr.) McKee, of Carp, was formerly a nurse in Ottawa. She was a Roman Catholic but left her church and joined the Methodist faith when she married Dr. McKee, three years ago. Her parents objected, and several times endeavored to have her leave her husband and return to her church. This she did a couple of months ago, while Dr. McKee was in Ottawa attending the horse show.

THE 14TH AT NIAGARA FALLS.

Regiment Left Sunday Night for a Holiday Trip.

The 14th Regiment, P.W.O. 1865 left Sunday evening at ten o'clock for a trip to Niagara Falls. For some reason or other the trip was not a popular one. The 400 strong regiment produced only about 175 men, when the time came to march to the station. The companies formed up at the Armouries, marched out on Princess street down to King, over King to Brock and down to the K. & P. station. Here a special C.P.R. train was made up of nine coaches and drawn by two engines. The brass band marched to the station, but did not go as a band. Some of the members went for the trip. The bugle band went along. The regiment had a pretty warm ride to the Falls, as the night was awfully hot. It reached its destination at seven o'clock, and after breakfast in the park, Col. Cunningham dismissed the men, giving them till 8:30 o'clock, Tuesday evening, to enjoy themselves as they desired. Many of the regiment visited Buffalo, N.Y., for the glorious Fourth. The regiment will be back in Kingston early Wednesday morning.

ELECTION TALK

Is Again Stirring People of Britain

SUGGEST DISSOLUTION

OF HOUSE IN JULY AND POLLING IN AUGUST.

A Most Unpopular Step—A Political Impasse—Neither Government Nor Opposition Seems Willing to Compromise on Issue.

London, July 4.—With coronation week over, the House of Lords was the first body to turn to the serious work of considering the parliament bill. One week has been enough to show how matters stand. It is to be seen that they are much the same as they were before the adjournment. The government does not show a sign of accepting any of Lansdowne's amendments, and neither the government nor the opposition shows any signs of willingness to compromise.

Again today there was talk of yet another appeal to the country for a dissolution of parliament in July and a general election in August. Probably no step could be more unpopular with the country itself, but if the lords refuse to swallow the bill and the government stands firm, no other course seems open, unless it takes the step from which it naturally shrinks, that is, the creating of 500 new peers to swamp the present house of lords. Some of the unionist papers, such as the Times, profess to believe that there is a great change of opinion with regard to Unionist prospects at the next election, but the more general opinion is that another election will simply strengthen the government in the house of commons. Taking this view, the Spectator pleads pathetically today for the opposition to swallow the bill, and declares that "Pressure of radical opinion outside holds the government and its allies in a tight grip that there is not the slightest chance of penetrating the phalanx, but the moment that the parliament bill passes pressure will be relaxed. What is now an unbroken line will become one of gaps and breaks through which the Unionists attack can get home."

But the English people do not yet seem to realize that the face of political situation of the first magnitude. Popular opinion still seems unshaken, and not even the closing paragraph of the king's letter to the people has been appreciated in its full significance. But there are signs that it will be used as a text. None can doubt what was passing in the king's mind when he wrote: "Whatever perplexities and difficulties may lie before me and my people, we shall unite in a calm and confident trust in Divine guidance, the ultimate outcome will be to the common good."

Many liberal members of the house of commons have made private representations to the ministry with reference to the rumors of a probable general election, and have protested energetically against such action as needless.

John Hugh Edwards, M.P. for Glamorgan, during the course of a speech at Barry, declared he had received authoritative information that a general election would not be held. Premier Asquith possessed sufficient guarantees, and it would be a fight to a finish.

A SQUAD ANNIHILATED

ONLY ONE MAN OF THIRTY-SEVEN UNHARMED.

The Hardships Endured by French Soldiers in Africa—Moorish Guerilla Bands Prey Upon Them.

Paris, July 4.—Almost every week some half dozen French homes, informed by the dread official dispatch, are thrown into mourning by the loss of some beloved son or brother on the African field of battle.

The hardships encountered in the campaign in Morocco are scarcely ever referred to in the official dispatches, but little by little the accounts creep in—stories of long, hot marches, of sudden nocturnal attacks by Moorish guerilla bands, of frightful wounds, which either kill or maim for life and dreadful tortures when the unhappy wounded Frenchman falls into the hands of the Moorish warrior.

Take at random the story of Capt. Laborde, Gen. Touze, his commander, tells it in his diary, which has just been forwarded to Paris. Laborde was sent to examine the safety of a route leading from Debdou to Moulouya. Having accomplished this he decided to push on to El Alouana, situated in the heart of a handful of miniature mountains. With a few soldiers he advanced slowly to a group of peaks, when the progress was stopped by a shower of shot. He saw one of his men behind him fall, wounded. Calling the others around him, Laborde started back to rescue him from certain tortures.

The brave band, which numbered thirty-seven, were shot down. The way led to a ravine, but soon they were enveloped in a dense fog. They could see nothing and the bullets continued to fall amongst them about them. They staggered on blindly, firing as they went. One by one they went down. Laborde was shot through the body and died instantly. His lieutenant Fradet, took command and spoke words of courage. Slowly the little party was decimated until, when a rescue column arrived, only one man of the thirty-seven was left, still fighting desperately. Of the band of thirty-seven, twenty-nine were dead, and all the others wounded.
