GRAPHIC NARRATIVE

LONDON LADY'S TALE OF MEXICAN REVOLUTION INCIDENT. Mrs. Carr-Harris in the Thick of It—Government Troops Desert Canea and Insurrectos Take Possession—Good Order and Behavior of the Insurrectos. (Continued from Wednesday.) The hero of the rebel forces in this district is Juan Cabral. His home is here in town, across the road from us, indeed. It was a proud day for his people, for his father especially. Some time ago—several months—he had been forced to leave town on account of his rebel tendencies, and now he was coming home at the head of hundreds of men. Mr. Y—told us that we should be wise in staying at his house, as something might happen quickly; the people were so excited, everything simply buzzed. "Besides," he said, "it's a great shame to break up the party. However, at three o'clock, we did not go to bed, but started for the Mesa and home. Such crowds were hurrying towards the railway station, we wandered off in that direction, but reached there just too late to see the federalists. All this time the rebels were coming nearer and nearer, and away out on the road we saw the long black line moving slowly toward town, while innumerable little black specks could be seen bobbing along from town towards the Mesa. The long train of box cars moved out—the last of the federalists. When the troops were formed up, they started into a procession to go out to meet the "insurrectos. Everywhere could be heard "Viva Madero!" "Viva Juan Cabral! Viva!" A band headed the procession, carriages joined in, and red and green, the Mexican colors, all crowding along in wide dusty roads. Everywhere were Americans with kodaks. We did not follow quite to the meeting place of the two bands but waited a little distance from the end to see the whole long array march past. First came those who had gone out from town among them a decorated carriage with Juan Cabral's father and other members of the family. The famous leader of the insurrectos is just twenty-six years of age, and has shown great skill in carrying on his campaign, as well as much consideration for his followers. And now, amid wild cheers from the crowds on both sides of the line of march, one long succession of deep "Vivas!" slowly came the whole long army of insurrectos, all mounted and heavily armed. Their leaders had been decorated by admiring friends with huge wreaths and festoons of foliage, the redoubtable Cabral almost weighed down with his share of the laurels. It made one feel queer to think what these men had seen—the fighting and pillaging and bloodshed generally, with all the hardships they had been forced to undergo. A dark, stern, almost forbidding-looking man they were, with their huge cartridge belts—some with three to their credit—and their threatening-looking rifles. They surely meant business. They rode slowly along the Plaza, or park, and there were speeches and music and a general celebration. Soon Cabral and his supporters were at work assigning men to the different municipal positions, and in an astonishing short time the town was pacified. Mr. Y—telephoned us that night to say that in a conversation with Juan Cabral, the latter said that owing to the fact that our house was in one with that of the former mayor (the whole building being company property), he was sending a guard to see that no enterprising Mexican should attempt to work of his superfluous energy by shooting at the windows or by any other expressions of ill-will toward its late tenant. Everyone has been filled with wonder and admiration, since the arrival of the insurrectos, for there has been such splendid discipline among them from the very moment of their appearance in camp. Juan Cabral ordered all saloons closed, and closed they have been ever since. The American residents say that no army of American soldiers turned loose in town after months and months of hard riding among the hills, remote from any semblance of town life, would have behaved so well, and I am quite certain that Tommy Atkins, even on his best behaviour, could not have done better. Soon after the insurrectos arrived there was another excitement—so many things seemed to be happening at once that one more counted for very little by that time. On the Mesa, the level residential district of the town, is the municipal building, the Palacio, and the rumor spread like wildfire that the federalists had left hundreds of pounds of dynamite here, with wires attached to a clock timed to go off at nine o'clock. More dynamite prepared with similar thoughtfulness was supposed to be stowed away at the barracks vacated by the federal soldiers that afternoon. It has been impossible to find out whether or not this was true, but it was so strongly believed at the time that the rebels camped in a large field across from Col. Green's house rather than take any chances at the barracks. One man, an electrician, cut the wires attached to the clock (at least he is credited with the statement that he did), thereby breaking the current of the explosion, but he has since been mysteriously dismissed from the company for being rather too greatly blessed with conversational powers, and whether or not these were aided by a powerful imagination is not known. Of course, it was just as exciting as if the dynamite were really there—the preliminaries, I mean—for we all supposed that such was the case and some were badly frightened. (To be continued.)

READY TO BUY HAY. Chicago Firm in Communication: With J. H. Fairbank. London, Ont., Aug. 24.—The following letters were sent by a Chicago commission house to J. H. Fairbank, ex-M.P., of Petrolia, whose farms are the largest in Lambton county: "Dear Sir,—We are advised by the railroad company that you are in the hay business, and would like to name us prior on any part of ten cars, each No. 1 timothy, No. 2 timothy and No. 1 clover mixed hay, delivered Chicago, shipment in sixty days, you to ship it in bond, you to take care of the duty. As soon as the reciprocity bill goes into effect we believe we can do considerable business in your territory on hay, and would like to get started with you at once. (Signed) Bridge & Leonard, commission merchants." Second letter:—"Dear Sir,—Possibly we will do business with you in any event, but certainly will if the reciprocity bill passes your parliament. We are surprised to hear that there is any opposition to it in Canada. (Signed) Bridge & Leonard."

