

SEIZED ON HIS WAY

TO WED HIS ALLEGED AUSTRIAN PRINCESS.

Justin McDougald, of Montreal, detained in Chicago—Wants the Wife of Former H.M.C. Graduate.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—After leaving a Canadian sanatorium to visit an "Austrian Princess" in New York, whom he says he loves, Justice McDougald, youthful son of J. W. McDougald, a Montreal banker, is held here, pending advice from his father. He was found wandering around in a light summer suit.

McDougald said he had been committed to an asylum because he insisted on marrying Mrs. George Osborne Haynes of New York, who, he says, was Princess Eleanor Verina of Austria.

"I'm not crazy, however," he declared, "I love Mrs. Haynes and can take care of myself. This is just spite work."

The above dispatch revives interest in the peculiar story of McDougald's courtship of a young woman who asserted she was a morganatic granddaughter of Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austria, and the efforts of his father, a prominent broker, to thwart his son's plans for a marriage.

The Chicago street cars are being equipped with a device, part graphophone and telephone, to enable conductor to announce street names.

Fearful Headaches

Stomach Bad, No Appetite, Was Losing Weight and Strength.

Wonderful Change When Health Was Restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Headache is a symptom and not a disease in itself. It acts as a danger signal to warn you of serious trouble.

By reading Mr. Donnell's letter you will be satisfied that there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a means of building up the system and removing the cause of headaches, sleeplessness and indigestion.

Mr. Charles Donnell, Kleinburg, Ont., writes: "I wish to communicate to you the great cure which I received from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. For over two years I suffered from fearful headaches, my appetite was always poor, and the stomach had, I took medicine from physicians, but the headaches persisted, and I was rarely free from them."

Reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I began using it, with little idea that I would be benefited. I had become thin and weak, but the very first box helped me, and with continued treatment I have been cured and feel like a new man. The headaches have disappeared, my appetite good and digestion excellent. I write this letter in hope that other sufferers from headache may use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and be cured."

GOVERNMENT SUSTAINED.

Vote on French Powder Question Was 402 to 98.

Paris, Nov. 16.—Premier Caillaux triumphed in the first interpolation on the powder question, and the government's order for the day was sustained by a vote of 402 to 98.

M. Delesse, minister of marine, wound up the three days' debate with a vigorous speech on the age limit of powder, in which he said that the limit should be reduced from six to four years.

He declared that the navy needed powder of a higher resistance than did the army, and that the government would meet such powder.

Pressure during the debate compelled the government to publish the report of the inquiry into the Pont de Bois and Moulin Blanc powder factories, which had been withheld. Directors of both were severely blamed for malpractice, but if the reports originally contained references incriminating the late minister Brus, or other deputies, these had not appeared.

EARTH IS SAFE FOR AEONS.

Planet Habitable For Tens of Millions of Years.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 16.—The earth will remain habitable for tens of millions of years. This is the opinion expressed by Prof. Thomas C. Chamberlain in a paper contained in the annual report of the Smithsonian Institution.

Prof. Chamberlain equates a celestial body to the sun probably would result in the disruption of the solar system and bring disaster to the earth.

"The true era of humanity will have begun," he declares, "when moral progress, however, that the close approach of a celestial body to the sun probably would result in the disruption of the solar system and bring disaster to the earth."

MARBLE BUST OF LAURIER.

Ordered by G.T.R. to Adorn New Hotel in Ottawa.

Montreal, Nov. 16.—Paul Chevre, the Parisian sculptor who is responsible for the Champlain monument on the terrace of the Chateau at Quebec, and the Mercier monument to be unveiled next spring in the ancient capital, is in Montreal, to-day. Mr. Chevre has just booked an order from the G.T.R. for a marble bust of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, to adorn the centrepiece in the lobby of the Chateau Laurier in Ottawa.

It will slightly exceed the natural size and will be supported by a marble column adorned with appropriate allegories of a height of about five feet. The statue will be ready in the spring and will cost $5,000.

TO OWN THE LINES

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP OF ALL SYSTEMS IS MOOTED.

Commission's Failure—Too Many Officials Getting Big Salaries—Another Reason for Urgent—Liberals Active.

