AND ALL BECAUSE IT WAS VALENTINE'S DAY.

sive Pictorials Dying Out-Demand Nowadays for Better Class of Valentines.

The "posties" in Kingston, were love-laden" on their rounds, to-day. and all because it was St. Valentine's lay. Indications go to show that the old-time custom of exchanging valenines, shows no signs of dying out in lingston, for a goodly number of hough perhaps not as many as in ears passed.

Twenty years ago the custom ending valentines was taken quite eriously, In fact, some regarded the ending of a valentine just like a prososal of marriage. However) nowalays, this touch of romance has been lropped. To-day, brothers, sisters, ousins, aunts and uncles all send alentines to each other, and it is all aken as a remembrance, just like a gift at Christmas.

The old custom of sending offensive pictorials is dying out, and it is a good thing, too. Of course, there are juite a number of the old style caricature being used, but dealers ell you that the demand is for etter class of valentines.

St. Valentine's night is always an ceasion for parties and dances, and number will be held in the city.
