DECIDES AGAINST BOLDT.

Millionaire Hotel Keeper Loses U Action at Watertown.

After being out for five hours the ury, at Watertown, N.Y., in the case of Samuel J. Porter against George C. Boldt, returned a verdict in the supreme court in favor of the plainif for $1,500. Action was brought to recover $10,000 damages for in juries received by the plaintiff when a water tube in the boiler of Mr leaving for their home in Seeley's Boldt's steam yacht, the Louise, ex oloded during the summer of 1910. Porter was employed as engineer of the yacht at the time of the explosion. His claim for damages was based upon the contention that hi escape from the engine room was prevented by haggage witch, he said, was piled over the emergency hatch. He was severely scalded by steam and hot water before he was able to get out of the boiler room. Amon the witnesses who appeared in the case was Mr. Boldt.
