THE FOOD QUESTION.

The Story of a Town That Wanted Pure Food.

Collier's (Canadian edition) of Aug. 26th, contains an article entitled "Westfield—A Pure Food Town," which is sure to be interesting reading to all housekeepers. The people of Westfield (Mass.) woke up to the fact that they were not getting pure food or pure material for use in food. They do not want, and now will not have, fruits, jams, etc., in which certain preservatives are used, poisons that have been furnished to make them look nice, etc. Of the groceries tested in the laboratory, one of the most frequently adulterated is baking powder. A delightful concoction known as a tart proved to be half-paste made with alum, with a jelly center dyed with coal-tar. The article goes on to say: "So little baking powder is used in some homes that this product would seem comparatively unimportant. But a great deal of baking powder, however, is used in the household cakes and biscuits, and a great deal of this is adulterated. The adulteration may be by ammonia, which is fraudulent, but not injurious, or by alum, which is decidedly injurious, as it hardens the tissues of the mucous membranes. As a precaution, look at label and see if ingredients are stated. Better refuse it if alum or something that looks like alum (such as alumina) is one of them, or if the ingredients are not stated by the manufacturer it will be well to select some other brand.

Jams, jellies, catsups, confections, gelatins, dessert powders, flavoring extracts, are often colored with coal tar dyes. These dyes are sometimes harmless, but very frequently injurious, depending on the particular combination. There is one bottle of cream de menthe at the normal school, which contains a coal-tar dye sufficiently poisonous to have killed two people. The bottle is almost full, but the small amount used caused the death of a man and his wife, and then the product was sent for analysis. Experts are also adulterated with wood alcohol and with tumeric, a fraudulent adulterant.

No doubt many cities and towns will profit by Westfield's experience, and follow its example.—Canadian Home Journal.

The North Pole.

The class was just beginning the study of geography.

"James," said the teacher, to the small boy in the front row, "telling all you know about the North Pole."

"The North Pole is up at the end of the world, and the earth turns around it and Robinson live there, and—"

"Well, James, is that all you know about the North Pole? What about the climate?"

"James was embarrassed at being called in front of the class and grayed at the suggestion. "Why, why," the Eskimos try to climb it."

Starvation in Russia.

Eight million people, it is said, are starving in Russia, because the crops have been a failure in twenty Russian provinces. Probably eighty million people are paying an increased price for the staff of life because the Russian crop in these twenty districts was a failure. But a good many thousand wheat raisers in other countries are happy because wheat is high. Even the darkest clouds have a silver lining.

THE STAIRCASE TEST

If You Cannot Pass It Your Health is Failing.

When you suffer acute palpitation of the heart, dizziness or faintness every time you go upstairs, when exertion of any kind leaves you breathless and trembling, it is a warning that your blood is defective—that you are anemic. If these warnings are neglected worse disorders will follow—perhaps decline and deadly consumption. If you are in this condition you need the new, good blood of health that has been given to thousands of sufferers by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills build up the ailments arising from poor blood, tone up the system and make weak men and women well and strong. Miss Elizabeth Campbell, Almonte, Ont., says: "I was living in Pembroke at the time my health failed me. I kept growing weaker every day until I last grew so weak I could not walk upstairs, without help, and I could not go down street without sitting down and resting. My mother got quite anxious about me and took me to a doctor, who said he was quite sure he could restore my health. He gave me a bottle of medicine, and I continued its use until I had taken four bottles, but instead of getting stronger I was growing weaker all the time, and was only a mere shadow of my former self. My parents believed I was in a decline and could not get better. My mother had heard so much about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that she decided I ought to try them. I did not notice much change until I had taken five or six boxes, when a decided improvement set in, and from that on I grew stronger and stronger every day until through a continued use of the pills I was back to my old-time health and strength. I believe Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best remedy on earth for sick people, and cannot too strongly urge other weak girls to give them a trial."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ABOUT TAXATION.

