CRUISING AROUND THE WORLD Picturesque Lands and People on the Great Belt Line by William G. Frizell.

All on board have some personal friends among the welcoming American cities at Manila. As we came near the harbor a fleet of small boats with bands and banners and megaphones met us. We passed near Cavite, the naval station, where Berry's men, before breakfast, destroyed the Spanish fleet and started us on the greatest scientific and philanthropic work in the world's history. Manila is in contrast to the cities of Japan and China. Three centuries of Spanish rule give to it a European Spanish appearance, which our country has added a sort of American border. We are building wide avenues, airy hospitals, five government buildings and pleasant homes around the old walled Spanish city. Altogether Manila is a very attractive city. It seems too expensive to keep, yet too valuable to give away. The principal drive is the Luneta, with the parade ground or park adjoining. Here comes all Manila in the cool of the evening to promenade or drive and to listen to the large and very fine constabulary band. Among the principal objects of interest are several old Catholic churches and Pili prison. The cathedral and the neighboring churches are very striking. Near the cathedral is the large palace of the archbishop. The archbishop is Bishop Harty, formerly of St. Louis, who succeeded the Spaniard who resigned when American took possession of the island. Pili prison is one of the best reformatory trade schools in the world. It has a daily prison population of 2,500, being more than that of any other American prison. The manner of treatment of the prisoners in the shops is similar to that accorded workmen in any large factory. Their treatment outside of work hours is similar to that of soldiers in a barracks, with the absence of lockstep and corporal punishment; the dormitory system in place of cells; the semi-military training; the daily recreation after working hours, with daily band concert, stereopticon lecture, and the like; day and night schools, and above all, the teaching by trade instructors of various useful trades. I was a member of the Ohio legislative penitentiary commission and visited most of the great prisons and penitentiaries in the United States, and nowhere are such advanced prison methods practised as here. In order to see a little of the natives of the country several of us went out in automobiles over an excellent road, some ten miles, to the village of Parauaki. This is an embroidery making community. The houses are perched upon stilts about six feet high. To get in you have to climb a frail bamboo ladder. Here I found two small rooms, with matting sides, a floor of bamboo slats, set about an

THE DOMINION NAVIES. How Empire is Working Out Its Salvation. The Spectator, London. The naval defence scheme, adopted by the imperial conference, was made known in Canada before it was communicated to the British or Australian parliaments. Because Sir Wilfrid Laurier was anxious to put the Canadian people in possession of it before the dissolution, it seems to us to meet the numerous difficulties of building up a homogeneous navy out of self-governing local navies with admirable good sense. Small difficulties will no doubt arise, but the great obvious difficulties are disposed of by this scheme, which we do not hesitate to say is great in its simplicity. It is not wonderful and encouraging that such a scheme should have emerged so soon. It seems only the other day that there was an apparently irreconcilable conflict between the requirements of the dominions, and the ideals of the dominions, but the exchange of opinions has composed the differences, and we have before us a marvellous good sense. Small difficulties will no doubt arise, but the great obvious difficulties are disposed of by this scheme, which we do not hesitate to say is great in its simplicity.

navies to be under control of the admiralty both in peace and war. That was a very natural view for the admiralty to take. Probably if any one of us were made responsible for the conduct of a naval war he would prefer at first sight to have the training of all the crews under his own supervision. But no further thoughts the balance of advantage is seen to be enormously on the side of such a scheme as has been adopted. If the dominions surrender the right to manage their own navies, or if they only paid a money contribution to the imperial navy they would have neither a very great interest nor a very great sense of responsibility in the business. Great Britain may count on the maximum of enthusiasm and the maximum of expenditure under the present scheme. But a difference is to be noted in the conditions under which Canada and Australia are to put their navies at the disposal of the admiralty for war. Canada has undertaken to do so only if the Canadian government approves of the war. Australia has undertaken to do so, not exactly automatically, but by resolution of the government, to which no reservation has been attached in advance. In practice the difference will amount to little or nothing. Great Britain is never likely to enter upon a war unless it is forced upon her, and Canadian opinion would be so strongly in favor of helping Great Britain in anything but a manifestly unjust war that it would be impossible for the Canadian government to hold out. There is another consideration which we have already mentioned. No enemy at war with us would allow Canada to remain neutral. As an essential part of the British empire she would be exposed to attack if Great Britain were at war. If, therefore, she were compelled, as she would be, to defend herself, it would be better that she should take measures for her defence as in the opinion of naval experts gave her the best chance of defending herself successfully. We regard the whole scheme as one of the most inspiring signs of our day, for it is above all a beautiful illustration of how the empire works out its salvation, responding earnestly and generously in particular needs as they arise, in spite of all the gloomy vaticinations of those who tell us that nothing is being done.

MANUFACTURERS' VIEWS ARE CHANGED. Ex-Mid. Wright of Hamilton Speaks on Sentiment Towards Reciprocity. Hamilton, Aug. 21.—The firm of E. T. Wright & Co. is not only one of the oldest but one of the largest in this city. Its series of factories occupy nearly a square block, and its payroll contains 300 names. Your correspondent has the word of ex-Mid. H. G. Wright, president and manager of the company, that its big and increasing business has been built up under and through the wise administration of the Laurier government. Mr. Wright is an ardent supporter of the reciprocity agreement, and cannot see why every manufacturer in Canada does not support it. He believes it will benefit his business because it will benefit the farmer, who is at the bottom of the country's prosperity, and because it will in no way interfere with present conditions in the Canadian manufacturing world. "I think the Laurier government has acted wisely and well in making such an agreement regarding natural farm products, without having done anything that will injure the manufacturer," said Mr. Wright, when asked what he thought of the reciprocity agreement. "Not all manufacturers are opposed to the agreement," he continued, "and I do not see why they are. Some claim that it is the end of the wedge that will open up a way to reciprocity in manufactured goods. Such a thing would be impossible for many years to come. The government must have revenue to carry on the business of the country, and a large part of this revenue must be raised in this way. But, apart from this, I have every confidence that the government will carry out the agreement in the best interests of all the people."

as large a majority as it has in the last parliament, and I hope to see Hamilton represented by members who will be favorable to the reciprocity agreement. Personally, I believe that every government candidate between the Niagara and Detroit rivers will be returned," concluded Mr. Wright.

Daring Horse Thief. Cornwall, Aug. 22.—A daring horse thief carried off a team of horses from the barns of P. N. Tait, Mills, on Friday morning. He was seen by a neighbor riding one of the animals and leading the other and going west. It is thought that the animals were ferried across the river to American soil, but so far they have not been recovered. Fred Ledger, committed for trial on a charge of selling obscene literature, was before Judge McDonald on Saturday and acquitted.
