OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

ANNUAL MEETING KINGSTON AND PEMBROKE RAILWAY.

One of Largest Year's Earnings in History of Company—Large Sum to be Expended on Improvements to Road.

The annual meeting of the directors and shareholders of the Kingston and Pembroke railway was held in the office of the company, in this city, on Wednesday morning. In this city, the year's work was gone over and was found to be very satisfactory in every respect. It was reported that it had been one of the largest years earnings in the history of the road.

The company is contemplating extensive work along the line of improvement, and a large amount of money will be used for this purpose.

As already stated in the Whig the company is undertaking to place new heavy steel rails on the road between Kingston and Sharbot Lake. Already one vessel loaded with steel has arrived in port and the steel is being distributed.

It is expected that a large part of this work will be finished this year and the rest of the work will be finished next year.

All the old officers were re-elected, W. D. Matthews, Toronto, as president; W. R. Baker, C.V.O., as president; vice-presidents, and the following directors: W. D. Matthews, Toronto; R. Creelman, K.C., Montreal; James Osborne, Toronto; H. P. Timmerman, Montreal; Hon. William Hartley, J. B. Walkem, K.C., Robert Crawford and W. F. Siddle, M.P.P., of Kingston. The latter was appointed to fill the place of the late Dr. R. V. Hoeyers.

After the meeting a number of the directors left with Mr. Baker on a tour of inspection over the road.

Joseph Russell was nominated by the independent conservatives of East Toronto. Miss Onida May Donovan, aged eighteen, died at Brockville, on Monday.

Herbert McCartin and Miss Corinne Casey, Brockville, were married on Monday.

As said there will be no registration in the newly-annexed districts. Quebec will also no more crown water powers.

BEST LIKED MAN

By Liberals—Hated by the Conservatives.

Ottawa Free Press.
"The best liked man on the liberal side of the house, and the worst hated by the conservatives." This remark was applied, yesterday, to Sir Allen Aylesworth by a prominent politician who had just heard of his retirement from the cabinet and from politics. For years Sir Allen Aylesworth has occupied a unique position in this country. He gave up one of the best law practices in Canada to enter the cabinet, a practice that was worth many thousands of dollars more a year to him than a position in Ottawa.

He started life at Newburgh, Ont.

HON. A. B. AYLESWORTH.

a poor boy. He knows of the privations of the Ontario pioneers, but he wasn't satisfied just to see a forest change into a farm. Sir Allen worked his way through college just like many another farmer's son.

The retiring minister of justice looks like a judge. One glance at that well-balanced head would show that it was full of law—the cool, calculating precedent upon precedent law. He is one of the finest and most highly cultured minds in Canada. He "knows his law," but he also knows how to express it. His speeches will do for models of English composition to be read before a college class. Every word seems to have been weighed.

Each phrase is in its right and proper place, and withal there is a delicate balance found in very few public utterances. He is one of the few men in public life whose speeches will stand being reported verbatim.

Sir Allen Aylesworth has no fear of popular criticism. He gives his opinions and he doesn't care who likes them or who dislikes them. He knows his opinions are honest in any event. That may sometimes be bad politics, but not in Sir Allen's case.

Of late years it has been almost pathetic to watch him in the House of Commons, seated behind his desk. His deafness has undoubtedly deprived the house of many a brilliant passage of repartee. With difficulty he could hear those speaking nearest to him, and he had to rely much upon Hansard for his information regarding what his opponents had said. Sir Allen has spent many weary hours reading Hansard, reading opinions that didn't count a continental. But his physical defect never hindered his attendance in the house when anything important was coming up.

In these latter days Sir Allen has also availed himself considerably of the newspaper training of his desk mate, Hon. George F. Graham. It has always been matter of keen interest to the "galler" the way in which Mr. Graham would report concisely and correctly to Sir Allen the gist of a criticism or comment from the other side, and it has been equally interesting to note the keen electric manner in which Sir Allen would grasp the point of the criticism and deliver the answer. In his legal battles, Mr. Aylesworth studied the other fellow's brief as well as his own, and he has carried the same principle into the parliamentary fight.

Common habits are familiar with Sir Allen's figure. The slouch fedora hat cocked on one side of his hairless head, his hand up to his ear trying to catch a phrase here and there, the face keen and intent—a square, honest, persistent face—rarely saying anything, but when he rose to speak, even a classic was coming, even though it generally carried scorn and cutting criticism of tory politics. The house will miss Sir Allen Aylesworth.

A GRAND OLD MAN

LIEUT.-COL. THOMAS BOG PASSED AWAY IN 85TH YEAR.

A Well-known Soldier—When a Small Boy He Saw the Battle of the Windmill.

Pictou, Ont., Aug. 9.—Lieut.-Col. Thomas Bog, "Pictou's Grand Old Man," passed away Tuesday morning, aged eighty-five years. He had been failing for some months. He was the father of the 16th regiment. He was born in Montreal on Dec. 18th, 1826. Col. Bog left Montreal in 1836 to live in Prescott. Here, as an eleven-year-old lad, he witnessed the battle of the Windmill, one of the most stirring events of the rebellion of 1837-38.

