QUEEN CARRIES 1,000 ROYAL PLUM PUDDINGS.

Remarkable Assortment of Gifts Aboard Steamship Bearing Imperial Party to Durbar at Delhi—No Coronation Ceremony in Indian Empire.

London, Nov. 25.—For many months King George and Queen Mary have been preparing for their great Indian trip, when, as emperor and empress, they will appear in state at the Delhi Durbar, surrounded by a great assembly of Indian ruling princes and chieftains.

When the Medina steamed off from Portsmouth she was flying the royal standard at the mainmast, the King's flag as admiral of the fleet at the foremast, and the flag of Rear Admiral Keppele at the stern. There is on board an escort of Life Guards Artillery, and the Medina is being loaded part of her voyage by an escort of cruisers.

It has been stated that there will be another coronation at Delhi; but this is not so. The king and queen were crowned king-emperor and queen-empress at Westminster. They will walk to their thrones at the durbar already crowned.

The king's crown has been specially made, and it was decided that the crown of England could not be taken out of the country. No such restriction applies to the queen's crown in front of which blazes the Kohinoor, the great Indian diamond supposed to bring good fortune & worn by woman.

The list of presents which the king and queen are taking out for Indian notables is a truly extraordinary one and runs into a very big sum of money, all of which is being paid out of the private purse of the monarch.

Among them are 1,000 plum puddings made in the Buckingham palace kitchens. The mixing of these puddings was a task of great magnitude, for the smallest is as large as a good-sized football. The ingredients weighed about ten tons, and scores of servants were employed for weeks in weighing and apportioning them. Gallons of the finest cognac and sherry from the king's cellar went in the mammoth bowls to enrich the puddings.

In order that the puddings might suffer no damage in transit the queen herself saw to it that they were placed in grease-proof paper bags with an outer covering of linen, the latter sealed with the royal cipher, and then packed in wooden boxes.

Besides the puddings the king and queen are taking out for the Christian nobles of many of their Indian subjects a large number of rich plum cakes, York hams, and Stilton cheeses. Then there are rolls of English linen, piles of Buckinghamshire, Horn and point lace, illustrated books, fancy leather goods, silverware of all kinds, British silks and velvets, pictures and photographs, and a great variety of other articles.

While there is quite a menagerie of porcupines, kittens and canaries.

Queen Mary, moreover, employed a large number of painters of miniatures to produce favorite ivories of herself which the king possesses, and these are to be presented to favored Indian subjects. For the great ladies of India, the queen has had copies made of over 100 of her fans. Then there are numerous parades made of rare lace and hand-painted silk, with straight handles, like those favored by the queen.

The anxiety by Englishmen in India over the king's trip and the risks attendant upon the visit are expressed by an "Englishman" there, who writes:

"The king is doing a great thing in going to India. If only from the spectacular point of view. He goes to impress his subjects there with the actual existence of the emperor of that splendid appearance of the British throne. The event is one to fill both the mind and eye with all that makes the race.

"But the natives of India will expect more than splendor and ceremonial, glowing with Oriental colors. They will ask for largess in the shape of some great concession, equal to a unique occasion. They do not understand his majesty's constitutional position and will be disappointed that he can do so little. Were he to decree the abolition of the salt tax they would understand that, and bless his name for ever. They cannot understand that that is purely a matter for the financial advisers of the Indian government. Yet unless something of the sort is done the visit will remain simply a series of spectacles."

"Finally, there is much personal risk to the king. He is a brave man and does not mind; but, then, we do. There are hundreds of fanatics in India who would, if they could, destroy the king, though they themselves should be hacked to pieces the next moment. They have before them all the glories to be won as a martyr, all the fame of having done an unforgettable deed directed against the chief of the race which holds India in its iron hand."

"True, a guard of marine gunners, all over six feet high, are to surround him, but that is only for show. The real defense will be the Indian police, and they have proved that they can barely defend themselves. One has

A Devoted Wife Helps Her Husband to a Cure Through Samaria Prescription.

Mrs. S. of Trenton, was in despair. A loving father and a careful provider when sober—her husband had gradually fallen into drinking habits, which were ruining his home, health and happiness. Drunk, he had inflamed his stomach and nerves and created that unnatural craving that kills conscience, love, honor and breaks all family ties.

But read her letter:

"I feel it my duty to say a few words about your Tablets. As you are aware, I sent and got a bottle thinking I would try them in seeing if my husband had only taken them a week when he told me he was going to see Mr. Arthur for the same purpose, so I had to go to him all alone. The physician said he would take them just the same, so I sent and got the second bottle, and he said they were not enough. He writes me saying that he has taken the contents of both bottles and he feels splendid, does not drink, and has not had a relapse. I have not taken any liquor from the first of my giving it to him. I feel I cannot say too much in favor of your wonderful remedy."

