Prescott found his suit pleasant and ridiculously smooth. He bad always thought of courtship as a stormy passage from vagabondage to sponsibility, but lone Ward did not impress one as a responsibility. If she gave little she demanded less. There were no harrowing periods of estrangement, no disconcerting scenes of reconciliation. It was ideally calm and correct and confident.

> Apart from the necessity of protection to human life, the forests of the north are well worth preserving for their own sakes. Until a few years ago it was popularly supposed that our timber was almost as inexhaustible as our supply of fresh water, and even yet the official estimates of the remaining timber convey this impression to anyone who is not a lumberman. We have standing in Canada something less than 2,000 billion feet of timber, including the very low grades. It seems a lot, but it is not much more than balf the estimated amount at one time. What we have cut and used amounts lost by fire. In our greatest lumbering region, the Ottawa valley, it has them the support of the people, for without it Legislatures will not vote the generous sums necessary for carrying on the work. It also points out that reforestration has its limits. and that it cannot undo the work of a disastrous fire. Not only are the standing trees destroyed, but often the soil is rendered permanently unfit for growing another forest . This is because the humus in the ground is consumed. In cases where the soil is not spoiled for producing a second growth it is generally found that the forest succeeding a burned pine or spruce district is made up of inferjor varieties of trees, on account of the fact that aspen, poplar, birch and jack pine produce more seeds than white pine and spruce and scatter them over a wider area. The effect of forests upon rainfall and climate generally is pretty well understood. It has been discussed previously and need not be pointed out again. The fact to bear in mind is that wisdom twenty years from now will not correct any neglect ch the forests to-day; and that there is considerable neglect is indicated by the following passage from the report of the Department of the Interior: "Of all the civilized nations in the northern hemisphere. Canada is do-ing the least to treat the public lands as a permanent asset." When it. comes to be a question of the lives of citizens, as in Porcupine, Canada is not likely to remain indifferent .-
