LAND OF CUT THROATS

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS ARE CURIOUSLY POPULATED.

With Murderers and Criminals of All Classes—A Letter Written in the Century Magazine.

The following extract from a letter written by Frederick Taylor in The Century Magazine lends an interesting light upon life in the Andaman Islands. He writes:

"The sailing of the Maharaja from Calcutta for the Andaman Islands was not accompanied by the usual good-byes and handkerchief waving of my fellow passengers there were 70 to whom no one wished bon voyage or a safe return. These were convicts, all murderers under life sentences, who for some reason had escaped the death penalty, and included six women; for the Maharaja is the ship used by the colonial Indian Government to transport convicts to the penal settlement near Port Blair, South Andaman Island, a distance of 650 miles from Calcutta.

"The prisoners were all manacled and shackled about the ankles, with chains fastened to bands at the wrist. They were a despicable lot. At night a continual moaning and wailing and sobbing came up from the hatches and made sleep out of the question for me, though the European officer in the steamer's cabin apparently slept undisturbed. Early the first morning I went on deck and learned that two of the male prisoners were ill and had been brought up to the deck for air. They were closely guarded and raw recruits were stationed at the railing to prevent them from committing suicide by jumping overboard into the Hugi river.

"The Andamans are literally the home of murderers. The inhabitants are the most vicious members of an older civilization and the uncivilized head hunters, among whom murder is a sport and a pastime. In the settlements are about 1,700 prisoners, including 800 women. On arriving at Port Blair the prisoners first spend six months in solitary confinement in the cellular jail of Viper Island. They are then transferred to one of the associated jails and the comparative blessing of hard labor in company with others, though still occupying separate cells at night. After a year and a half of this they become slaves, working in and about the settlement during the day and sleeping in barracks at night, always closely guarded. At the expiration of five years a convict becomes eligible to join the colony of 'self-supporters' and live in the village, where he earns his living in his chosen way, living in his own house and can send for his wife and children or marry a convict woman. In a limited sense he becomes a paternal family but is always carefully watched and cannot leave the settlement without permission.

Motor-Cars as Passengers. Even the ubiquitous motor-car is not always independent of the more old-fashioned railway train, and there are occasions on a journey where resource has to be made to the iron road for passage across a river or beneath a mighty mountain.

Special arrangements are now made through the Severn Tunnel in England. The motorist arriving at Severn Tunnel Junction, Filming or Patchway stations, finds open or covered railway trucks awaiting him, and he is promptly relieved of all the petrol in the tanks.

Changed Their Careers. Sometimes the truest wisdom is for a man to change his occupation and seek success in an entirely different direction. Of course it takes ability and courage but not seldom it means triumph.

The Archbishop of York read for the Bar and was on the point of entering the church. Dr. Lang's predecessor it will be remembered was a lieutenant in the army when he entered the church.

Sir F. Carruthers Gould, the most popular political cartoonist of the day, was formerly a member of the Stock Exchange. The success of his sketches in Truth, Christmas numbers led to work on The Pall Mall Gazette, and finally to his quitting the Stock Exchange for journalism.

The Abuse of Salt. People are beginning to review their dietetic habits in view of a reasoned argument against the practice of excessive salt-eating published in The London Magazine. The article alleges that the practice of eating much salt upsets the composition of the blood and produces a tendency to bleeding, and that the "crude mineral" salt in habitual use artificially preserves waste tissues instead of allowing them to decay and vanish naturally, and thus the body becomes overloaded. The digestive system cannot act upon it, and it is suggested that skin and even more serious internal disorders can be traced to the abuse of salt. The moral is drawn hence in a novel fashion. The Apollo Belvedere is shown as he would have appeared had he been a victim to the deadly habit. He is represented as bald, his eyes are puffy, and he is disgraced by a double chin.

A WILD WHEAT AREA.

A Look at Its Vastness in the West of the Dominion.

The Province of Alberta contains about 281,000 square miles of territory, more than half of which is susceptible of agriculture and capable of producing annually more wheat than is harvested in the entire United States and the Argentine Republic combined. Beyond these wheat fields lies an empire stretching away to the Arctic circle in one direction a distance of 2,000 miles, and westward to the Rocky Mountains and beyond a distance of 400 miles.

The immediate contributory area, known as Central Alberta, the richest and the most fertile and the earliest portion of that great area to be developed, is about 70,000 square miles, and, at the present rate of development, will be alive with wheat farmers within the next ten years. Within this territory this season nearly 2,000,000 acres of land are under crop, an increase of more than 50 per cent over the area harvested last year. According to the official reports from the Dominion Department of Agriculture on the last day of August, the winter wheat will average 25 bushels per acre throughout the province, spring wheat 28 bushels, oats 55 bushels and barley 35 bushels.

Blind, Yet Could See. A very interesting lecture was given on the coronation in Toronto recently by Mrs. S. G. Wood of that city. Although she is blind, Mrs. Wood was able to describe the events as they occurred, because she has the accomplishment of using her other senses to the best advantage. In London she was a guest of the royal family in Buckingham Palace, and her descriptions of the King and Queen passing her in their coronation robes were as accurate and as vivid as though she had seen everything.

