THE INTRUDERS

"It is my island," she said.
 "I beg your pardon for the contradiction," said the young man firmly. "It is my island."
 "My father left it to me,"
 "My uncle left it to me,"
 "You have camped on the wrong island. There are hundreds of islands in the river. You have chosen, by mistake, one which belongs to me."
 "My uncle's descriptions were very vivid. His island was a long, narrow one with a cabin at each end."
 "My father's island was a long, narrow one with a cabin at each end."
 "Were you ever here with your father?"
 "No. Were you ever here with your father?"
 "No. But I am sure this is my island." "I am equally sure that it is mine. I have no objection, however, to your using the cabin you have chosen as your home."
 "You have my permission to remain in the cabin in which you are living, it is my property, but I shall permit you to remain there."
 The young man clenched his teeth on the stem of his pipe and stared wrathfully out at the river. The girl watched his handsome, wrathful profile.

"Asked did you come here?" she asked presently.
 "A man has a right to visit his own property. Why did you come?"
 "A woman has a right to spend a few weeks on her own estate. I came here because I was tired of people and places. My father bought this island years ago and built the two cabins. I brought my housekeeper and a quantity of supplies and came here to spend a month."
 "I came here for a rest and for the fishing, though I should find my island unmolested by intruders."
 "I am not an intruder. She rose to her feet and stood looking down at him. Her white linen hat was pushed to the back of her head and her reddish brown hair waved about her tanned forehead. Loose strands of it blew across her dark eyes and on her rounded cheeks. "I shall return. I will only wish to consult me in regard to matters such as a tenant usually desires to discuss with his landlord you may communicate with me. Otherwise, do not address me."
 The young man jumped to his feet.
 "Oh, I say, Miss Sheldon," pleaded, although cross just because I insist that I own this island. Won't you come out for a row with me? The water is fine and I'm awfully lonesome." Miss Sheldon looked from him to the river. The setting sun threw a golden light over the river and the trees. The steady, soft lapping of the water on the sand the occasional call of a bird, the splash of a fish were the only sounds on the island. She looked back at the young man. "I'll go," she agreed.

A week later they were sitting on the sand at the water's edge near the cabin.
 "Ethel," he said, "these have been glorious days. We came here, strangers to each other and now—" She shook her head slowly. There were tears in her eyes. "We quarrel all the time," she began.
 "Only on one subject," he interposed.
 "But we shall never agree on that one. I claim the island; so do you. I don't care for the property. But the serious fact is that we can not compromise. Neither will yield to the other. Just now the island is the cause of disagreement between us, later something else will be equally provocative of trouble."
 "I'll deal you the island and then we need never quarrel over it again."
 "It is not yours to give away. It is mine and I shall give it to you."
 "You can't. It is mine and I shall give it to you for a wedding present.
 We'll come here every summer after we are married."
 "We shall not be married. You may have the island. I shall give it to you.
 But a marriage between us is impossible. You are too obstinate, too unwilling to acknowledge your mistake."
 A moment later her cabin door slammed, but Bertram Hay was walking so rapidly toward his cabin that he did not hear it.

That night Ethel Sheldon was waking suddenly. Some one was shaking the door. She sat up and listened.
 The housekeeper slept soundly. The shaking continued. Heavy blows were struck on the door. There was a growling of men's voices. A man's head appeared at the window and then vanished. The attack on the door ceased. There were footsteps on the sand and then the rattling of oars and the splash of a boat.
 Ethel ran into the next room and shook the housekeeper into terrified wakefulness. Two frightened, hastily dressed women ran down the beach to the other cabin, half a mile away.

At the first call under his window Bertram staggered up and threw on his clothes.
 Far down the river they could hear the regular dip of oars. The boat was going toward the town two miles in the distance.
 Bertram rowed Ethel and the maid back to their cabin. "I shall sleep in the hammock on your porch the rest of the night," he announced.

Somebody's Baby

By LAWRENCE A. CLAY.

"You rest better if you know there is a protector on guard." The next morning a skiff landed before Ethel's cabin. A man wearing on his flannel shirt a well-patched star stepped from the boat.
 "I've brought you notice to move," he announced. "The owner of this island wants to move in and you young folks are to leave."
 "The owner?" The question came from two pairs of lips.
 "Mr. John Brown owns this island." He came here with some friends last night and found his cabin occupied.
 He banged on the door and nobody answered. One of the men looked through the window and saw in the moonlight a young lady looking scared to death. They all then left and rowed back to town. Mr. Brown sent me out this morning to tell you folks he'd like his property."
 "But it's his property," exclaimed two voices.
 "The officer of the law gottend."
 "There are lots of islands around here," he explained. "None of them are worth much, under water half the time, and people camp on 'em the summer and not particular about whose island they help themselves to.
 Why don't you folks camp on your own islands? You've each got one with two shacks on it. Miss Sheldon, your is a mile north of the town and Mr. Hay, yours is just beyond the next bend of the river." After the officer had gone they sat for some time in silence.

"It is not my island," said Ethel.
 "It is not my island and I am glad it is not my island, of our trouble, the ownership of the island, is gone—it never existed."
 "But there would be something else."
 "It would vanish as this has. Beside, you need me or you would not have run to me last night when you were frightened. You need a protector."
 "A landlord may go to a tenement for help." But the rest of the sentence was an unintelligible murmur against his coat.

$250,000 HOME FOR
JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR.

