CLUB BARNS BURNED.

Fire Destroys Property of Elton V. Brown and Others.
Fox Creek, N.Y., Nov. 29.—The barns on the Fox Island Club farm on Fox Island, opposite here, were burned to the ground, Saturday night. Grain and hay, farm implements and three horses were burned. The total loss is estimated at between $8,000 and $10,000, and insurance covers nearly the entire amount. The Fox Island Club is made up of former Senator Elton V. Brown, of Watertown, former Governor Horace White of Syracuse, and Lawrence E. Sexton, of New York. They have owned the property for several years, having a clubhouse there and hunting from that point. One year ago, November 16th, 1910, the house on the farm was burned to the ground. The house has just been rebuilt.

Outlet Occurrences.

Osselt, Nov. 28.—W. T. Parsons, ill for the past two months, is able to be out again. School has closed at Woodvale, owing to some trouble between teacher and scholars. Charles Hochey, ill for some days, is able to be around again. Leyman Griffin has sold his property here to Ira Watson, Sr., and has moved to Gananoque. Alfred Hall has also moved to Gananoque. Miss Faith Greer, of Lanark, spent Sunday at her home here. Andrew and Charles Fodey have returned home from the North-West, as also has John Fodey, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. R. Milne and children, Brewer's Mills, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Fodey, recently. Mr. and Mrs. George Stacey went to Seely's Bay on Saturday, called there by the illness of Mrs. Johnston, who passed away on Sunday morning. Mrs. Edward Vanderburg returned home from Ventnor on Friday, having been engaged nursing at that place for the past five weeks. On Sunday, Mrs. John Reid and Mrs. E. Vanderburg went to Long Point to spend a couple of days with Mrs. George Reid, who is quite ill. John Fodey is putting a cement floor in Warburton cheese factory.

Centreville Tidings.

Centreville, Nov. 27.—Messrs. John and Bruce Fairbairn left, on Tuesday, for Oshawa, to work in the carriage factory. Edward Pery has returned from a few weeks' outing in Cloyne. Percy Lockhead has resigned his position in the Standard bank, Newburgh, and accepted one in the Merchants' bank, Napanee. A number from here went to Napanee on Thursday. Miss Annie Ingoldby, Kingston, and Joseph Broadnax, Toronto, have returned to their respective homes, having spent a week visiting friends. Visitors: Misses Annie and Pearl Gleason and Frank Cassidy, at S. Cassidy's; Mrs. McGregor, Enterprise, at T. Thompson's; Mr. and Mrs. Edward James, at E. O'Connor's; Percy Thompson, at S. Long's; Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Joyce and James Hinch, Camden East, at C. Ingoldby's.

CAR ORDER BOOK.

Railways to be Asked to Keep One at Every Station.
Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The railway commission on Tuesday, December 5th, will consider the matter of requiring all railway companies under the jurisdiction of the board to provide at all stations a car order book, in which a record must be kept showing particulars of all cars ordered and allotted also the advisability of requiring all orders for cars to be made in person by shippers, their agents, by mail or telegraph, giving particulars of cars required to the agent in charge of the station from which shipment is made. This is the outcome of the many complaints made recently to the commission by shippers about the shortage of cars. A decision may be given which will remedy the matter.

Quebec Liquor Licenses.

Quebec, Nov. 29.—The license commissioners met, to-day, and granted twenty out of the eighty-seven applications for licenses. Those who secured licenses were all hotel-keepers, who serve meals and boarding accommodations. The request of the remainder will be the Anti-Alcoholic League, which will be represented by J. H. Roberts, of the Dominion Alliance.

People may appreciate a double bill when presented by a theatrical manager but when presented by a lawyer or doctor—well, that's different.

GENIAL PERSONALITY

A GREAT HUNTER, BRAVE SOLDIER, AND MODEST WITHAL.

Our New Governor-General Who Will Visit Us Next Week is Greatly Admired by Premier Asquith, and King George Places Great Reliance Upon Him.

