

HOPE TO DOMINATE PARTY HAS GROWN ENORMOUSLY IN STRENGTH.

Socialists in Control—Wide Programme, Including Land Nationalization and Reversal of Osborne Judgment, is Adopted.

London, Feb. 14.—Since the Liberal party returned to power in 1905, and particularly since it has depended for its political life on the support of the labor and nationalist parties, more legislation of the kind advocated by trades unions has been enacted than in any similar period in the history of the country. Still, labor, or at least the independent labor party, which is largely dominated by the socialists, is not satisfied.

Benjamin Turner, the president of the party last year, said that the party had not done all that it should have done, the fault lying in the fact that it lacked numerical strength. Its business now is, he added, to make it the dominating, controlling, guiding and ruling party of the state.

In the last few years the laborites have been enacted into acts of parliament. The trades disputes act, which permits peaceful picketing during strikes; an act to provide for the feeding of school children; the compensation act, which provides for the payment of work for the unemployed; a fuller adoption of the trade resolution, which makes obligatory the payment by government contractors of the union rate of wages in force in the district where the work is done; an improvement in the position of the workers in the government dockyards; provision of work for the unemployed; the old age pensions bill, the payment of members of parliament, which believes the trades unions of the payment of members who represent their interests in the house; the establishment of labor bureaus, where men and women in search of work may register and be supplied with information as to work obtainable, and insurance against illness and unemployment. This bill, although it does not altogether meet with the approval of the trades unions, has been accepted with the understanding that an effort will be made to improve it, and if possible introduce a non-contributory system.

Pat Loves a Fight.
Hamilton Spectator.
Whatever the Irishmen may think of the measure proposed, they just admire the spirit of the man who proposes it. Pat loves a fight and Churchill he sees a man who is not afraid of a scrap. A weaker statesman under similar circumstances would have easily found it possible to excuse himself from that Belfast meeting. Churchill didn't, because he isn't built that way. And what happens to the home rule bill must always be admitted in Ireland that Churchill is no craven.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR.

Winston Churchill Has Made a Great Impression.

The Right Honorable Winston Churchill was a war correspondent at 20; soldier in India at 22; conservative member of parliament at 25; under secretary of state for the colonies in a Liberal government at 33; next president of the board of trade; next home secretary and lately succeeded as first lord of the admiralty. For a man under thirty-eight years of age Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill has managed to accomplish a good deal. Soldier, journalist, author, politician and possible statesman, surely he has run the gamut of human emotions. He was educated at Harrow, and having passed through Sandhurst, he entered the army in 1895. His career as a soldier was not uneventful. Mr. Churchill served with the Spanish forces at Cuba. In 1897 he saw active service in India for which he was awarded a medal and clasp. He took part in the Nile expedition, and was present at the battle of Khartoum. A medal and clasp were given to him for his services in Egypt.

The next phase of Mr. Churchill's career was journalism. During part of the South African war he acted as special correspondent to the Morning Post. Taken prisoner in November, 1899 he succeeded in effecting his escape within a month, and wrote an amusing account of his flight. After his escape he served with the army and was awarded the medal and six clasps. He has written several books notable in a life of his father, Lord Randolph Churchill.

It would not be an exaggeration to describe Mr. Churchill as the Stormy Petrel of politics. Wherever he goes trouble follows, but he has a knack of coming through the fight with colors flying. Entering parliament as a conservative member for Oldham, he soon made a reputation as a forceful speaker. However, he disagreed with the conservative party on the tariff question, and in 1906 he was returned to the House as the Liberal member for a Manchester constituency. In 1908 he was defeated by Mr. Joyson.

Isn't It Awful.

The end draws near, and the day of decay of British connection is dawning. We have Mr. Foster, a member of the British-born government, actually crawling to the Yankee railway commission to carry Canadian wheat to divert Western Canadian traffic to north and south lines, instead of east and west. We have the Duke of Connaught actually visiting the United States and being friendly—hale fellow, well met—with our southern neighbors. Now, we have the duke going wrong again. He is going fishing for salmon next summer in New Brunswick, and will be the guest of the Tobique Salmon Club, whose president and other officials are New York Yankees. Was it for this that the "British-born" was herded and "hunted" to the polls, last September, to bring about non-intercourse with our neighbors to the south, in the interests of the salvation of the flag and the integrity of British connection?

Fine Equipment and Service.

A letter received by the Grand Trunk Pacific railway from a prominent business man residing in Seattle, concerning a trip he made from Winnipeg to Edmonton, contains the following extract: "Going out to Edmonton I went through your train several times, and I want to compliment you on your equipment and service. I consider it so far the best Canadian Transcontinental service I have ever seen, and I have travelled over all the American Transcontinental railways."

For Value Received.

The wishy-washy nature of the proposed Dominion tariff commission as explained by Hon. Mr. White, leads to the suspicion that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association has been getting in its fine work. The manufacturers have good reason for thinking that the Borden government owes them something, and they are now collecting the bill.

MARRIED AT MOOSEJAW.

An Event in Which a Leeds Boy Participated.

Moosejaw Times.
A very pretty wedding took place on Jan. 31st, in St. John's Anglican church, when Miss Elizabeth Preston Lewis, daughter of Mrs. L. Sidney Lewis, of Newton, Ont., became the bride of George Edgar Stanton, formerly of Newboro, Ont., and now of Innes Hill, Alberta. Ven. Archdeacon Wallace Johnson officiated.