WH Adjoin That of His Father—John D., Jr., Pays $100 For It

John D. Rockefeller will build a home for his son on part of the which he has donated as a possible site for the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York.

Trustees of the church decided recently not to build a new edifice. Mr.
 Rockefeller had paid $250,000 for the two houses 7 and 9 West Fifty-third street and $250,000 for 10 West Fifty-fourth street. The properties are adjacent to the Rockefeller home on Fifty-fourth street.

The new home for John D., Jr., will be at 10 West Fifty-fourth street, covering a plot 30 by 100.5. Plans are being drawn for a structure to cost $250,- 000. The entire Rockefeller plot will be inclosed with a tall iron fence, and a small park will be laid out around the dwellings.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., according to a deed filed in the county clerk's office, received from his father for $100 "and other lawful considerations," the property at 10 West Fifty-fourth street. The only restrictions named in the deed are that the son is not to build within six feet of the easterly line as long as his father lives and owns the adjoining premises, and so long as his sister, Mrs. E. Parmelee Prentice, lives there no building shall be erected on that part lying south of the center line of the property.

IDEAL HOUR FOR BATHING.

Two Hours After Breakfast Says
English Medical Man.

Dr. Copeman, of Brighton, England, writing in the Practitioner, London, gives some advice on sea bathing.

"The best time to bathe is about two hours after breakfast—the period of greatest vital activity," says Dr. Cope-man. "The one time which must be avoided by all is after a full meal.
 During the process of digestion the vessels of the internal organs are already engorged with blood, and the shock of the cold water is apt to produce a very dangerous condition of congestion, the least of many penalties that may accrue being an acute attack of indigestion. With many keen bathers it is an article of faith to bathe before breakfast; but business men, after months of unrestful toil; those who are below par or who are getting on in years, should avoid taxing their system by bathing at such a time. Even the most robust would be wise to partake of a cup of hot milk before leaving the house."

Her Parting Curl.

"The most ticklish job I ever tackled," said the hair dresser, "was arranging a bride to be church and curling her hair in the carriage. The wedding took place in that hot spell in July."
 The happy bride had plenty of hair, but it was limp and stringy. I curled and waved her beautifully just before leaving home, but by the time she was ready to start her hair was a sight.
 "It's no use," she said. "I never can face people looking like this. There is only one thing to be done. You must take an alcohol lamp and curling tongs and come in the carriage with me, then you can put on the finishing touches just before we get to the church."
 "At the risk of blowing us all up with a spirit lamp that is what we did, and by means of that heroic expedient the bride reached the altar properly coiled."

Mr. Ashley

"I think I can get it there all right."
 "Sure. You are a young man of spirit. It has a nursing bottle here, and if it cries, you feed it." When the baby was missed by its mother and aunt, the train was under full headway. The railroad company doesn't stop and back up its trains for lost babies. The only way was to get off at the first station, seven miles out, and send a telegram to the depot master and follow it by the first train. Another telegram was sent to the father. Mother and aunt returned to the city and rushed up and down the big depot. They found plenty of babies, but not the baby wanted. After twenty minutes of the greatest anxiety, and after Miss Ethel had pointed out the spot ten times over where she had laid the infant down, an old man who explained that he was going to Montana whenever his train came along, added:
 "Say, I saw a young fellow steal that kid! Yes, sir, he looked all around to see if anybody was watching, and then smiled and clucked at her and took her up and walked out to a train. I'd have tackled him only I'm an old man and have a bad liver.
 The doctor told me not to get excited. Yes, sir, he stole that baby as sure as shooting, and he's a hundred miles away by this time. There was weeping and wailing and telegraphing to conductors. One of the latter answered:
 "Young man with a baby in his arms got off at Blankville. Had my suspicions."
 The trail led to Blankville. Irony of Fate! Young man steals a baby in Philadelphia and gets off the train where its father and mother live. A telegram to the police at Blankville was sent.

"Arrest young man who got off 5 o'clock train with a girl baby. Case of kidnapping."
 And there being no cause for the police to blunder and arrest an old woman leading a goat, the nabber Mr. Paul Ashley as he sat in the depot playing with the stolen child and asking everybody if they could identify it. Father, mother and Aunt Ethel arrived and rushed and precipitated themselves, and that sweetest, nicest, darriest little bit of humanity actually kicked and fought and cried when torn from the arms of its bold-faced abductor.

The police had no case. The only case there appeared to be, after explanations had been made, was between Miss Ethel and Mr. Ashley. It hasn't been fully concluded yet, but it has been settled that Paris will be one of the continental cities visited during the coming summer.

Zam-Buk Cures Sunburn.

Neglect of a sunburn on face, arm or neck often leads to the after growth of skin which is freckled or coarse; and this is particularly distressing to ladies. Timely application of Zam-Buk and regular use of Zam-Buk Soap will prevent this. Zam-Buk is a herbal balm, which soothes and cools the burned skin, and assists nature to relate the damaged tissue with soft, velvety skin. Zam-Buk Soap is specially made for tender skins.

Zam-Buk is also good for stings, scratches, heat sores, blisters on hands or feet, and all skin injuries. Applied to these it quickly stops the smarting, and ensures quick healing. As it is free from animal fat, and mineral coloring matter, it is particularly suited to the delicate skin of babies suffering from heat rashes, chafed places, etc.
 Sold everywhere by druggists and store-keepers. Zam-Buk 50c. box. Zam-Buk Soap 25c. tablet, or box of 3 for 70c.
