Vaseline

A Blessing To Mothers

A mother thinks carefully when choosing an ointment for her baby's tender skin. It must be pure through and through—must contain nothing that can possibly harm.

This is what makes "Vaseline" such a great blessing to mothers.

It is pure—absolutely pure—the best and safest ointment for the skin from earliest infancy.

"Vaseline" is a great cleanser. It works into the pores and takes away all dirt and impurities with it. It keeps the skin fresh, clear and soft, as Nature made it.

There are several different preparations of "Vaseline," put up in collapsible tin tubes which insure unguated purity. No dust or dirt can reach the contents—even your own hands touch it until the moment of use.

Our free "Vaseline" booklet tells all about these preparations and gives many other useful household hints. Write for your copy today.

PAYING CANADA'S RENT

HOW THE ABORIGINE IS RECOUPED FOR HIS LOST LANDS.

Four Dollars a Year Per Man, Woman and Child, Free Schooling, Medicine and Aid in Time of Dire Necessity is What the Dominion Gives Him—He Seems Content and Happy on His Allowance.

You have heard of Canada's duty to herself—and of Canada's duty to the Empire. You have gloated over her natural resources, you have debated hotly the question of reciprocity and its probable bearing upon the future welfare of the country. But was it ever brought home to you, prosperous Canada, that this Canada of yours is not yours after all; that it is a leasehold property, leased by the many from the few, and that you pay every year a portion of the rent?

We are here tenants in the land which we so proudly call our own. Not so many miles to the northward, living a simple life in tents and lowly shacks, dwell our landlords. They are not harsh and overbearing; these owners of our soil; nay, rather are they humble and submissive in spirit, thankfully accepting from their tenants a paltry handful of crumbs, let fall from the heaped-up table of the land's fruitage, the fullness of which they were incapable of reaping for themselves.

Among the Cabinet Ministers of the Dominion, Canada numbered the Minister of the Interior. From his office at Ottawa he directs those administrative departments which come under his control. The Department of Indian Affairs is one of these. It is presided over by a Deputy Minister and carries on its work through the medium of Indian agents distributed throughout Canada, and one of the most important duties of each agent consists in "paying off" the Indians in his district, according to the treaties made at different times in the past between the redmen and the whites.

James Henry Pedley in a recent article in The Saturday Globe thus vividly describes such ceremony at Flying Post, New Ontario, last summer:

A hush, then, at a word from the interpreter a young man dashes himself from one of the groups and saunters forward, tugging at the knot in a bandana handkerchief he carries. This, opened and unwound, he hands to the agent a small blue ticket, which will be found to bear the printed words "The James Bay Treaty, and in manuscript the number which is his on the official books and his name, John Wolf. The books show that last year he was paid twenty dollars, his offspring numbering three. To find what changes, if any, have taken place during the last twelve months is the task of the interpreter. A short colloquy in Ojibway, then the interpreter turns to announce that, although one of the children died—tuberculosis—in the spring, the family still shelters five members and points in explanation to a papoose which its mother is rocking in her arms. The birth and death duly recorded, the clerk with ostentation counts out twenty dollars into the father's hand and sees them folded up along with the blue ticket in the big red handkerchief. The full-bred Indian whether from treacherous cunning or ignorance, or both seldom counts the money he paid him. Honest himself (and no one is more so than he), he has perhaps not learned, though he has had many an opportunity, that all men are not as conscientious as he is.

"Another summons, and another pair of familiar lounges forward, his halting feet and impassive countenance giving one the impression of extreme boredom, but that is the way of his race and must be so interpreted. The former process is repeated, except that this time it is an elderly man who stands before us and his family has grown up. One of his daughters, moreover, has found a husband since last pay-day with whom she will henceforth be paid. This worthy advances next to receive a ticket, he has been paid under his father's name, and to have himself set down as the head of a family. Pride—the one emotion which the redskin does not blush to reveal—shines from his countenance, and it is with a great show of dignity that he takes his eight dollars and bears the sun off to his "wagan."

