IS SHE A PRISONER? A CLEVER MAN'S FALL

THE SEARCH CONTINUED FOR MISS VIOLET SMITH.

An Expedition of Row Boats and Launches is Searching Every Island in the Vicinity of Parry Sound.

Dillon Port, Ont., Oct. 19.—The searchers for Miss Violet Smith have organized an expedition by rowboat and power launches to explore the uninhabited islands that dot the coast of Georgian Bay.

This is the one last hope of finding the missing school teacher. Confined beyond a doubt that she has been abducted and taken to one of these innumerable islands a few miles distant from Dillon Port, the entire district is preparing for a thorough search.

Crown Attorney Haight, Constable Madigan and other officers are directing operations which resemble in many respects the wildest adventures of fiction.

The fleet of small boats will take the sea under the command of the crown attorney and his officers and every island will be visited during the next few days and their dense woods penetrated in the full belief that Violet Smith is held prisoner.

A reward of $200 is offered by the Ontario government for information as to the whereabouts of Miss Smith. The police place credence now in the theory that the girl was kidnapped by relatives or others who desired a reward, which they knew would be offered.

Real Civil Service Reform.

London Advertiser.
About 1,500 citizens of Ottawa have applied for civil service positions. Mr. Frapp, one of the members-elect, says: "As vacancies occur we will see that those who have been faithful to us, other things being equal, get the positions. In order to get into the civil service it is necessary to pass an examination, and Hon. K. L. Borden himself could not put a man there unless he passed the examination." But what right has Mr. Frapp to choose even among those who have passed the examinations? Under the new law that is the duty and prerogative of the civil service commission, which must not consider the party affiliations of the candidates. This is the rule of the inside service and it ought to be extended to the outside service.

Some Notable Threats.

Manitoba Free Press.
Those conservatives throughout the western provinces who are now saying that Alberta and Saskatchewan need not expect Mr. Borden to carry out his promise to transfer the natural resources to them until they elect governments in sympathy with the new dominion administration, are doing their leader a disservice. The public does not understand that Mr. Borden is that kind of a man.

G. R. CHESTER CAPTIVATED BY BEAUTY OF WIFE'S FRIENDS.

A Heartbreaking Story—Pitiful Story of a Loyal Woman's Sacrifice for Man She Made.

New York, Oct. 19.—"The trouble with Chester is what is the trouble with all these other literary men who are getting divorced these days—too much Bohemia—too much flattery for man she made. As long as they stay out in their own towns and are poor enough to have to work hard, everything goes well. But when they get to New York, and begin to have plenty of money, and all the women are running after them and flattering them and begging to be put in their stories, it's all off with the simple life and the old ideals.

"That was the trouble with Chester: too much New York—too much money—too much Bohemia—too much flattery from pretty, idle women."

In that way a close friend told to a reporter of the start of the trouble that led to the divorcing of George Randolph Chester, story writer. This friend was with Mrs. Chester during the illness that attacked her after she learned of Chester's relations with the co-responder.

Mrs. Chester and her two sons have gone to live in a town. Chester and his affinity are abroad and the woman, Mrs. Lillian Dermo, is being introduced as his wife. Chester wrote the "Get-rich-quick wallowing" magazine, a dramatization of which by George Coban had a phenomenal success on Broadway last season. The Chester divorce case was heard privately before a referee.

"If you remember," said the friend, who would not permit her name to be used, "in the Wallingford stories, it is the wife who saves the man and reforms him. Well, Chester drew the character after his wife. He used to say to friends that if it had not been for her he would have been in the gutter years ago. When they were married Chester was an architect, and they were not too easy for them financially. He started writing stories and his wife copied them for him and advised him to send them to the papers. The stories were successful.

"Chester could be a prodigious worker at times, and he and his wife began to syndicate his work. She managed it all, typewriting it, mimeographing it and watching the business end. The syndicate business prospered so that Mr. Chester determined to come to New York. He left his wife at College Hill, a Cincinnati suburb, to attend to selling the house and winding up matters at home.

"Mrs. Chester's most intimate friend was Mrs. Dermo, a young widow. She is a beautiful woman, small and very slight, with enormous shining black eyes and a skin as white as chalk. She is capable of exerting a tremendous influence over a man.

"Mrs. Chester, on the other hand, is a woman with great charm of simplicity and directness. She is small, with large, soft, brown eyes and brown hair, and a delicate face with a child-like expression. She is about thirty-five, and Mrs. Dermo a good ten years younger.

"After Chester arrived in New York he went to live at the Van Cortlandt hotel. Mrs. Dermo came on from College Hill for the ostensible purpose of going on the stage. She put up at the Van Cortlandt. Mrs. Chester came on and lived at the hotel.

