MANY YANKEE COUPLES HAVE BEEN MARRIED IN KINGSTON DURING THE PAST YEAR. Come Here From American Cities to Have the Knot Tied—Do it to Escape Their Friends' Curiosity. It may not be generally known that a great many young couples come over to Kingston from American towns and cities to be made one, but it is a fact as stated by an issuer of marriage licenses in the city. A couple were over from Watertown, Monday afternoon to "get spoiled" and this is but another instance to the already long list of American marriages which have been solemnized here during the past few years. What is the reason for the couples taking themselves quietly away from their home towns for the most important event in their lives? One would naturally think they would rather have the ceremony performed in their home towns. An issuer of marriage licenses in the city told the Whig the reason. He said in the past few years people have gone to such extremes when their friends are married, and nothing too ridiculous or embarrassing to the newly wedded pair escapes their attention. When the young couple are ready to depart on their wedding journey, they find their suit cases and trunks labelled with all kinds of fool messages and at the railway station they are made sport of by all their acquaintances. In place of being the happiest moments of their lives, the wedding and leave-taking of their friends has become a dread and they take this way to escape all the fuss and curiosity. They slip away quietly away to a town where they are not known and have the knot tied. This charivari business has had fatal endings more than once, and a Kingston issuer of the necessary licenses says they do the right thing in thus escaping all the unnecessary fuss. It means much to the ministers of the city also, in the way of fees, to have the marriages solemnized here. A MARKET SUGGESTION. To Keep Market Gardeners on the Market Square. "That scheme advocated to have all the market gardeners remain on the market square is a good one," remarked a prominent citizen to the Whig yesterday afternoon. While the new pavement is being put down the gardeners are using the market square entirely as they cannot get on King street and a great many citizens have stated that it would be a good idea now that there is to be a new pavement on King street, that the gardeners keep on the square now. Of course this is providing that there is sufficient room on the square and so far there appears to have been ample room for every one. If this were carried out King street would have a far better appearance. Several citizens have spoken to the Whig stating that the idea would be a good one. "Buy shoulder braces" at Gibson's. HELD UP A TRAIN. In Order to Kiss Her Friends Good-bye. She was a faintly lithe miss, with pretty blue eyes, and very attractive. She walked across the platform at the Kingston & Pembroke railway station, Tuesday afternoon, just as the express was pulling out for Sharbot Lake. Had she not stopped to kiss a couple of friends good-bye she would have been able to catch the train, but, no, sir, she would not think of leaving without those kisses, and she got them. After she had said her last good-bye she found that the train was making great speed out of the station, and that it would be dangerous for her to try and get on the train. With suit case in one hand she made an attempt as if to board the train but some of the train men stopped her, and then had the engineer stop the train. The conductor, who was on the rear coach, jumped off, threw the girl's suit case on the train and then assisted the dainty miss on board. The incident caused some people on the platform to remark that some people were sure to be late for a train, no matter what time it went out. And this little incident also showed that some people will say good-bye and do their kissing at the station, no matter if they miss the train or not.
