But in order to demonstrate their independence the lords reected the naval prize bill, making efective the declaration of London, to which all civilized nations subscribed. The declaration provides a new naval war code for the government of the Hague. The consideration which appears to have influenced the House of ords was the fear that England' onduct of a maritime war would be adjudicated by a court composed part-ly of such nations as Servia and the Latin-American republics.

It is expected that the ministry will present the home rule bill in March or April. It is evidently the earnest ntention to restore Irish autonomy In fact, Col. Zely, under-secretary for war, declared in a speech in Ulster that the government would stand or