"After the family men have all been paid come the widows and the orphans and the lone old men of the tribe. Here is a woman who last year received twenty-four dollars. But in the early fall, as the family journeyed toward the hunting grounds, her eldest son, the provider, was drowned. None of the others was as yet old enough to hunt successfully. The tubercular germ breeds fast in a stiff wigwam, and it delights to prey on ill-nourished bodies. With the spring the mother returned from the boat—alone; her hand shook as she took the four dollars given her, and hobbled back to sit silent among the jangling squaws. Many are the bashful youngsters dragged forward by stern guardians, and made deliver up the tickets which they hold crushed in tight-clenched hands. The hush is a cruel dwelling place, even to the men whom it has reared, and many a father meets his death before his children have learned to know him.

"There is little or no attempt at deceit, so great is the respect for truth which obtains among these 'uncivilized' peoples of the north. Finally, when all have been paid, the Factor, who has watched the proceedings from the doorway of his store, presents the tickets of such absence as have left them in his hands, and receives the money healed for. Payment for 1911 is complete."

TURNING THE TABLES.

Dramatic Author Becomes "Quits" by a Ruse.

An entertaining story of how a dramatic author adopted an artful ruse and became quits with the censor is related by Mr. Laurence Cowen in The Pall Mall Gazette.

Last December two of Mr. Cowen's plays were refused licenses by Earl Spencer, the then Lord Chamberlain. "One, 'The Pity of It,' was, in effect, a scene from my licensed play 'The World, the Flesh, and the Devil,'" writes Mr. Cowen. "produced over three years ago and which continued only to this very day. I say nothing in regard to so impossible a decision."

The other play entitled "Tricked," was returned to the author for alterations, and when altered was still refused a license, the Lord Chamberlain stating that his alterations would make it fit for public representation. The license was accordingly refused.

Then Mr. Cowen decided on a bold attempt to demonstrate that the censor's attempt had done him "a great wrong," and how he succeeded in a story well worth the telling.

He wrote another play—not really another, for in structure it was exactly similar—containing everything fundamental to the plot basis of "Tricked." Characters were given different names and stations in life, but they did every vital deed, and acted, in the same motives and material, as in the original play, and with a delightful sense of intelligent anticipation Mr. Cowen called the play "Quits!"

This was sent in for license on Jan. 6, Mr. Cowen borrowing for the purpose the professional name of a relative. In Jan. 22 the Lord Chamberlain wrote after taking the opinion of the Advisory Board a license could not be issued. Having suggested that the play might be altered, the author on Jan. 26 attended by appointment at St. James' Palace and saw the Comptroller, Sir Douglas Dawson.

No curiosity was expressed as to Mr. Cowen's identity, and he was announced as the gentleman who wrote under the name he had sent in. A friendly discussion ensued, and the author was asked what arguments he gave several and a decision. He Lord Chamberlain was asked to embody them in a letter to be laid before the Advisory Board. This was done. On Feb. 10 the play was licensed.

Continuing his story, Mr. Cowen writes:

"I am very grateful to Sir Douglas Dawson for the service he has rendered me; but if 'Tricked' cannot be licensed, then of a certainty 'Quits' should not; if 'Quits' is licensed (as it now is), then the ban on 'Tricked' is an outrage, as wicked as it is illogical. If 'Tricked' is unfit for publication—vide the Lord Chamberlain and his Advisory Board—then I am bound to frankly admit that 'Quits' is beyond the pale.

"The broad fact remains: 'Tricked' is not only a prohibited play, but an improper one for the public, and its highly moral tone is certified by the Lord Chamberlain; they are, nevertheless, as pieces of stage craftsmanship, identical."

"May I now, without irreverence, bring down to earth the lofty and airy friend of the public who duty in the licensed play of the two under review: 'Now, dear lord, are we quits?'"

SPRINGFIELD, MONTREAL, P.Q. Dept. 412

One of Beresford's Stories.