The bride, given away by her brother-in-law, William McDonnell, 188 Main street north, looked charming in a suit of Copenhagen blue trimmed with black satin. She wore a black velvet picture hat trimmed with carnation plumes and carried a white prayer book. Mrs. William McDonnell, who acted as matron of honor, also carried a white prayer book. She wore an old rose satin gown with ecru lace and white trimmings and a large picture hat. R. Preston, of Outlook, cousin of the bride, performed the duties of best man.

Miss S. B. Stanton, of Outlook, sister of the groom, was present and was gowned in pale green silk. Mrs. L. Sidney Lewis, mother of the bride, wore black striped silk with old lace trimmings.

Thomas Wrigley very efficiently presided at the organ and while the bridal couple were coming in played Mendelssohn's wedding march and while they were leaving the church he played the wedding march from Lobengrin. The groom's gift to the bride was a diamond ring and to the best man a pearl scarf pin. After the ceremony the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. McDonnell, Main street, where a reception was held. The young couple left on the Soo Spokane for Edmonton and other western cities on an extended wedding trip, after which they will take up residence at Hazel Bluff, Alta. The bride travelled in a gown of navy blue with pin strip trimmed with blue satin and Irish lace. The bride was the recipient of a great number of gifts, the majority being in the form of cheques.

Budget From Pittserry.

Pittserry, Feb. 12.—A pleasant evening was spent last week at the home of Robert Barclay, when a high load of young people drove to their home. Games and music were the amusements. A dainty lunch was served at midnight by the hostess. A vote of thanks was moved to Mrs. Barclay and Miss Bell. The pie social held at Robert Barclay's last week was a success in every way. Quite a number from here attended the re-opening of Sand Hill church, Sunday, and also the tea meeting which was held on Tuesday night. Lesley McFadden had returned from Kingston General Hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. Mr. and Mrs. D. McClement have gone to Amberst Island for a short visit. Miss Lilliar Paynter has returned to her home in Kingston, after spending a few weeks with friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Barclay and family are her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Edward McMaster's Mrs. J. McMaster has gone to spend a few days with her brother in Gananoque.

Roosevelt is a Candidate.

Hamilton Times.
Ex-President Roosevelt is quoted as saying regarding the probability of his being a candidate for a third term: "If at this particular crisis, with the particular problems ahead of us at this particular time, the people feel that I am the only man in sight to do the job, then I should regard myself as shirking a plain duty if I refused to do it." It will be remembered that in 1904, immediately after his election, he said: "On the 4th of March next I shall have served three and a half years and this time and a half years constitute a first term. The wise custom which limits the president to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination." Three years ago he reaffirmed that decision. Does Roosevelt entertain the idea that he is the only man having the capacity for the job?

Efficiency and Salary.

Twentieth Century Magazine.
In his book, "The Utility of All Kinds of Higher Schooling; an investigation," published in 1910, Mr. Crane says: "The college men talk as though they knew all about every other man's business and that they could manage affairs better than the business men themselves. College professors and teachers are prepared to give advice on all subjects. As $2,000 a year teachers, they tell us how to turn out $5,000 and $10,000 a year business men. Isn't it a bit strange that I never discovered to these smart college fellows to go into business for themselves? Why draw a small salary for telling young men how to draw big salaries if you are capable of drawing the big salary yourself?"

Hurling Dickens' Memory.

Ottawa Journal.
It is well that Charles Dickens, whose will was probated for $465,000, could not, by any prescience, glance into the future and see the present necessity for the testimonial to his descendants. And it is an ironic situation that this testimonial should be for the grand-children of a man—who as might be seen from the extract of his will, published in Wednesday's Journal—expressed the direct wish that no testimonial or anything of the kind should be gathered or asked in his name.

HOUSE OF MILLION STONES.

Took Letter Carrier Twenty-six Years to Complete.

A remarkable structure was built by M. Cheval, a French letter carrier, out of a million stones he collected while on his route. The collection of these stones, which were not picked up haphazard, but had to be more or less carefully selected for the different purposes for which they were designed, took no less than twenty-six years, says the Chicago Examiner.

Work was commenced before the whole number of stones were gathered together, but it was not until the last stone was in place that the patient workman took up his residence in the mansion, of which he was the sole architect, builder and owner.

No less than 3,500 sacks of cement were required in the construction of the edifice.

One part of it represents an Arabian mosque and a Buddhist temple, another a Swiss chalet, a third a Chinese pagoda, a fourth Egyptian gods, reproductions of prehistoric animals and other queer figures are used to decorate the place, and solidly retrace passages are filled with stone figures of every description.

There are no less than twenty rooms which are filled with the statues and other decorations designed and executed by the versatile letter carrier.

The floors and stairs are all fashioned out of cement, which in some instances is studded with stones of various colors.

The structure does not present the appearance of a letter carrier's box.

patheville) appearance one night is led to expect from the manner in which it was erected. On the contrary, there is every evidence of a plan carefully designed beforehand and carried out with the special materials contemplated for the purpose.

"For ten years," said M. Cheval, "I had treasured in my mind the idea of building a fantastic palace with a grotto, towers, sculpture and other embellishments. Each stone was collected by me on my daily rounds at Hauteville, in the department of Drome, France.

"When I first commenced the work my neighbors thought I was mad but now they think differently. The palace is the show place of the vicinity. Every day over a hundred English, German and American tourists pay me a visit.

"I have built my own tomb in the centre of the building, and the sarcophagus is considered perhaps the most remarkable feature of the entire work. It is elaborately carved.

"Now that I see that the edifice creates so much interest, I do not regret the years of work I put into it, and when I die the place will be a constant reminder to those who see it of what can be accomplished by patient effort."
