ANOTHER BODY FOUND.

Remains of Miss Haggerty Picked Up Thursday Evening. The body of Miss Haggerty, Wolfe Island, one of the victims of the recent disaster when the coal freighter Hero sank the tug Chieftain, was found Thursday evening, about nine o'clock. Word was sent to the Calvin company of the find. The supposition that the girl was killed in her bunk, and not drowned, was true, as marks on the body indicated that she met her death as the result of the crash. The body was found floating some distance farther down the river from the scene of the tragedy and was picked up by a small boat. It is quite likely that the body will be brought to the city to-day.

LOST A WEDDING RING.

Lady Offered Reward for Return of It. Quite a little bit of excitement was produced in Portsmouth, Wednesday evening, among the youngsters by the offer of a reward for the finding of a wedding ring, which slipped off the finger of a young married lady. She and her husband were driving through Portsmouth in a runabout and when she went to raise her hand to her hat the ring slipped off. The young couple searched for a long time, but could not find it and the youngsters who quickly gathered were told of a reward for the finding of it. The result was they procured lanterns and searched until late at night and have been looking for it ever since.

WHILE PARTLY CLAD

MAN WENT TO SLEEP ON THE STREET CORNER.

Mishap of Sailor Who Indulged Too Freely on Thursday—Gathered in by Police at Early Hour—Old Man Without a Home Sent to Jail.

William Summerfield is a deck hand on board the steamer Turret Cape, which unloaded a cargo of grain at Richardson's elevator on Thursday. William started in to "do up" the town, and like a good many more, fell into the hands of the police. It was just 2 a.m. when Police Constable "Harry" Filson, when on his rounds, found Summerfield. He was only partly dressed, and was sound asleep, lying near the corner of Wellington and Johnson streets. He aroused Summerfield from his slumbers, and took him to the police station. Summerfield had no idea where his clothes could be found, and they were not located until three hours later, when Constable Filson found them at the rear of St. George's cathedral. Summerfield was under the impression that he was on board ship, partly undressed and then "turned in," as he would have termed it on board. However, he picked a poor bed, when he took the street corner.

When arraigned in the police court, he told Mayor Graham that he had a steady job on the Turret Cape, and asked if he could be allowed to go. It was found, however, that his boat had cleared for Belleville, to load cement, for Fort William. Summerfield explained that he would be able to catch his boat at Belleville, and as he had money to pay his railway fare there, one of the police constables was given instructions to buy him a ticket, and see him off on the noon train.

Poor old Thomas Rush, or "Tom," as he is better known, was up for vagrancy. Just a week ago, he was released from the county jail. He has been an inmate of one of the homes, but he has been so troublesome that the authorities have found it almost impossible to do anything with him. He has no home, and has spent many nights in the police station. The court decided that the best thing to do would be to give him another month in the jail, as he would be cared for there.

"This is the first time I was ever in a police court in my life, and I am very sorry." A short, stout man was the speaker, and as he leaned against the railing one could easily see that he felt his position keenly. He pleaded for a chance, and the court told him to go, giving him the usual warning not to come back again.

ESCAPED FROM DEATH

"JIMMY" ATKINS EVADED IT BY A HAIR'S BREATH

When Drum of Elevator in A. Chown's Warehouse Fell Five Stories—Accident Happened at Noon Friday.

"Jimmy" Atkins, an employee of A. Chown & Co., and a son of Alexander Atkins, Portsmouth, chief guard in the penitentiary, had a miraculous escape from instant death a few minutes before twelve o'clock Friday, when the elevator collapsed and almost fell five stories.

Atkins, and a companion, were taking some freight from the third flat, to the ground floor on the elevator. The brake had not been working well for a day or so and when the young fellow, operating the elevator, saw it was descending too fast he grabbed what he thought was the brake rope to check the speed. In his excitement he got hold of the rope to increase the speed and the elevator shot downward at an alarming rate. The operator saw he could do nothing and jumped when the ground floor was reached. Atkins stayed on the elevator thinking that it would go through to the basement and stop. As the elevator struck the bottom with a thump he jumped for the floor at the same time looking up the shaft. He saw the drum on which the steel cable is wound, tottering and a quarter of a minute later it crashed down the shaft. It struck the third flat and was diverted from its course. This probably saved Atkins's life as it landed in the opposite corner to where it had started for. He was standing in the farthest corner of the elevator and it took him some time to get over the fright. As it was he had his leg injured by a box falling on it.

When the drum hit the floor of the elevator it smashed into a hundred pieces. It weighed considerably and had it struck Atkins it would have killed him instantly. His brother who witnessed the flight grabbed the iron rope as the elevator was descending in an endeavor to stop its mad progress and had the palm of his hand burned.

THIEF ENTERED FACTORY

And Made Off With About $17 From the Safe.

A sneak thief secured entrance to Crawford's broom factory during Thursday night, and this morning it was discovered that about $17 had been taken from the safe. It is believed that the thief secured an entrance to the office by climbing into a window from the roof, then making his way to the office, where after making an inspection, found the key to the safe, located the money and made off. In order to get into the office, the thief had to go to the trouble of taking a hinge off the door, so that he could get in.