"After that Chester was absent from home a great deal on the plea of business, and Mrs. Dermo accompanied him. Still Mrs. Chester was suspicious until one day the woman's father appeared from Cincinnati and asked Mrs. Chester where his daughter was. He had discovered the truth. When Chester returned to town, his wife confronted him with what she had learned, and he confessed.

"How have I failed you?" she asked him. "In what way don't I satisfy you?"

"You are perfect in every way except one," Chester replied. "This woman surpasses you in beauty. I must have that. My nature demands it—my soul cries out for it. I want you and her, too."

"For three weeks Mrs. Chester was very ill. It was terrible to watch her. She prayed all day and wept most of the night, for she only slept when she was absolutely exhausted, that her husband should be freed from this fascination. She prayed for his soul and for his love. But one day she came to the end of her strength. She said to me, 'I'm not going to act this way any more. What is the use for me to love a man who only tramples on my love?'"

"This affair cannot last long," the friend added. "The woman is draining Chester's mind and soul and purse, and will throw him aside when she is done. Then we feel sure he will turn to his wife again, but I know it will be no use. What she first thought a calamity she now looks on as a blessing. She is devoted to her boys, and is glad she will be able to rear them away from their father's influence. She got all the alimony she asked for in her complaint. She will never let her husband visit his children if she can help it."

Some Recent Discoveries.
Montreal Gazette.
Those who give attention to that sort of thing have discovered that there is only one man (Mr. Cochran) of Scottish descent in the Borden cabinet, while the one Presbyterian, Mr. White, is of Irish origin. As the Scottish and Presbyterian people of Canada are not among those who think high places in the state should be distributed on racial and creed lines, the drawing of attention to the situation as a curiosity of politics will probably be the end of the matter.

TRUSTEES OF QUEEN'S

ACCEPT RESIGNATION OF G. M. MACDONNELL REGRETFULLY.

Has Been Trustee for Thirty-eight Years—Francis King Appointed Solicitor—Conference Over Constitutional Changes.

The trustees of Queen's university held their annual fall meeting on Wednesday, commencing at ten o'clock a.m., and continuing until a quarter to one o'clock Thursday morning with intervals for the laying of the corner stone of Nicol hall and convocation in the evening.

The finance committee reported the purchase of the Old Grand Trunk brewery property on King street, the appointment of Mr. Colville as assistant professor in English, Mr. Small, assistant professor of classics, and Mr. Sutcliffe as lecturer in English.

G. M. Macdonnell, K.C., having tendered his resignation as trustee and solicitor the board passed the following resolution:

"The board of trustees having received the resignation of G. M. Macdonnell as solicitor of the university, and as member of this board, agrees to accept the resignation. In doing so, however, they desire to place on record their appreciation of Mr. Macdonnell's long and devoted service as a trustee of Queen's. For the past thirty-eight years he has been a member of this board, a longer period of service than that of any other who has ever been a trustee of the university. He has freely given time and energy to promote the welfare of his alma mater, with devotion to her interests and with eager solicitude for her prosperity.

The trustees hope that Mr. Macdonnell's withdrawal from the board will in no wise weaken his attachment to Queen's or lessen his interests and efforts in her welfare.

Dean Dupuis, Judge MacTavish and J. McDonald Mowat were appointed members of the board Francis King was appointed solicitor.

A conference was held with the members of the committee of the general assembly to co-operate with the trustees in securing legislation and also the committee appointed by the general assembly to take charge of the interests of the Queen's theological faculty, and the form of both bills comprising Queen's university and Queen's Theological College was considered in detail. The discussion, while quite lengthy, was never acrimonious, and in a spirit of good give and take, the wording of the different clauses was agreed upon, and when adjournment was made there was a feeling both to the trustees and to the members of the committee that while the changes in the constitution were necessary, the trustees desired to advance the interests of the theological college, as well as the interests of the university, and that the members of the general assembly desired to the advancement of the university, as well as to safeguard the interests of the theological faculty.

Belonged to Albany, N.Y.
Auburn, N.Y., Oct. 19.—Chief of Police Bell, of this city, said that an investigation he had made into the identity of the young woman who was found shot to death, Tuesday morning, near Savannah, had disclosed that she was Charlotte Beauregard, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Beauregard, live in Albany.

According to Chief Bell the young woman recently lived in Auburn and in July took out two life insurance policies aggregating $800, giving her surname as Brophy. Her estate was made beneficiary, but two weeks ago, Mrs. Brophy says, the woman had the policies changed so as to make her sister Marie and her brother Edward the beneficiaries.

The Disintegrating Process.
Montreal Herald.
From this on it is the Borden cabinet that begins to disintegrate, the new generation of liberal public men begin to gain strength, biding their time. Who of the new ministers have come to stay? Who of them are on passage to the bench or other preferment? Who are to take the buffet of fortune and be sacrificed that their fellows may live? Which are the weak spots in the wall through which the opposition will try and break in? We shall soon know.