Lord Charles Beresford kept his birthday recently, says Modern Society. He has had down his flag for the last time, but his record as a warrior remains unrivaled. To quote Viscount Wolsley's tribute, he has been "an officer whose readiness of resource and whose ability as a leader are only equalled by his courage and daring." Many good stories are told of him, but the following may be new to some readers. Many of the Beresfords have been in the Church, and Lord Charles' father began his career in Holy Orders, and ended it as Marquis of Waterloo. He was also an actor and a sportsman, and his sons followed in his footsteps. On one occasion an old friend of the family who disapproved of sport went up to the youthful Charles and said gravely: Do you suppose that the Apostles sat on the Sabbath Day? "Perhaps not," the young man replied. "On a certain day, however, they were seen to be engaged in a game of polo." Lord Charles' father was a sailor and a politician as well known, but he has many other hobbies, which include gardening, turning, house-building, boat-building, and carpentering.

This Coffee Pot FREE

Why Dalton's French Drip Coffee is so Wholesome, Delicious and Economical

When you have once tasted Dalton's delicious French Drip Coffee, made in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you will never be tempted to drink ordinary boiled Coffee again.

The Coffee berry, or bean, is protected by nature from the insect world by a tough outer shell or husk which contains tannin and other acid, bitter principles which are poisonous to insects and certainly not wholesome to the human system.

Other roasters of Coffee do not remove this bitter husk, and this is why many people find that ordinary Coffee does not agree with them. Not only that, but the usual way of roasting Coffee in cylinders over coke or gas fires, drives off the volatile essences, so essential to aroma and flavor.

The DALTON way is to throw the Coffee berries against an intensely hot flame. This roasts them in half the time and prevents the volatile essences being driven off. Then the Coffee is cooled by a special process, during which a strong suction air-blast blows off all foreign substances. Next comes the grinding, during which another powerful air-blast removes the poisonous, bitter outer shell. The Coffee contains absolutely no chaff or dirt and is packed in sealed tins, which preserve all the delightful flavor.

We make Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two strengths Mild Blend and Strong Blend. You cannot tell however which you will like the best until you try both and that is why we ask you to buy two tins in our special offer.

MODERN MARTYRS!

The age of martyrs is not passed. There are thousands of women all over the country enduring physical torture and mental anguish almost beyond description. They are not victims of persecution, like the martyrs of old; they are not called on to face the scaffold or the stake; but their sufferings—borne in silence and hidden from the world at large—are scarcely less intense.

These ladies, as a rule, are women and girls of refined and sensitive temperaments. Knowing that their sufferings are due to the condition of the female organs, their native modesty deters them from seeking relief in the earlier stages, and when they do consult a physician they usually get some drug mixture to take internally, which is not more effective than the troubles of a toothache, a bruise, or any other strictly local ailment.

The root of the trouble being in some one of the female organs, the remedy, to be effective, must act on this portion of the anatomy.

This is the secret of the success which always follows the use of ORANGE LILY in the treatment of this kind. It is a strictly local treatment, and it absorbed directly into the parts that are inflamed and congested and its beneficent, soothing influence is not counteracted by the irritation of the delicate membrane is relieved, the congestion is overcome, the discharge of the watery matter which served to oppress the nerves and cause mental depression, the nerves are toned and invigorated, and the sufferer, by the use of life again becomes part of her being. Read the following letters:

Archer, Ont., Feb. 1 '09.
Dear Mrs. Currah— I received your kind letter some time ago, but was feeling so well, and not needing medicine, that I neglected replying sooner. I must say I have more confidence in ORANGE LILY than in any other thing I have ever used. Before I knew of this medicine, I doctor'd away hundreds of dollars, and was dying with inflammation of the womb, a box of ORANGE LILY was sent me through the mail from a friend. The first application I used I was greatly relieved, and in a few months completely cured. This was nine years ago this winter, so you can imagine with what esteem I hold the ORANGE LILY. I am thankful there is such a relief for poor, suffering women, for I have been one of them and can sympathize with others. Your sincere friend, MRS. NORMAN WEAVER, Trenton, Ont., Dec. 4th, 1909.

