LIVINGSTON BROCK STREET

LIKELY ANOTHER WEEK

BEFORE THE HARBOR WILL BE OPEN FOR NAVIGATION.

The Latest Opening in Recent Years Was in 1898, When Navigation Opened on the 13th of April.

Unless the ice goes out of the harbor next Sunday, this will be the record year for the opening of navigation within the last sixteen years. In 1896, the navigation opened on the 11th of the month. Last year navigation opened on the 13th of April. The earliest that navigation was opened in recent years was in 1898, when the boats were running on March 13th.

Navigation opened at Toronto on Wednesday, and the mild weather must certainly be coming this way. The marine men around the water front are busy getting their boats ready, as they expect the harbor to be open next week. They state that they think it will be near the end of next week before the Pierpoint will be able to try and break her way through. She is being fitted up, and will soon be ready.

To Mayor Francis Hugo of Watertown, N.Y.

Water town, N.Y., Times. Is President Taft flirting with Mayor Francis M. Hugo? It looks that way. The president has sent the mayor his picture properly inscribed. The photograph is a large one, and this is the inscription, written in the president's own hand, "Mayor Francis M. Hugo, with grateful appreciation, William H. Taft."

Mayor Hugo is a delegate to the republican national convention, and it looks as though the president wished his support and was thanking him in advance for it.

Mayor Hugo appreciates the picture and will write the president to that effect. He feels that it was a most kindly and thoughtful thing for him to do, to send it. As to whether or not the mayor will vote for Taft at Chicago, he is as reticent as ever. "I still adhere to my original position that I will represent the people of this congressional district just as near as I possibly can," said Mayor Hugo again to-day, when the matter of his vote at the Chicago convention was again broached.

The first sailing from Quebec will take place on May 11th, the Niagara, 15,700 tons, being the pioneer vessel. Cabin and steerage passengers and general cargo will be carried.

EFFECTS OF HOME RULE

WOULD BE TO MAKE IRELAND SOLID UNIT

In the British Empire—Premier Explains the Bill to the British House of Commons.

London, Eng., April 11.—The commons chamber was crowded to suffocation when Premier Asquith arose amid thundering cheers of the liberals and nationalists. He said he began where William Ewart Gladstone left off nineteen years ago, to plead the cause of Ireland and the solidarity of the British empire. The cardinal principle of the bill, he pointed out, was the supreme authority of the imperial parliament, while at the same time, in respect to Irish concerns, he outlined the form of the Irish parliament, which would consist of two houses, with power to make laws for the good government of Ireland.

Premier Asquith was specific in pointing out that the bill excluded from Irish parliamentary control all imperial questions. The whole effect of home rule would be to make Ireland a great solid unit in the British empire.

Mr. Asquith concluded his speech by boldly denouncing Bonar Law's charge made in Belfast this week that the government had sold itself for the Irish vote. Thereupon Lender Law rose and facing Mr. Asquith squarely, repeated the charge.

At this the government supporters rose in a body and there were cries of "Muzzle him, muzzle him!" When order was finally restored, Sir Edward Carson replied to Mr. Asquith's speech. He declared that the bill was unworkable and traitorous, and must result in the disruption of the empire. He was still speaking at 5 p.m., London time.