London, Nov. 16.—The royal commission, appointed to solve the great railway question, has proved a complete failure, and the whole country is once more in a state of unrest which will probably culminate in another general railroad strike. The conservative papers are trying to make it appear that the railroad employees are going back on their word to abide by the decision of the commission, but it appears that no such promise was given, and besides, it is generally conceded that it is absolutely impossible for the men to live on the wages they are now receiving, as the cost of living has greatly increased.

The railroad companies point to the fact that they are paying only a very small dividend to their stockholders, and cannot possibly afford to pay higher wages. This is partly true. The fact is this, however, that there is in England an incredibly large number of railroad directors and officials who, through performing no duties receive big salaries.

Various rumors are afloat as to the government's plans. The most sensational rumor is that the government intends to take advantage of an act passed more than half a century ago, providing for the municipal ownership of all railroads, a plan that was advocated by the late Mr. Gladstone many years ago.

A clearing house for school children is the latest idea of the London council's education committee. The object is to have local care committees, connected with a clearing house, look after graduating children and place them in suitable occupations.

At present local committees have for some time been engaged in the work, but their efforts have not been very successful because there has not been sufficient co-operation with the Board of Trade, and the staffs of the juvenile labor exchanges have not been sufficient in quantity or quality.

Schools for post office messenger boys have been opened at nine post offices, and in eight evening schools with attendance of over two thousand.

Another innovation of the London school authorities is a lecture course at public schools in the poorer districts, addressed to mothers on the care of infants. The first class of this kind is being attended daily by nearly one hundred mothers. The evening school has been started in connection with the class and has become very popular. It is to be followed by lessons in cooking and other useful domestic subjects.

THE BEOTHUKS.

Members Found of Strange Tribe Supposed to be Extinct.

Three Indians, believed to be members of a strange Newfoundland tribe that was supposed to have become extinct as far back as 1829, have just been discovered.

This old tribe was known as the Beothuks and the three members of it were found along the Penobscot river. One of them, a woman said to be nearly 100 years old, told the history of the lost tribe.

In the opinion of experts the old squaw's information adds an important link which has been missing in anthropological history for nearly a century.

The Beothuks were first discovered in 1437 by the Cabots in Newfoundland. Three of them were captured and taken to London, where, through the fact that their bodies were dyed red, according to an ancient custom of their race, they caused the American explorer to call them "red men."

For this reason anthropologists have always regarded the Beothuks as exceedingly important to their science.

The last of the Beothuks to be seen alive was Shanandith. He died in St. John's, Nfld., in 1829. About this time, according to Dr. Speck, the ethnologist, a number of expeditions were made into the interior by men of science, with the hope of discovering some of the fast-winding tribe, who were noted for their intense hatred and fear of the white man and his civilization. They found some of the camps, tepees, canoes, implements of warfare, cooking utensils and clothing, but no Beothuks.

The disappearance of the Beothuks, the most remarkable and interesting mystery in the history of the Indians. After the expeditions in 1829 into Newfoundland many of the Micmacs moved into Newfoundland, and it is possible that a few of the Beothuks who had taken refuge in the body of their Micmacs, intermarried with the Micmacs and lost their identity.

The Beothuks called themselves the Osagannas, and were known by the Indians to the other tribes by this name. If you ask any of the other Indians anything about the Osagannas they will shrug their shoulders and point to the north and say: "I don't know. Somewhere up north; heard of them."

From what little we have of their language from old records and my own small vocabulary it seems that the Beothuk was an independent stock and tribe. They were not related to any other Indians about them, either in language or in race.

The Beothuks had an annual ceremony which was participated in by the whole tribe at Red Lake, at which they crushed quantities of a kind of red root and dried their entire bodies. This was never washed off and ordinarily it lasted until the next annual ceremony.

The Greatest Missionary. The greatest contentment paid recently to the Salvation Army was made by Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. He was presiding at a mass meeting of the army in Massey Hall, Toronto, and introducing Mrs. Bramwell Booth, he said:

"You do missionary work which the Christian Church confesses is not being done so thoroughly by their organizations. Now, I am not disparaging or minimizing the work of the churches, but I do say that the Salvation Army is doing social work which is not being so effectively or successfully done by church organizations."

I had used various medicines without relief. I heard of Hood's Sarsaparilla and decided to try it. I bless the day I did. I took it several months and now feel well. All my pains have vanished."
