The van with the convicts created a good deal of interest, on its way in Montreal street. The party drove over Princess street, and as quite a number were on the street at the time, the van was the centre of all eyes. After reaching Princess street, the van took to the side streets, so as to keep in the background, as much as possible, and in short order the desperadoes were soon registered behind the big stone walls which have taken care of so many men, dangerous to be at large.