Since 1842 Col. Bog's home had been in Pictou. In December, 1865, he was instrumental in raising the first company of volunteers forming the nucleus for the subsequent 16th battalion. In 1865, at the close of the American civil war, for the purpose of settling the disorders and troubles arising from the St. Albans raid, a company of the 16th, under Major Bog, was ordered to the frontier and stationed at Hemmingford, Que. for several months.

Col. Bog was out with the battalion during the Fenian raid in 1866. On the retirement of Col. Boss from the battalion, Col. Bog was given command and served for eight years as commander. He was retired in 1874, retaining rank after thirty-two years' service. He held Queen Victoria's decoration for long service and the Fenian raid medal.

During his long residence in Pictou Col. Bog was actively associated with much relating to the welfare and up-building of the town's interests. He was a director of Glenwood cemetery for thirty-one years, secretary-treasurer of the high school twenty-six years, secretary-treasurer of the Prince Edward Agricultural Society over twenty-six years, and deputy registrar for forty years.

Besides his widow Col. Bog is survived by two sons, E. A. Bog, Toronto, an inspector of the Standard bank of Canada, and William Bog, one of the managers of the Bank of Montreal in New York city.

At Beaumaris, Muskoka, Samuel and Elizabeth Willock, aged seven and five, were drowned while paddling near their father's summer cottage.

The mangled body of an unknown man was found early on Wednesday morning near the T. H. B. tunnel, Hamilton. Deceased was aged about thirty; no identity.

Edward MacGuinn, fifty-two, fell from a load of gravel near Duart, on Monday night. Both arms and both legs were broken. He died a few hours afterwards.

The workshops of the Maine Central railroad, at Calais, Maine, were burned Wednesday morning, including nine locomotives. The loss is $110,000.

Two French seamen were executed, at Toulon, in the presence of three thousand superiors, on Wednesday morning. They were convicted of murdering a comrade for three cents.

Objecting to her fiancé, John Brevell, an unemployed gardener, of New York, shot his fiancée, mentally maddening her. When pursued, he ended his own life.

Miss Anna Rubenstein, school teacher, of New York, was drowned from a boat at White Lake, N.Y., dragging down her rescuer, Dr. Betman Gluckman, Brooklyn. Eight others were rescued.

The skulls of two fifteen-year-old boys, badly battered, were found at New York, on a roof of the Pacific coast express coach. They were evidently killed while passing through a tunnel while stealing a ride. The boys are believed to be Robert Crosby and Mortimer Hunt, of Syracuse, N.Y., who ran away on Tuesday.

his questions. The minister was prepared to give a courteous reply, but could not catch the drift of his interrogation. The chairman of the meeting, H. B. Sherwood, president of the Lennox and Addington Liberal Association, made an attempt to secure order by an illuminating reference to the benefits which a local option law might confer on some people. This thrust roused the ire of the gentleman, who rose excitedly and proclaimed loudly that the chairman was a blackguard. He tried to repeat this forceful form of political argument. The Hon. William, who did not recognize an old acquaintance, was unable to continue amid the ensuing hubbub.

Ready to Throw Him Out.

In the midst of the row a little old gentleman on the platform angrily strode to the front and informed the interrupter that he was going to throw him out. Then, like a miniature tornado, he ran across the platform, with his daughter vainly tugging at his coat tails, down the steps and up the aisle to the back of the theatre where the now subdued interrupter sat. The licensed liberal champion of law and order peeled off his coat as he climbed over the benches, and it looked as if there was going to be a real lively time, much to the amusement of the audience. However, the fiery little septuagenarian, ex-Mayor Stevens, seeing that the other man was not looking for a scrap, and was now in favor of decorum, contented himself with sitting down grimly beside him and seeing that he opened not his mouth thereafter. Mr. Paterson made a humorous comment and then brought the audience back to the reciprocity argument.

The other notable feature of the meeting was a brief, common-sense speech by Charles Anderson, a prominent conservative farmer, who took five minutes to tell his brother farmers that reciprocity was of far more importance to them than abject party allegiance. He noted that he had been one of the delegates with the big reputation of farmers, which waited on the government at Ottawa last December. When he returned home he had found that three-quarters of the people of the riding approved of the deputation's demand for reciprocity, but now that was offered the party which had brought the old-line conservatives all into line, and they opposed what before they had asked for, Mr. Anderson believed firmly in the benefits reciprocity would bring to the farmer. He vigorously stated that the manufacturers and the selfish interests were now lined up against it for one specious reason or another, and announced that he would do his utmost to elect a candidate who promised to vote for reciprocity. He declared that he was not a traitor to his party, but rather that the party was traitor to the old policy for which Sir John Macdonald and all other conservative leaders had stood up to the time reciprocity became possible through the Fielding-Taft agreement. Mr. Anderson's clear-cut and logical statement of the issue from a tory farmer's point of view was received with enthusiastic cheers by the audience.

Dr. Vrooman spoke but briefly, declaring his firm faith in the government's policy, and noting the foolish inconsistencies of the men who urged the annexation cry as an argument against the pact. H. B. Sherwood, superintendent of the Bay of Quinte railway, made a most efficient chairman, and in a forceful opening address strongly criticized Sir James Whitney's philippic at Toronto on Saturday. After brief addresses by F. S. Wartman and M. S. Madole, liberal candidates at previous elections, the meeting closed after unanimously passing a resolution endorsing the reciprocity agreement.