Our Sailor King. The announcement by the authorities of the British navy that a certain old torpedo boat, No. 79, will not be used as a target for gun practice, although all others of her type are being "scrapped," reminds us that No. 79 was the first ship ever commanded by George V. The King, then Prince of Wales, and serving in the navy, became captain of this torpedo boat in 1888, and held it until 1891.

The second ship the King commanded was the gunboat Thrush, in which he sailed to Gibraltar, the West Indies, and Canada, calling at Halifax, Quebec, and Montreal. On July 20, 1891, the King, then Prince of Wales, was in command of the Thrush in the Thrus in fourteen days. Seventeen years later he made the same trip in the Indomitable in six days.

A Ready Reckoner. There are no eul-de-decs for Irish wit. A "jargon" man, Mr. Phil Mulligan, the wonderful English artist in black and white, now dead, found Dublin on his first visit to that city and in showing him the sights stopped in front of the Bank of Ireland. "That, sorr," said he, "is th' reciprocal money th' English take th' m' us!"

On the roof of the building are six decorative figures, and Mr. May inquired what they represented. "Begorra, sorr, they're th' twelve apostles," said Mr. May, "there are only six."

The Swiss Foreign Minister. In Switzerland, a new President is elected every year and the heads of the various departments of the Government retire with the President under whom they have served. This system, it has been found, has serious drawbacks, for on several occasions while negotiating a treaty with the United States, the political department—similar to the Department of State in the United States—has been unable to carry out the pact which he had begun because his term of office was at an end. A new system has been suggested which will provide for a chief of the Foreign Department with a long term and independent of other federal departments.

Making Sure. O'Reilly was a heepected husband, unforgiving even when Mrs. O'Reilly had been dead for years. He refused to have anything to do with the funeral or go to the cemetery. All of the arrangements were looked after by neighbors. When they had straightened up the house they got O'Reilly to consent to come in and look over the floral offerings for the friends. They asked him if there was anything further they could do before they took their leave. Still regarding the floral pieces, O'Reilly nodded and observed: "If yer don't mind yer moight close thim Gate-Ajar."

Their Secret. A little boy who had been very naughty during the day went to his mother just before his father returned home. "Mother," he said, "is it really true that a woman can't keep a secret?" "Why, no, dear, of course not," replied the mother. "That's only a joke of your father's. Tell me, sweetheart, what's the secret that you'd like me to keep?" "Promise me not to tell father I wasn't good to-day."

Discomfort. "Is a fat man necessarily uncomfortable in warm weather?" "He is if he listens to all the remarks his friends make about him."

Too Deserving. A young village maiden had obtained the modest prize. "I suppose, then, my child," said a Parisian lady, addressing her, "you are the most modest girl in the parish?" "There is not the slightest doubt about that, ma'am, and it's a downright shame I didn't get all the other prizes!"

A QUAINT BONNET AND RETICULE BUILT TO MATCH.

No afternoon costume is all it should be without its graceful reticule, which, of course, is designed to harmonize with both frock and hat. Many of the fashionable milliners are providing these reticules with their hats of a more dressy nature. The hat and reticule pictured are in shades of violet and rose pink, with touches of dull gold on the reticule. The frock is of ivory white, controlled voile trimmed with chiffon in violet and rose tints, and the white silk gloves have violet and rose-pink embroidery.

STUDIES OF THE VERNACULAR.

What is Heard at the Various Counters. "Say, hoost?" said the girl at the notion counter.

"Hoozoo?" queried the girl at the glove counter. "Joss aifoo diddeno!" "Lookeerim, wochia mean?" "Fowdon't knowis, wochablushin-bout?" "Aintabushin!" "Yarloo!" "Minjones yunobetter!" "Swat yar!" "Hojojo mean, anyhow?" "Fellerspoke wenyypass choorcounter."

"Diddansee anyfeller." "Diddansee, either, didja?" "Coarrot!" "Awakano!" "Sayookids," interrupted the floor-walker, "quitcher-hinniner I'll rephorcha!"

Practical Politics. A political office in a small town was vacant. The office paid $250 a year, and there was keen competition for it. One of the candidates, Ezekiel Hicks, was a shrewd old fellow, and a neat campaign fund was turned over to him. To the astonishment of all, however, he was defeated.

"I can't account for it," said one of the leaders of Hicks' party gloomily. "With that money we should have won. How did you lay it out, Ezekiel?" "Well," said Ezekiel, slowly, pulling his whiskers, "yer see, that office only pays $250 a year salary, an' I didn't see no sense in payin' $900 out to get the office, so I bought me a little truck for instead."