"Mrs. S.—Trenton, Ont."

Samaria Prescription stops the craving for drink. It restores the shaking nerves, improves the appetite and general health, and makes drink disappear and even nauseous. It is used regularly by physicians and hospitals, and is tasteless and odorless, dissolving instantly in tea, coffee or food.

Now, if you know any home on which the curse of drink has fallen, tell them of Samaria Prescription. If you have a husband, father, brother, or friend or whom the habit is getting its hold, help him yourself. Write today.

A FREE TRIAL PACKAGE of Samaria Prescription, with booklet, giving full particulars, testimonials, price, etc., will be sent absolutely free and postpaid in plain sealed package to anyone asking for it and mentioning this paper. Correspondence strictly confidential. Write to-day.

Poverty Shortens Life.

Average Life of Poor Man But 28 Years.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 25.—The average poor man lives to be but twenty-eight years old, according to Emmanuel Sternheim, head of the council of educational alliance, who lectured here on "Social Reformers and Questions." The average life of a wealthy man is between fifty-five and fifty-six years, rich or poor.

The duration of a man's life depends on the circumstances surrounding him," said Sternheim. "Pleasure, cleanliness, and the proper care of one's self tend to prolong life, just as an environment of filth and squalidly, which cause a man to neglect to eat, care of himself, tend to shorten the length of life.

"The conditions surrounding the poor are to blame for most of the tuberculosis in the world. We rarely find a case among the wealthy, while the average is high where poverty exists. The reason for this is usually the fact that the insect's fang entered under the skin, slanting along the side of the finger rather than directly into the flesh of the digit, averted more serious consequences. A physician attended Miss Connor, and after cutting into the hole, which was about the size of a thick darning needle, burned out and thoroughly cleansed the wound. The spider clung to Miss Connor's finger until knocked off by a gentleman. While stunned, it was captured, and found to measure about four inches in diameter and two inches in height. Its nest in the bunch was large, and of a white, fluffy substance.

Improper living is also to blame for the high rate of mortality among the poor. Among the wealthy, where conditions are best, the rate in most countries is about six per cent. Among the poor it is about forty-four per cent."

DEVELOPS WILD SHEEP.

Cross Strain That Makes Mountain Animals Wool Producers.

San Bernardino, Cal., Nov. 25.—After striving for more than ten years to wrest nature's secret from her, William Franks, Billion Mountain, has at last discovered the alchemy that transforms a wild mountain sheep into a highly developed wool-bearing animal.

Franks is an accredited collector for the Smithsonian Institution. His secret consists of crossing the mountain sheep and does of the Leicester strain. The sheep are of large size, exceedingly nimble and produce wool of fine quality.

Triple Wedding for Sisters.

Philadelphia, Nov. 25.—In the Roman Catholic church of Our Mother of Sorrows at a solemn high nuptial mass, Miss Anna Regina Dooley was married to Robert Emmet Diamond.

Miss Gertrude Dooley was married to James Alloysius Clark, and Miss Helena Hildegrade Dooley became the bride of Francis Joseph Soden.

The three brides were daughters of Michael Dooley, a contractor, who died some time ago. The bridegrooms have been chums since childhood.

A HUGE TARANTULA

BURIED FANG IN FINGER CAUSING EXCRUCIATING PAIN.

Not Among Bananas—Spider Four Inches in Diameter and Two Inches in Height.

London, Ont., Nov. 24.—Miss Connor, sister of J. A. Connor, grocer, of Richmond street, north, was attacked and seriously bitten by a huge tarantula, while picking bananas off a bunch in her brother's store. The pain was excruciating for a time, and the fact that the insect's fang entered under the skin, slanting along the side of the finger rather than directly into the flesh of the digit, averted more serious consequences.

A physician attended Miss Connor, and after cutting into the hole, which was about the size of a thick darning needle, burned out and thoroughly cleansed the wound. The spider clung to Miss Connor's finger until knocked off by a gentleman. While stunned, it was captured, and found to measure about four inches in diameter and two inches in height. Its nest in the bunch was large, and of a white, fluffy substance.

Curiosities of Harbor.

New York, Nov. 25.—Some eleven thousand steam and coast voyage ships regularly enter and leave New York harbor. An army of 225,000 men and women are employed aboard these vessels. The poor among the wealthier classes earn their living in one way or another from the port's commerce. The harbor at present contains fifty-five miles of pier frontage, and yet the harbor is capable of a development which will accommodate six times its much traffic.
