Tips For the Farmer
BY USCLE JOSE.

Weddel & Co., of Liverpool, report that during the past summer the greatest drought in the last half century was experienced in the dairy producing countries of Europe. Owing to the drought in Europe, and similar drought here, British imports of butter during the last three months of 1911 showed a falling off of twenty-one and a half per cent as compared with 1910. It is believed that home production in Britain fell off to a similar extent. As a consequence dairy supplies in store in Britain are unusually short. Not only this but, owing to the shortage of feed, the number of dairy cows in Great Britain and continental Europe has been considerably reduced.
All of which points to a continued short supply of dairy products for the present year, and the prospect is, therefore, for a continuance of high prices, provided industrial disturbances do not intervene.

Notes of Interest.
A writer in the American Agriculturist says he finds that sheep will take as much or more water in winter than they do in summer. If it is possible, he says, the water supply should be near the barn or shed and in any case sheep should have water at least once a day.

The brood ewes that are to drop early lambs should, he adds, be fed liberally on clover hay, bran and oats with a little shelled corn. They should be in the pink of condition at lambing time to insure a good milk flow to nourish their lambs.
Owing to the delay in threshing in the west last fall, and to the inadequacy of the transportation facilities since afforded, large quantities of western grain are lying exposed to the weather at various points on farms in the west. If this grain is not moved before it becomes wet enormous losses will be sustained by western farmers.

As a means of relieving the congestion the ice has been chopped off of the river at Fort William and boats now lying in the harbor have been moved up towards the elevators in order that they may be loaded and thus leave more space in the elevators. The extra cost of doing this will amount to $2,000 per vessel, and it is estimated that forty vessels in the harbor will provide accommodation for 4,000,000 bushels of grain. Even that, however, will come far short of relieving the situation.

A London correspondent of the New York Sun says a Polish landowner is using camels instead of horses for farm work. This landowner imported eight camels at a cost of $75 each, and finds that they do far more work than the same number of horses. They will eat almost anything and cost much less to feed than horses do. While the animals can stand any amount of cold they need covering when the rain is heavy.
A feed platform for the hogs will give them cleaner feed and save its cost in grain.

Don't be too "fimeky" or "nice" to part the hair around the hogs' ears and along their spine to see if they are being troubled with lice or any other kind of parasites.
Any hauling that will be necessary across the meadow must be done at once, while the earth is still frozen. Hoof and wheel cut the life out of the meadow lands if loads are drawn over it after the frost begins to leave the ground.

This is about the time of the year that the farmer ought to be looking around for material with which to strengthen and improve his dairy herd. A first-class bull is indispensable, and if you will add two or three more pure blooded milkers to the herd, your improvement and consequent higher profits are assured.
The lambs will begin to come on before long and the farmer must remember that they are one of the most susceptible animals to chill that there is on the farm. Have a good, snug place for them; get them started right away; start them wrong and the influence of such neglect is pretty sure to cling to them, even till they are matured—even if you are "lucky" enough not to lose them altogether, as you ought to if you fail to care for them properly.

No matter how carefully the milk cow is fed and watered she will not do her best at the pail unless she receives gentle treatment. This is a rule that has no exception and the man who does not have a natural liking for the work of caring for cows will do well to leave dairying alone.
In order to keep apples through the winter they should be stored in a dry room where the temperature can be kept as near the freezing point as possible. When we have learned how to do this we will find that we have several varieties growing in our orchards that are good keepers.

It is possible that the advice on dairying and the care and feed of dairy cows that is given out by dairy schools and experiment stations goes a little farther than the average farmer cares to follow, because he does not have the time nor the equipment. The advice is good, though, and we are safe in following it as nearly as we can.

Family Stock Company.
In the Farm and Fireside there is a most interesting account of a family in Ohio which has formed a stock company to take up farming on a large scale. There are forty-one people in the family. Following is an extract from the article:
"The corporation is called the Kirby Family, Incorporated, and is composed of the father and mother, nine sons and three daughters, together with the husbands, wives and children of the younger members of the company, all aggregating forty-one stockholders."
The father of this numerous family, William Kirby, is president of the Kirby Family, Incorporated, with his wife, the mother of the twelve children. On the board of directors are the older sons and son-in-law, they being selected by virtue of their greater experience and wisdom in farm management and business.

"The corporation is somewhat in the nature of an experiment, even in California, where many co-operative and communistic industries have been launched in times past. An initial track of 100 acres of land, under complete irrigation and subject to intense farming, has been purchased, and thereon the active stockholders of the company will find employment. The tract, and such adjoining tracts as may be acquired later, will be planted largely to orange and olive trees, while poultry culture and the stock raising will be made prominent adjuncts.

"The organization is a close corporation, only relatives being entitled to hold stock, and each stockholder has the privilege of employment from the company, if he so desires, at a regular wage. Any profits which may accrue will be treated in the shape of dividends, paid at such periods as the board of directors may deem expedient. The company has ample capital, coming largely from the estate of the elder Kirby, in which he desired his children to share during his lifetime. Future operations of a wholesale and extensive nature are contemplated as soon as the company can develop its plans. Modern, scientific methods will be applied, not only to the crop-growing, but also to the farm-management and to the selling end of the enterprise.

"In the way of reducing expense and labor, certain co-operative features have been adopted, although each family retains its individuality and the right to expend the wages and dividends of its members as it sees fit. On an elevated portion of the tract already covered, a large cluster of buildings will be erected, the centre of a spacious court, the dwelling of the father and mother will be built, and therein will be arranged a large kitchen and dining-hall where meals for all stockholders and workers will be served, the food being provided by the company. The wives and daughters who help to prepare and serve the meals will be regular wage-earners. Located around the court will be separate bungalows for each of the families and one or more for the unmarried stockholders. Shaded avenues will lead from the bungalow to the main building, and the whole grounds will be beautified by landscape-gardening.
"This plan of forming a giant co-partnership by the head of a large family, instead of making unqualified gifts to the sons and daughters, is one which may well be watched with interest. Ever since the prodigal son wasted his father's substance, the problem of dividing the hard-earned accumulation of a lifetime so that it might be enjoyed by the natural heirs, and yet conserved and safeguarded, has perplexed the householder. Possibly, the Family, Incorporated, and thus bound together by ties of law as well as by ties of blood, is the solution.
"Likewise, the co-operation, the diminution of waste and misdirected effort, the loss sustained by buying and selling in small quantities—might this not amount to a sum sufficient to pay a handsome annual profit?"

'MARVELOUS' CURES OF SKIN ERUPTION
Four Children Constantly Scratching. Nearly Two Limbs Off. Cured in a Month by Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

"Two of my daughters and two of my sons were suffering from very bad boils, the doctor ordering my daughters to have all their hair cut off so as to prevent it from spreading all over their heads, and to get to the seat of the trouble in order to be able to rub in the ointment, which he gave them, well into the sores. These sores started in a small spot on the neck of one of my daughters, and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies. The doctor said they were getting worse, but they seemed to be daily getting better. The sores formed like little boils, then filled with matter, and looked like abscesses. They became all inflamed and brittle, causing them to be constantly scratching themselves. This made the sores larger and larger and then burst and spread all over their heads, and in some cases down their backs and bodies.
