END STOMACH MISERY.

Gas, Indigestion, Dyspepsia and All Stomach Distress Go in Five Minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia, or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapiesin. If your stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach. People with weak stomachs should take a little Diapiesin occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour rising, gas on stomach or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or sick stomach, and, besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms, resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach, and dyspepsia are generally relieved in five minutes after taking a little Diapiesin. Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pope's Diapiesin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. Freshen your mind and make you feel like life is worth living.

WHITE FELT HATS ARE PROMISED FOR FALL.

Milliners are positive that pure white hats are to be the thing for early fall days, following the Paris fancy along this line. The late spring. The pure white felts with fancy brims and smart feather trimmings are really very attractive, and on the young girls, at least, they should prove charming. But the older woman should beware of a white felt hat unless it has a dark underbrim facing, for somehow, even though white straw hats are becoming in summer time, the dead white felt shape is apt to be harsh and trying with dark tailored wear in cooler weather.

REFLECTION UPON SIR JOHN.

The Evidence is Strong That He Tried It.

The argument is being advanced that reciprocity in natural products and protection in manufactured goods can not go hand-in-hand. Such a claim is a grave reflection upon the sagacity of Sir John A. Macdonald. The national policy, framed by that statesman in 1879—the essence of protection—embodied the reciprocity agreement of that day, almost fifty years ago. The following was his standing offer to the United States: "Any or all of the following articles, that is to say, animals of all kinds, green fruit, hay, straw, bran, seeds of all kinds, vegetables, including potatoes and other roots, plants, trees, and shrubs, coal and coke, salt, hops, wheat, peas, and beans, barley, rye, oats, Indian corn, buckwheat, and all other grains, flour of wheat, and oatmeal, and flour meal, of any other grain, butter, tallow, lard, and any other animal products, and lumber, may be imported into Canada free of duty or at a less rate of duty than is provided by this act upon proclamation of the governor-in-chief, which may be issued whenever it appears to his satisfaction that similar articles from Canada may be imported into the United States free of duty or at a rate of duty not exceeding that payable on the same under such proclamation when imported into Canada."

CASE IN A NUTSHELL.

I. Canada wants markets for her farm products, and the United States affords a most desirable one, as the evidence shows. II. All Canada's statesmen, irrespective of party, have, up to within the last few months, unanimously desired and sought for this reciprocity. III. The party out of power desire earnestly to get in; and one small chance only seems open to them, and that is to defeat, if possible, reciprocity.

The Mighty St. Lawrence.

Charles Frederick Carter in Travel. The St. Lawrence river is fourth among the rivers of the world in volume of flow. In reckoning its drainage area geographers count the great lakes, the largest bodies of fresh water in the world, as part of the river, yet the St. Lawrence is more salt than fresh. From Belle Isle, at the mouth of the river, to Duluth, at the head of Lake Superior, is 2,384 miles, every foot of the distance navigable by large vessels by using several stretches of canal. The headwaters of the St. Lawrence rise midway between the Atlantic and the Pacific, though the river proper extends only from the outlet of Lake Ontario to the sea, a distance of 1,177 miles. At its mouth it is seventy miles wide, while in two places below Quebec it is less than two miles wide. Nowhere below the rapids is the natural channel less than thirty feet deep, except over fifty miles of shoals, where dominating rocks have broken all the world's records in dredging channels deep enough to accommodate great ocean liners. The tourist-haunted Great Lakes is so shallow that the little steamboats that navigate it are obliged to run under low bells for a large part of the way between Mainz and Cologne. The St. Lawrence is navigable for ocean liners to Montreal, 385 miles from the gulf, the farthest inland of any seaport in the world.

Some people's idea of a helping hand is one that is lined with silver.

Anyway, when a girl has red hair it's a safe bet that it's natural.

LONDON MAYOR WELL PAID.

Salary Equal to That Received by United States President.

Denver Republican. No more violent contrast is to be found the world over than that existing between the various duties of the Lord Mayor of London. Theoretically, at least, the King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India cannot enter the city of London without his consent; yet he spends the best part of his mornings dispensing Solomon-like justice upon drunks who have broken the peace of the square mile of territory over which he rules. Of course, the mayor of an American city is its chief magistrate, but he seldom if ever is called upon to waste his valuable time over such humble duties. In London, the greatest city in the world, the Lord Mayor, unless called away on other duties, is to be found every morning after 11 o'clock in the little justice room of the great Mansion House, his official residence, dealing with the astonishingly small batch of lawbreakers taken in the net of the great police system that makes old city of London proper the safest and most law-abiding stretch of territory to be found in any large city in the world. The city is only a square mile in extent, the greater part of it being occupied by the great business houses that control the finances of the world. There is located the famous Bank of England, for instance, behind whose eight-foot walls repose at times a reserve fund of $100,000,000 in gold. Twenty-eight soldiers guard the treasure from within, but from without it is even better looked after. Scattered about the square mile of London, as thick as flies about a honey pot, are 1,500 blue-coated policemen. After eight or nine o'clock at night the silence of the streets in that part of Greater London is seldom broken except by the slow tread of the guardians of the law. Popularity, indeed, would be the lawyer who attempted to ply his trade in this well-guarded area.

It is not strange, then, that criminals give the city a wide berth and the majority of those who find themselves in the dock facing the Lord Mayor of London are men and women who have drunk "not wisely but too well." The present Lord Mayor is himself a strict teetotaler, but he is possessed of a delightful broadmindedness that views with sorrow rather than anger and severity the weaknesses of others. The city of London drunks never had a more lenient magistrate to pass judgment upon them, and dismissals with a kindly word of reproof and encouragement to better deeds far outnumber the fines.

The Lord Mayor of London receives as much as the president of the United States. His yearly pay envelope is twice as bulky as that of the Prime Minister of Great Britain. Those who have a leaning toward mathematics can figure out that he is the highest paid magistrate in the world, when one takes into consideration the proportion of his working day that is spent on the bench. It must not be thought, however, that he has nothing else to do, although it is perfectly true that his duties, taken as a whole, are largely ornamental. A recent lord mayor amused himself by keeping a record of his activities during the year he spent in the high office. He attended 136 public and semi-public dinners, eighty-five balls and receptions, 365 meetings and committees; he made 1,106 speeches, and he paid twenty state visits to churches. On occasions when this class of duties interfered with his more serious magisterial ones, a brother alderman takes his place on the bench.

Ambiguous.

Lippincott's. "Say, ma, does God see everything we do?" "Yes, my child." "Even the little things around the house, ma—in the hall and dining-room and all around?" "Yes, my child, everywhere." "After a moment's sympathetic contemplation in profound silence." "Go, I wouldn't like to be pa."

Those to whom goodness is a toil—some thing have to labor so hard at it that they haven't heart to discuss it.

HAIRDRESSERS

Recommend Parisian Sage. High Dr. McKinnon, of Brantford, Ont., says: "I consider Parisian Sage the best preparation for the cure of dandruff, falling hair, and itching scalp that I have ever used in my business. It is also a most excellent tonic and dressing, and has given perfect satisfaction to my customers. I highly recommend Parisian Sage." Parisian Sage is the only scientific hair restorer in the world, and it is fully guaranteed by the proprietors to do what they claim or refund your money, but you must see that you get the genuine, which is guaranteed by J.