The Return of the Prodigal. When the elder brother of the prodigal son came near his father's house he heard, according to the authorized version, "music and dancing." Dr. Rendel Harris, in an address at Westminster College, Cambridge, says that the word for music in the original is "symphony" and that symphony means the bagpipes. Wycliffe's version gives the word symphony, but no other translator has done so. Wycliffe also says that he heard "symphony and a crowd." Now, a crowd is the Welsh word for harp. In view of the two instruments, Dr. Harris says that the elder brother had some justification for getting angry.—Christian World.

How Well He Looked. "Good morning, Mrs. Simpkins," said a suburban lady who is very shortighted. Your husband must be very fond of gardening. I see him the first thing every morning down at the bottom of the garden. And how well he looks, to be sure!" Mrs. Simpkins slammed the door in her neighbor's face. The latter went to tell her daughter.

"And you said mother, that the—the first thing in the onion bed was her husband?" "I did." "Ah, well, that explains the matter! What you took for Mr. Simpkins is a scarecrow!"—Tit-Bits.

Carved by Giants of the Past. The strange stone carving on Easter Island are one of the mysteries of the world: They range in size from a colossal seventy feet in height to a pigmy standing three feet. There are 555 of them. The theory has been advanced that they were made by the race of wicked giants mentioned in Genesis, for whose punishment the flood was brought about.

Noisy. "What are the wild waves saying?" softly murmured the emotional woman as she stood on the silver lining of the mighty main. "Nothing, Maria," replied the man hoarsely. "They are like some people we know—they make a great deal of noise, but don't say anything."—London Tit-Bits.

Too Deserving. A young village maiden had obtained the modest prize. "I suppose, then, my child," said a Parisian lady, addressing her, "you are the most modest girl in the parish?" "There is not the slightest doubt about that, ma'am, and it's a downright shame I didn't get all the other prizes!"

WANTS AGREEMENT CANCELED.

Civil Suit Over Sale of Valuable Farm. Picton, Nov. 8.—At the assizes here the case of Stocks vs. Boulter, was proceeded with. J. Lang Stocks, Nelson, B.C., bought a farm in Denbighville, Prince Edward county, from Wellington Boulter. He claimed that there had been misrepresentation as to the number of acres, apple trees, etc., on the farm, and Stocks sued for cancellation of the sale agreement, and $25,000 damages. After hearing the evidence of the plaintiff, the judge adjourned court in order that the parties to the suit might get together and arrange a settlement out of court.

Remains Interred at Clayton.

Clayton, N.Y., Nov. 8.—The remains of Mrs. T. G. Lester, who died at Bay City, Mich., were brought to Clayton, and were interred in the cemetery at this place on Sunday afternoon. Rev. W. H. Hesseman officiating. The remains were accompanied by her husband, Capt. T. G. Lester, who will remain here until Wednesday or Thursday.

Mrs. Electa B. Lester was born in Clayton in 1834, the daughter of Stephen and Elizabeth Wetherbee, and moved to West Bay City, Mich., in 1870. In 1877 she was united in marriage to Capt. T. G. Lester, who, together with an adopted son, who is a travelling man, are the only surviving relatives.

Aged Mason Dies. New York, Nov. 8.—Joseph F. Waring, for more than 81½ years prominent in the Masonic organization here, dropped dead of heart disease in the vestibule of the Masonic temple here, on Tuesday. He had just left a meeting of the Palestine Commandery, and was on his way to his home. He was ninety years of age.

How to Slaughter Turkeys.

Turkeys are sometimes sent to market with their plumage on, but they should not be. A properly prepared turkey should be slaughtered after the old formula—as old as the Indians—and set down as follows by the late Thomas Hazzard, the well known Rhode Island turkey expert, who was known as "Shepherd Tom" for many years.

"The turkey should be shut up and kept without food for eighteen hours. Then suspend the sacred creature from a pole above carefully by a stout cord or string tied around both legs and, holding the head downward, reverently but quickly cut asunder the jugular vein and just as soon as the breath leaves pluck off the feathers before the body gets cold. This done, remove the crop and entrails without loss of time, restoring the liver and gizzard when the latter has been cleansed of its gravelly contents and its inside skin. Then tie a string around both wings and both legs and hang it up in a cool, dry place for two or three days."

The Welsh Woman's Red Cloak.

The red cloak which the Welsh women wear is not only ornamental, but it also contributed to the repelling of the last invasion of their island. When a French force of 1,400 men under General Tate landed at Fishguard in 1797 Lord Cawdor hastily gathered together the local militia, while several hundred women had followed their husbands from the hills dressed in national costume—the red mantle and men's heavier hats. The French, knowing that scarlet was the British uniform, concluded that large reinforcements had reached Fishguard and hastened to make an unconditional surrender.—London Chronicle.

Top Big a Pill.

The man-in-bed had never been sick before. The doctor, wishing to ascertain his temperature pointed the thermometer at him and commanded, "Open your mouth, Jim."

"Wait a minute doc," objected the patient. "I don't b'lieve I can swallow that"—Judges.

His habits rather by unsex degrees, as breaks nicker rivers, rivers run to seas—b'leven. A practical joke is never what it's cracked up to be. How contented most women seem to be who live alone—and how discontented most men are who try it.