Land Should be Taxed Higher Than Improvements.

On several occasions a bill has been brought before the Ontario legislature having for its object the giving to municipalities the right to tax land values at a higher rate than improvements. This bill has hitherto been championed in the legislature by Mr. Phipp, a conservative member, but has always had to be withdrawn due to the unalterable hostility of Premier Whitney.

The premier's attitude on land taxation is hard to understand. It is admitted by all who have given the question thought, that between land values and the value of improvements, there is an essential difference. The first represents the results of man's thrift and industry. To tax land values is to tax a man for something that he did not create but which he is using, and which others in the community would make use of if he did not. To tax improvements is to tax the results of man's industry and to discourage improvement.

Is it fair that the progressive farmer who tills the soil and erects new ones, who builds good fences, along the public highways, or who plants trees that beautify the whole country, should be taxed for his progressiveness? This is the system under which Ontario farmers are now assessed and taxed.

Every thinking man will welcome the day when in Ontario, we will cease to tax individual industry and place the taxes on land where in justice they belong.

A Suitable Catch Phrase.

Ottawa Journal.

An enthusiastic follower of the prime minister suggested recently that some catchword or phrase should be adopted by the conservatives to express the salient fact of Mr. Borden's democracy. As the term "Democrat to the hilt" has long since been preempted, the only other one of the kind that occurs is that of Ottawa's erstwhile Capt. Sills, who was wont to refer to himself as a "recherche tit-bit of the hot-pollo!"

Haste and Delay.

Toronto Star.

Mr. Borden's answer to the opposition amendment relating to the navy is a plan for delay. This is remarkable, because when the house, in 1909, passed a resolution favoring the navy, Mr. Borden criticized it because it did not call for as prompt action as he desired. It was upon his suggestion that the word "speedy" was inserted. He and his friends then voted for "the speedy organization" of a Canadian naval service, and voted also that they would "cordially approve of any necessary expenditure" for that purpose. Mr. Borden now says that the Canadian navy costs too much, and that he wants more time to consider. This is nearly three years after he urged the late Government to hurry. What changes office brings!

Trouble Not Settled.

Montreal Herald.

Mr. Roblin has gone back to Manitoba, rejoicing that he has got everything gossip is to the effect that part of the subject which has to do with completely adjusted. The statement is made that Mr. Roblin has expressed his willingness to negotiate Archbishop Langevin and the Quebec bishops with his intentions in regard to the future of Catholic schools, but there is nothing to indicate, as yet, that the minority are satisfied with the proposals. Those who remember 1896 and 1897, will, therefore, await the production of the bills confirming the extension of the boundaries with permissible curiosity.

SAILOR IS SAVED BY PRESENTMENT

Ogdensburg Sailor When He Saw Craft Took Violent Dislike to Her

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Nov. 25.—One of the most remarkable cases of "sailor's presentment," on record came to light here yesterday. Harry G. Story, able seaman, walked into a newspaper office and laid down a contract which he had signed with shipping agent at Quebec last Thursday. It showed that he had taken a berth on the Norwegian bark Antigua, due to sail that night from a port below Quebec with a cargo of pulpwood for Androsaan, Scotland.

Story and eight of his mates had shipped for the passage, but upon reaching the dock where the bark was moored, Story suddenly conceived a violent dislike for the vessel. He expressed his feeling to his companions and one of them taunted him with having a "yellow streak." This he denied, saying that he had sailed for many years, but that there was something about the Antigua that filled him with forebodings. Her persuasions of his mates to back out, and the two took the next train west.

He arrived home yesterday and told his experience to his sister. She at once got a copy of a paper which gave an account of the wreck of the Antigua in the lower St. Lawrence, the same night that the craft left port. Fifteen of the crew of eighteen perished beneath the waves.

A Campaign of Humbug.

Queen's Quarterly.