Because it heals—sores, cures skin diseases, and does what is claimed for it. Why not let it heal your sore? Remember that Zam-Buk is altogether different to the ordinary ointments. Most of these consist of animal fats; Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal fat, or any mineral matter. It is absolutely herbal. It is suitable alike for recent injuries and diseases, and chronic sores, ulcers, etc. Test how different and superior Zam-Buk really is. All druggists and stores at 50c. box. Use also Zam-Buk Soap. Best for baby's bath. 25c. tablet.

Charlotte Man Killed by Auto. Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 21.—Colliding with an auto driven by J. Clark, of Hamsville, N.Y., George B. McKenzie, Charlotte, who was riding a motor cycle at a rapid rate of speed, was instantly killed on the Ridge road. From those who witnessed the collision it appears that McKenzie did not see the auto until it was too late to turn aside.

A Question of Turkeys. A Vermont farmer, in Montreal, said that he yearly raised from 300 to 400 turkeys, and sold them to one of the large New York hotels. York hotels. The price he receives varies from $3.15 to $3.50 per bird. Do Canadian farmers want full access to the New York market? A few children's low shoes left, half price, Dutton's, 267 Princess Street.

ANSWERING QUESTION.

The Legal Editor of Mail and Empire Talks. H. E. B., Portsmouth.—Q.—Can the directors of a proposed sanitarium purchase property and erect buildings, and carry on treatment of tuberculosis within the limits of a village, without obtaining the permission of the village council? A.—Section 112 of the Public Health Act says:—"Where the order of any local board of health, or health officer, involves the expenditure of $100, the party against whom the order is made, may, within four days, appeal therefrom to the county judge, who shall have full authority to vary or rescind the order." But section 56 of the same act says:—"The members of a local district board of health shall be called 'health officers,' and shall have the powers and duties assigned to them by this act, and any two of them acting in the execution of such regulations may exercise the powers and authorities conferred by the sections 77 and 78 of this act." The health officers to enter in, and upon any house or premises for the purpose of making any enquiry and examination with respect to the state of health of any person therein; and they may also, upon report of a medical health practitioner cause any person found in such premises affected with a dangerous, contagious or infectious disease, to be removed to some hospital or other place. Section 85 says:—"The health officers may isolate any person having a small-pox, or any other disease dangerous to the public health; householders have a right to make a complaint where a diseased person is living in their neighborhood." It seems to me that the numerous provisions of the Public Health Act give ample authority to public health officers to make effective provisions in any manner they think proper for the public safety, by removing infected persons to separate houses, or by otherwise isolating them, if it can be done, and all this expense must be charged upon the municipality. The charge is first made against the estate of the person, who or whose children or relatives are removed to the isolation hospital. If he is not able to pay, the village or township council must pay. The powers of boards of public health are entirely separate from and independent of the municipal councils. See R.S.O., chapter 248.

THE TORONTO NEWS. Still Another Conservative Witness For Reciprocity. On January 27th, 1911, the day after the announcement of the reciprocity agreement, the Toronto News made an editorial comment upon it which reads oddly now, in view of the present irreconcilable attitude of this paper towards the measure. The News on that occasion said:—"It amounts practically to free trade in natural products between Canada and the United States. It means a second market for Canadian farmers. It means that the prices of Canadian products will be determined by the American market. It means if expectations are realized that Canadian farmers at certain seasons will receive better prices for at least a part of what they produce. It is not so certain that there will be any such average increase in agricultural prices as has been predicted, but that access to the American market for some of our products will mean higher prices for the producers is a reasonable expectation. It is important to face the facts fairly and to admit the full force of the arguments by which many farmers are influenced."

"The west will welcome a free American market for wheat and oats. Undoubtedly the farmers of Ontario desire the removal of American customs duties on live stock, dairy products, vegetables, eggs and other articles covered by the agreement. Quebec will be interested in a free market for hay, vegetables and dairy products. Free fish will be a strong attraction to the maritime provinces. Unquestionably, therefore, the arrangement will command strong support from Canadian producers, and as has been said nothing else could have been expected. Under all the circumstances we (the News) recognize that Washington has offered terms which it is difficult for Canada to reject."

"GIRL IN CASE" FEARS BEATTIE. Beulah Binford Declares She Can Never Be His Friend Again. Richmond, Va., Aug. 24.—If Henry Clay Beattie, jr., is acquitted of the charge of wife murder, there will be no further friendship between him and Beulah Binford, the girl for whose love the prosecution charges that the crime was committed. Sitting in her cell on the eve of the resumption of the case, she said she was afraid of Beattie and could never be his friend again. "I hope that Henry is innocent," said the girl. "Once I would have gone through life at his word, but now I could be afraid to go on the street with him. If he comes clear of the murder charge I hope never to see him again. Most of all I want to get away from Richmond, where I know people will follow me on the streets. I know absolutely nothing about the murder; I do not even recall that Henry ever mentioned his wife's name to me."

Anyway the tire of a lazy man isn't easily punctured. A kick against fate is often but an apology for laziness. "Trouble's shadow is frequently blacker than the trouble itself. The ordinary man is seldom caught doing anything extraordinary."
