Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

THE ODD BARGAINS

PROPOSITIONS ENCOUNTERED AT CHURCH BAZAARS.

Kisses Put Up at Auction—How a Farmer Became the Owner of a Coffin by Attending a Church Fair.

London, Sept. 21.—The queerest bargains imaginable are to be "picked up" to use the proper bargain sale expression—at church and other bazaars, the novelty of the commodities being restricted only by the limits of the promoters' originality.

At a church bazaar in the neighborhood of Canterbury, held not long since, a unique, yet very appropriate, bargain was disposed of. This was nothing more or less than a wedding cake, in which was concealed a license entitling the winner to be married free of charge at the parish church any time within twelve months.

The cake was disposed of in slices at 6d. each, and the lucky purchaser of the slice containing the license took the document as well as the cake. As long as the slices held out the demand was brisk.

From wedding cake to kisses—perhaps from kisses to wedding cake—is the usual order—is not a far cry, and in more than a single instance a roaring trade in kisses has been done at a bazaar. At a function of this kind, held free of charge at the theatre, New York, the mother of a celebrated actress sold a kiss for fifty cents. A dapper young gallant who wanted to buy something odd dared her to the bargain, adding that if she set the fashion her heavy of charming assistance would capture a large sum of money for the fund.

"I'll do it," the lady, who is a matronly sort of woman, spiritedly replied, but it will cost you $2." She ultimately reduced the price to fifty cents, on the customer's assurance that that was all the change he had. The transaction was at once closed and the merry shoop went up as the goods changed hands—should we say lips?

Ten at thirty-six shillings a cup is a pretty bizarre price even at a bazaar, but this was the extravagant charge exacted at a theatrical charity bazaar held in the French capital last year. The lady would take nothing less, the other actresses who were the presiding goddesses of the function being equally unreasonably.

Another charming lady whose winking eyes had driven the caddled youth of Paris to despair must have emptied their pockets, too, on this occasion. Her wares were tiny boxes of face powder, about the size of a walnut, for which she insisted on receiving about £1 18s. each.

Still another actress, unalluringly described as "the ugliest in Paris," would accept nothing else than a bank note for a pound of candy, and another famous light of the stage disposed of lottery tickets at prices calculated to involve buyers in bankruptcy.

There were some very bizarre features in a bazaar held in connection with a Wesleyan church at Hamersmith. To begin with, all the fittings and decorations of the stalls were the work of the mere male, and the selling was exclusively in the hands of that sex.

Fancy draperies, upon which ladies dote, were conspicuous by their absence, and each stall was made to represent an ordinary shop front in miniature. The articles on sale were the very opposite character to those usually seen at bazaar's, being of a solid and really useful description. It included a realistic butcher's shop, where it was possible to purchase the family dinner. Nearly all the goods had been presented by local tradesmen out of their own stocks.

Several years ago a bazaar, promoted by the congregation of a certain Herefordshire church, had for its most extraordinary bargain a coffin that had been made by one of the church wardens. For such a gruesome spectacle it was a very well executed piece of work. A local farmer much admired it on this account, and though he did not expect it could be of service to him, for a good many years he bought it for a couple of sovereigns, and intends to be buried in it when he dies.

A DELOIRA TRAGEDY.

Bones of a Man Found by a Prospector.

Porcupine, Sept. 22.—J. Jones, a prospector, whose home is in Toronto, states that while prospecting in Delora on his way through the Jimmud claim he discovered the remains of a man, which, as nothing but the bones are left, is beyond recognition. He thinks the man was frozen to death. Asked if he thought the man might be a victim of the fire, he answered "no, that the remains did not look as if they had come through the fire, as the bones were not charred. The bones were moved apart by bears, and the head and one leg is missing. The bones have not been brought to town, but will be shortly.

A surface gold discovery has been made on the Shield-Dickson claims in Delora.

The cyclone swept the Alcantara Valley and did a million lire damage to the man groves.

DIED AT AMHERST ISLAND.

The Late John Henderson, Aged Eighty-one Years.

Stella, Sept. 21.—On the 6th of Sept. John Henderson, one of the oldest and most highly esteemed residents of Amherst Island, passed away at the ripe age of eighty-one years.

Sixty-eight years ago, then a boy of fourteen, Mr. Henderson came to the island with his parents from Ireland. In 1856 he married Miss Agnes Finnegan, daughter of Robert Finnegan, and settled on the well-known farm on the south shore, where he spent the rest of his days. Mrs. Henderson predeceased him in 1890, leaving four children—David, who died in early manhood, aged twenty-four; Robert, of Wolfe Island; Jane (Mrs. William Montgomery, of the North Shore); Mary (Mrs. Hugh Filson), on the homestead farm, with whom he resided until his death.

His last illness was brief and his sufferings often severe, but they were borne with Christian resignation and cheered with the assurance of faith.

The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on the 8th inst., from the residence of Hugh Filson, to the old Putland cemetery. The pall-bearers were his three nephews, H. Fleming, W. Brown, D. Finnegan, his son Robert, and his sons-in-law, Hugh Filson and William Montgomery. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. Parker, assisted by Rev. James Cumberland.

GOING TO LAW.

Old Wax and I lived side by side, and never had row, until one day he lammed the hide of my old brindle cow. He said she ate a suit of clothes that hung upon his line. And so I luffed him on the nose and he snaked me on mine. He opened our hedges, were out of debt, had money in the bank. That day he lammed my brindle pet and I gave him a spank. Until we stood around and cussed and wagged the fluent law. While, surcharged with deep disgust, we turned and went to law.

Oh, that was bum and beastly sport, our lawyers right and left. Conveyed the case from court to court, and taxed us right and left. Now at the poor-farm, Wax and I put in our fading years. I lean on him and heave a sigh, and he bursts into tears. Sometimes we ramble up the road where once we did our bit, a lawyer lives in my abode, another lives in his. Then to the poorhouse back we go, and seek our couch of straw. And think of joys we used to know before we went to law.

SCIENCE SCORES AGAIN. A Preparation That Will Destroy the Dandruff Germ Discovered.

Finally the scientific student has discovered a certain remedy for dandruff. When it first became known that dandruff is the result of a germ or parasite that digs into the scalp and saps the vitality of hair at the root, causing falling hair and baldness biologists set to work to discover some preparation that will kill the germ. After a year's labor in one laboratory, the dandruff germ-destroyer was discovered; and it is now embodied in Nendor's Herpicide. It prevents baldness, stops falling hair and speedily radiates dandruff. "Destroy the cause on remove the effect."
