The Government is Prepared to Extend Campaign to England, Scotland and Wales.

London, Sept. 27 .- British politicians are taking a brief rest-only a brief one-after one of the hardest sessions of parliament, in the history of the country, in preparation for an ever harder campaign.

The end of September will see the opening of the home rule campaign. Both sides have already organized, and from one end of the country to the other meetings will be held in support of and in opposition to the government's plans.