Mrs. F. E. Currah, Windsor, Ont.—
Dear Friend—I feel it my duty to write you a testimonial as to what Orange Lily has done for me. Last winter I was feeling very miserable indeed. I could scarcely do my housework during my menstrual period, and for two months more I was never free from pain in the womb and ovaries. The pain would run down the back, so I would frequently double up. Then the pain began going up the spine, so I was unable to stand. I finally sought relief in no longer so went to our leading town doctor and had an examination. He pronounced it (I forget the word) a rigid condition of the generative organs, produced by attacks of inflammation. He said I would have to take a course of treatment, and that if failed to overcome the rigid condition I might, in time, be compelled to have the ovaries removed. I objected to that, so I called on Dr. Cooney's symptom blank and forwarded it to him, and he diagnosed the disease the same as my local doctor, so I decided to take Dr. Cooney's Treatment. I have used two jars of Cerate Mince, and two packages of Herbal Womb Tonic and six boxes of Orange Lily. It is eight months since I began the treatment, but I feel like a new woman. I work right through everything now. Hardly know a pain, even during my menstruation period often say, "I would not take $100 and be in the state that I was last March." I feel that Dr. Cooney's Home Treatment is a Godsend to suffering womankind, and shall continue to sound its praises whenever I have an opportunity.

MRS. T. H. HATTON.

ORANGE LILY is a remedy for these ailments, as well as for leucorrhoea, painful periods, irregularities, cancers in their earlier stages, tumours, displacements, lacerations, and all ovarian troubles, has long since passed the experimental stage. No confident sign of this that I will send ten days' treatment, which is worth 25 cents, to any sufferer. ABSOLUTELY FREE. The treatment is inexpensive, used at home, and no physician is necessary. ### Waterloo Centenary.

It has been decided by a committee formed in Belgium to celebrate the centenary of the battle of Waterloo. The committees have undertaken considerable work on a monument to be erected on the field. According to Mr. Emile Antoine Coulon, the secretary, the design will take the form of a hypocaust, beneath which will lie the remains of the fallen soldiers, who were proposed to place statues to Wellington, Napoleon, Blucher, and the Prince of Orange. Upon the base of the monument will be allegorical figures representing Grief, Heroism, and Hope in future peace. The circumstances leading to the erection of the monument will be set forth in French, English, German, and Dutch.

"Who is Pilate?"

During a recent sitting of a town council on the banks of the Clyde, an official report, for literary embellishment or for some other cause, contained a reference to Pilate. One of the speakers, emphasizing the assurance of ignorance sometimes displayed on the judicial bench, observed, "Who is this Pilate?" That a Scotsman should not be acquainted with the notorious Roman official seems incredible, for the procurator of Augustus is said to have been a native of Scotland. There is a legend that he was born at Fortingall, where his father was governor of the Roman camp there.

Ho! For Griddle Cakes and Maple Syrup

Spring is here at last and the sap is flowing free. Now for light, digestible foods and a merrier life under warmer skies. Bring along the griddle cakes and plenty of them. Add plenty of the juice of the maple—the syrup that kings would approve. But, good housewife! If you want your griddle cakes to reflect great credit on you, see that you make them with the flour that is far-famed simply because it "makes more and better bread." Purity is the name of Canada's extra special flour rolled in bright sun-lit mills from Canada's extra special wheat. No other flour can with it compare. It imparts a flavor and a richness to griddle cakes that makes them surpassingly delicious. Make anything the family desires (anything that you can make with flour) with Purity and your reputation as a cook will go up several notches at least.

PURITY FLOUR

"More Bread and Better Bread"

Purity Flour is a richer, stronger flour than the ordinary makes. It takes more water and yields more bread. It also takes a little more shortening, on account of its extra strength, when making pastry. And Purity only costs a little more, although all users of it would gladly pay a good deal more rather than return to common flours. Now, bring on the griddle cakes made from Purity Flour and plenty of good Maple Syrup on the side!

N.B.—Put Purity on your grocery list—you'll keep it there.