"There are few men," says Mr. Asquith, the British premier, "whom the British empire could with more difficulty spare than His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught." Wherever fate, or his duty, has called him, our new governor-general has won golden opinions. And this is to be attributed to the man himself and not to his rank. For it is easy for a prince to find flatterers, but hard for a prince to make friends. But it has been the Duke's good fortune to make friends on all hands, in all countries, and among all classes. His geniality is the real thing. When Sir Robert Perks, the great engineering contractor, who, from his long parliamentary experience, has a wide knowledge of men and affairs in the old country, was in Toronto a few weeks ago, he told the Star Weekly that he regarded the coming of the Duke to Canada as an "admirable appointment. It is bound to do good. And, as far as the Duke personally is concerned, he has a very large share of the tact which distinguished the late King, Edward."

It is not generally known that the Duke of Connaught displayed very considerable prowess as a hunter of big game in Uganda, after he had resigned the high commissionership of the Mediterranean in 1909. He went to Mombassa in East Africa to confront the lions and elephants of Uganda. In a hunting tour, which lasted ten weeks, and in the course of which he travelled considerably over four hundred miles, His Royal Highness made the biggest individual bag of his party. His bag consisted of one elephant, seven lions, fifteen rhinoceroses, four buffaloes, one cheetah, and three hippopotami, besides thirty-three different species of antelope. He can, therefore, claim to have been the first of his royal line to have met the king of beasts face to face and have slain him. King Edward, it is true, when in India, shot jungle tigers from a howdah on the back of an elephant, and King George, when he was in India, shot in the same manner, as the guest of one of the Indian rajahs, one of the rare lions which are preserved with such care in India by the rajahs for the sport of themselves and their especially honored guests. But very different is the advancing on foot towards the lion—in fact, literally "bearding him in his den"—which is exactly what the Duke did in Africa.

No expedition of the kind was ever less advertised. One remembers the hunting feats of Mr. Roosevelt in the same territory, with which two hemispheres were made to ring. And Winston Churchill was photographed, as a frontispiece for his book, "My African Journey," posing beside the carcass of a slaughtered rhinoceros, with an express rifle under his arm. But it is said that the duke, who dislikes anything like self-advertisement, impressed on the members of his party that he did not wish any fuss made about his big game expedition. Still, things will out, and the news and courage which he displayed during those ten weeks have now become, more or less, public property.

And they are characteristic of the man as is the modesty which endeavored to keep the expedition a secret. In Egypt, where he commanded the brigade of guards, which formed part of Lord Wolseley's army, that crushed the rebellion of Arabi at Tel-el-Kebir, he exhibited a coolness and resource which commanded the admiration both of his fellow-officers and of the men whom he commanded. And during his seven years' soldiering under the scorching sun of India, he cheerfully submitted to all the hardships which soldiering in that trying land involves. The duke has always a very simple, winning way with soldiers, for they know how to appreciate modesty in their superior officers, and their hero is always one who "does not advertise." His self-effacement, or, rather, his self-suppression—is, indeed, one of his finest gifts. He thought himself badly treated by being given the Mediterranean high commissionership, where the authority was of a phantom kind, but he resigned the office, when he found out that he had been given a command which did not exist, without any undignified remonstrance. And, although the two were on good terms, the duke never was as close in King Edward's confidence in affairs of state as he was in Queen Victoria's. Nevertheless, he knew how to accommodate himself, in a manner of befitting dignity, to the altered condition of affairs which came about when his brother ascended the throne. But King George places, and with justice, great reliance on the sound judgment of the brave soldier, the keen sportsman, the exemplary husband and father, the gentleman of the very first water, who will visit our city on Saturday.

A Four-Year-Old Scholar.

London Chronicle.
Perhaps the most marvellous infant prodigy on record was Christian Fleischer, born at Lubek, February 6th, 1721. At the age of ten months he could speak and repeat every word which was said to him, when twelve months old he knew by heart the principal events narrated in the Pentateuch; in his second year he knew most of the Bible by heart, and before he was three he learned to speak Latin and French. In his fourth year he employed himself in the study of religion and the history of the church, and his fame as a scholar spread, so that the king of Denmark sent for him and was amazed at his learning. But before he was five years of age he fell sick and died, and saved the world a horrid nuisance.

The more a man respects the Ten Commandments the more he can want to break them when the gas bell rings in.

Nothing is more disappointing than the actions of a pretty girl who thinks her good looks is an excuse for impoliteness.

The Rayo Lamp
It Never Flickers
The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light. The Rayo is the best lamp made.
It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too. You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house. The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and reviv. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.
Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive literature to any agent of
