

TIED TO A COW

Boy, Aged Seven, Killed Near Pulaski, N.Y.

DRAGGED OVER FIELD

HE WAS DEAD WHEN PARENTS ARRIVED.

Several Playmates See Fatal Ride of Child—Tumbles Off Back of Cow—Aid Too Late.

Pulaski, N.Y., Aug. 25.—Falling from a cow to which he had been tied by his playmates, Lewis Burns, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Burns, was dragged by the frightened animal found a field on the farm of Frederick Jones, two miles from this village, Wednesday, and when his parents reached him he was dead.

In the early part of the afternoon the children had gone into the pasture to take turns riding on a pet cow. It was a short time before frequently enjoyed during the summer. The cow was gentle and had always submitted to the fun of the children. Several of the youngsters, shooting in glee, had had rides across the field. Lewis then wanted to get on the cow's back. He was lifted up and a rope was tied about his waist while the animal was fastened to the cow's horns.

Laughing merrily and followed by some of the children, he started off. But the cow had not gone far when the boy fell off. This frightened the cow and it started on a wild run, dragging the little boy along the ground. The child's screams only increased the speed of the animal.

Crying at the top of their voices the children ran to the farm house for help. The parents of the victim, together with several members of the family, ran back to the field. When they reached there the cow, exhausted by its run, had stopped. The child was cut loose and carried to the house.

The family did not believe the boy had been killed. They thought that he had been knocked unconscious and called a physician. His services were not needed.

WOMEN SLAY BY BREAD

Homeswives Who Do Their Own Baking Are Murderers.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 25.—That the modern housewife who attempts to bake her own bread produces a soggy article and is committing murder in allowing it to be eaten was the statement of Paul Schulze, of Chicago, president of the National Association of Master Bakers, at the second day's session of the annual convention of that body. He told of a Chicago woman who built up a business selling "health bread," her own product.

"I cut into a loaf of it," said Mr. Schulze. "I saw the cent's worth of baked dough. I have been wondering since what effect that woman's bread had on the death roll of Chicago. She was unquestionably committing murder."

TO BE LARGER

The Majority for Him Says Sir Wilfrid

IN THE ENEMY'S CAMP

PRIME MINISTER IS CONFIDENT AS TO RESULTS.

The Attitude of the Nationalists on the Naval Issue is Dealt With—The Conscription Cry Has No Foundation Whatever.

St. Jerome, Que., Aug. 25.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Mr. Lemieux invaded the enemy's country yesterday afternoon and addressed a meeting in St. Jerome, a Terrebonne riding represented in the last parliament by Bruno Nantel, Terrebonne county was not kindly to the liberals in 1908, but if the meeting is an index Sept. 21st will see a triumph for the prime minister and his candidate, Dr. Desjardins. A large crowd listened attentively to the speakers. Sir Wilfrid was as young and vigorous looking as ever, and made a ringing speech. Respectively and the navy were again the topics.

Sir Wilfrid said the policy the liberals were advocating was one which conservatives had always endorsed. The Tories, whom he could tell at sight, must admit that never had the country enjoyed such prosperity. This fact was so true that they themselves cried out against any change in policy. Perfection was not achieved in this world, not even by the liberal party, and he reminded his hearers the liberals aimed at doing still better. The great resources of Canada necessitated the opening up of new markets.

"Let me remind the conservatives," he said, "that Sir John Macdonald, for twenty-five years leader, made efforts to secure reciprocity. Sir George Cartier seconded the efforts of Sir John Macdonald. A man whose name is not forgotten in Terrebonne, Adolphe Chapleau, your former deputy, also favored it. He was not of my school, but was a personal friend, and the question on which we agreed was reciprocity. The moment the people entrusted the liberals with the reins of office in 1896 I sent two of my colleagues to Washington. Sir Richard Cartwright and Sir Louis Davies, in an endeavor to secure reciprocity. Our efforts were not successful. Then we told the United States in effect, we need your markets, but if you will not trade with us we are men and can trade with you, but the day will come when you will come to Ottawa seeking for this. In 1910 President Taft sent two commissioners to negotiate an agreement. What had changed? Canada had grown. Its name was in every mouth. It was a nation with which the United States government had to count. Our relations with them should be as friendly as possible, and when the United States recognized their fault should we neglect their advances? It would be a crime against civilization to do so."

After dealing with conservative opposition to the agreement Sir Wilfrid alluded to the nationalists.

"What has become of the conservative party?" he asked. "Chapleau would not be among the Castors of today." He criticized the nationalist campaign, and, proceeding, said: "I have had more honors than I sought and more than I have desired. The king or the governor-general cannot offer me an honor comparable to that of being the prime minister of Canada."

Speaking of the cry of conscription in connection with the naval law, he said: "Do you believe that after fifteen years without swerving from my principles I would sully my reputation by inserting a thing like that in the navy law?"

Canada, as a nation, he affirmed, must assume national responsibilities. The only difference between the naval force and the land force was that the latter wore red coats, the former dressed in blue. "I am in favor of the maintenance of the naval supremacy of Britain," he said, "because under the protection of the British flag we are the most free of any country in the world."

He asked his hearers whether they approved of a navy controlled in Canada or a contribution of $25,000,000 to Britain.

"My policy to-day," he concluded, "is that of Sir John Macdonald, Cartier and Chapleau. Believe me, we will have a greater majority this election than ever, all the signs point to it. I feel that justice and truth will triumph again."

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux alluded to the works achieved by the liberal administration.