Much, if not most of the talk against reciprocity, was exaggerated. The very men who financed the campaign of the Montreal Star and the Toronto News are the very men who have the largest business dealings with the United States. Probably not a little of the money which paid for the distribution of imperialistic editorials was made in New York. It is difficult to see why Sir Edmund Walker or Sir William Van Horne becomes the heaven-born saviour of his country by selling in New York market the right to use Canadian money, by financing American railways in Cuba, while the Canadian farmer, who sells his wheat at Minneapolis, or his late peaches in the border towns, inevitably drifts towards a belief in annexation. The men who financed the recent conservative campaign are the very men who will fight to the last ditch, and with the last dollar, any attempt to make the British preference a practical reality.

Women as Assailants.

Montreal Herald.

The most surprising thing about these military jangle, is that, with all the resources of the world's progress to draw upon, they could conceive nothing better as a plan of campaign for the capture of the representatives of the nation, than an armament made up of bags of stones to be used in the worn-out juvenile and exceedingly commonplace manoeuvre of window smashing.

If a glimmering of humor could penetrate the minds of these terribly earnest women who are languishing in jail—Mrs. Lawrence, joint editress of "Votes for Women," Lady Constance Lytton, sister of Lord Lytton, the Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Haverfield, daughter of Lieut.-Gen. Lord Abinger, and the rest—it might enable them to perceive that their weapons of conquest were not well chosen.

A CONSERVATIVE TRIBUTE.

To Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Liberal Chief.

Montreal Star, Nov. 24th.

This day seventy years ago, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was born. From early manhood until the present moment his career has been eventful and picturesque. Whether we regard his leadership at L'Assomption College, his career in the Quebec legislature, his brief occupancy of a cabinet position under Mackenzie, his long and strenuous fight in opposition, his victory in 1896, his fifteen years as prime minister of Canada, or his crushing defeat in September last, there are found in each episode unusual and exciting incidents which have regularly graven his name in Canadian history. The loyalty of Sir Wilfrid's personal intimates to his leader is a thing separate and apart from political service, and he has many such friends. His political opponents can urge nothing discreditable of general acceptance against his public record, either in respect of his public career or private life. He has made errors in public policy, he has not succeeded in his supporters, for they crowd closely behind him, cherishing his utterances and boasting his ability to lead them to victory once more. If hasty words have come to his lips in debate or in references to political opponents, they have been the extremely rare exception and not the rule. Personal bitterness has small place in his make-up, and a fine courtesy has ever attached to his sayings and doings. His face and form are known to every citizen of Canada; and with confidence in his tact, his knowledge and his eloquence have the country watched him figure in great important functions. If we have not always approved of the manner of his advocacy, we have admired the manner of its presentation. Canada as a whole will long continue to regard Sir Wilfrid Laurier with kindly interest; he has been connected with a notable era of her development. Her citizens believe that he will devote, in opposition, every quality and every talent he possesses for the general good.

In an Embarrassing Position.

New York Tribune.

Mrs. Winifred Harper Cooper, the secretary of the Associated Clubs of Domestic Science, said at the Pure Food Show in New York:

"We must, of course, pay more for all this excellent pure food than we used to pay. We mustn't refuse the manufacturer his legitimate higher price. Any haggling on our part would put us in the rather nasty position of the Cinnamon founder."

"A founder of Cinnamon, in his daily life of the plant, noticed an apprentice who was hammering in a rather listless manner.

"The founder flushing angrily, went to the lad, took the hammer from him and said:

"See, when I see a man hold his hammer by the end of the handle like this, and strike good, hard, quick blows like this—bang, bang, bang—why? pay that man $16 a week. But when a man holds his hammer by the middle of the handle, and strikes as if he were tapping an egg, like this, why I pay him only $7 a week, and he's the first to go when we get slack."

"The founder returned the hammer and looked at the boy sternly to see if his lesson had gone home.

"Thank you, sir," was the mild reply. "And where ought I to hold it and how ought I to strike for my $2 a week."
