TO OPPOSE J. R. DARGAVEL IN LEEDS COUNTY.

The Liberal May be W. J. Wilson or Omar Brown—Death of Mrs. Samuel Anderson of Gananoque.

Gananoque, Nov. 9.—The question of who will contest the constituency of South Leeds for the legislative assembly, in opposition to J. R. Dargavel, conservative, is being talked of to some extent and the names of W. J. Wilson, who considerably lessened Mr. Dargavel's majority at the last provincial election, and also Omar Brown, of Delta, one of the stalwarts of this riding, are mentioned. Both are strong and popular and it is believed could make the present holder of the seat go some to retain it.

Mrs. Samuel Anderson, an elderly and highly respected resident of the town, passed away at her residence on Garden street, Monday, after an illness of considerable duration, following a stroke of paralysis, in the sixty-fourth year of her age. Deceased resided here for many years. Her husband died several years ago. She leaves two daughters, Miss Emma, at home, and Mrs. William Johnston, and four sons, Richard, Samuel, Albert and William, all residents of the town. The funeral takes placeat today to Gananoque cemetery.

The local branch of the W.C.T.U. met, Tuesday evening, at the home of Mrs. Bethuel De Wolfe, Sydenham street.

The town market seems to be improving gradually. Yesterday it was fairly well patronized by farmers and citizens. It is reported that along many lines the prices asked for produce were considerably higher than the prices asked by the merchants of the town. This, with careful handling, may possibly be overcome in the course of time.

Hugh McFadden, who suffered a paralytic stroke several weeks ago, has so far recovered as to be about the streets again. Miss Margaret Root, nurse-in-training at Brockville General Hospital, is spending a short furlough here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Root, Charles street. Miss Lottie Laughton, trained nurse of New York city, spending some time here with her mother, Mrs. Joseph Laughton, Stone street, has returned to New York. Miss Muriel Churchill, of local postal staff, after spending two weeks' vacation in Quebec city, guest of her brother, J. Burton Churchill, has resumed her duties.

"THE MOTHER OF THE MAN."

Hall Caine's Reply to "The Female of the Species."

London, Nov. 8.—Hall Caine has written a poem, entitled "The Mother of the Man," in answer to Rudyard Kipling's recent, "The Female of the Species," which was a rhymed attack on woman suffrage. Hall Caine says:

"When the Lord of the Creation gave
the woman to the man,
In that blest but brief existence ere
the rule of ill began,
Then he knew, whate'er her conduct,
Whether innocent or frail,
That the female of the species would
be scapegoat to the male.

When he banished them from Eden for
the sin that each had wrought,
And the flaming sword of vengeance sealed the fate that both had sought,
Then he knew throughout the ages,
Long as man should tell the tale,
That the female of the species would
be temptress to the male.

"Since the Lord created woman,
She became a living soul.
Her's has been the old earth's burthen,
age on age,
From pole to pole.

"Her's the conflict, her's the conquest;
Her's the flag of life unfurl'd.
Her's the sorrow, her's the suffering;
Her's the love that moves the world."

DIED AT SYDENHAM.

Frank Ellerbeck, of Pleasant Valley, Was Stricken Down.

Pleasant Valley, Nov. 8.—Frank Ellerbeck, died at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. McRory, Sydenham, on Tuesday, November 7th, at 8 p.m. Deceased left here on Thursday, November 2nd, to attend the funeral af his late brother-in-law, J. W. McRory. While there he was stricken. A call was sent for a physician and Dr. Bogart, of Kingston, was summoned. Mr. Ellerbeck was thought to be recovering, but, yesterday, he gradually became weaker and despite the careful attention of two nurses, he peacefully passed away. Deceased was one of the most prominent and highly esteemed residents of this place and will be greatly missed. He leaves a mother, one sister, Mrs. Hannah McRory, and six brothers, Richard, Noble and Frederick, of this place; George, Hartington; Henry, Tessier, Sask., and Charles, Oxboro, Sask. The remains were brought to his late residence, whence the funeral to Harrowsmith cemetery on Friday, 10 a.m., will be conducted.

DR. OSLER PROTESTS

HE SAYS MEN PAST SIXTY ARE NOT USELESS.

Admits Many Should Retire at Three Score, But Distinguished Physician Makes Exception for Himself.

London, Nov. 9.—Many a sly jest is being passed round the colleges at Oxford about the appointment of Sir William Osler, regius professor of medicine, to the Sillimen lectureship at Yale for 1912.

For Sir William Osler has pronounced in favor of compulsory retirement for men—he excludes women—at the age of sixty. And Sir William Osler himself is sixty-two, though neither his appearance nor his daily work suggests it. A correspondent called on him at his house in Oxford. It is not at all the house of a man about to retire. The piles of books and papers on the numerous desks suggest rather than the owner is a man in the height of a busy career.

"The appointment," he explained, "does not necessitate my leaving Oxford. It is a lectureship often held by people on this side of the water. I believe Prof. Thompson, of Cambridge, has it this year.

"It simply means that I shall go over, probably at the end of next summer, and deliver a course of six lectures."

"And what about retiring at sixty?" was asked. "Is not this rather strenuous for one who has passed the age when all men ought to retire?"

Sir William Osler made a serious protest.

"Half the people who are continually bringing up my views on the retiring age," he said, "entirely misquote me."

He explained that the theory that a man was too old for work at forty and should be chloroformed at sixty was never adopted by him. He confessed, however, that he had propounded the theory that a man should retire from active work at sixty. "And wiser men than I shall ever hope to be have said so," he declared. "You will find it all in Montaigne. It is enforced in the army and navy and civil service.

"But even when I did say it—and it was really a joke at the expense of university professors in general, I made a special exception of myself. A man can think out lots of general rules that need not apply to himself."

So Sir William Osler intends unblushingly to return to the land where, most of all, the "chloroform at sixty" tradition clings to his name.

NEW SCHOOL REGULATIONS.

Have Been Issued by the Education Department.

Copies of the new regulations and course of study for public and high schools have been distributed by the educational department. An examination of these reveals a number of important changes.

Grammar is no longer on the course of study for the third classes of the public school, and the course in this subject for fourth classes has been considerably simplified.

The course in geography for all classes in the public schools has considerably changed, physical, commercial and economic geography is to receive much greater attention than has been received in the past.

An effort is to be made to adopt the course of study in each school to the needs and special conditions of the locality. In schools with only one teacher the trustees may substitute for art and nature study, one or more of the following subjects: Domestic science, manual training, elementary agriculture. Physical culture is obligatory in all classes of the public schools, and a manual will shortly be issued by the education department for the guidance of the teacher taking up the subject.

A two-years' course of study is outlined for fifth classes. On completing the first year's course, a pupil may take an examination which will entitle him to a junior graduation diploma; both these examinations will be conducted by the education department, and either diploma will admit the pupil to high school.

The character and scope of the entrance examination is unchanged, but in future it will be known as the junior high school entrance examination. This examination loses much of its importance from the fact that there are three other ways of securing admission to a high school, viz., (1) by means of a junior graduation department, (2) by means of a senior graduation diploma, and (3) by passing the senior high school entrance examination. The latter examination admits the candidate to the middle school of the high school.

With a view to securing more favorable weather conditions, the foregoing examinations, and also the examination for admission to the faculty of education, and the normal schools are to be completed by the 30th of June.

Under the new regulations, the government grant to the high schools has been reduced by 20 per cent. in respect of equipment, school accomodation and salaries.
