ROBERT SIMONS, GARDEN ISLAND, FELL IN WATER

On Saturday Night—Body Recovered Wednesday Morning.

The body of Robert Simons, Garden Island, who had been missing since Saturday night last, was discovered by John Whitmarsh, when he was out in his gasoline launch, about 11.30 o'clock Wednesday morning. Mr. Whitmarsh, who was, until recently, the keeper of the Four Mile lighthouse, saw the body lying at the bottom, in about six or seven feet of water, about one hundred feet from the shore, at the south-western point of the island.

Simons, who was about thirty-five years of age, was in the city last Saturday afternoon, and returned to his home on the island. He stayed up until midnight. When his mother asked him if he was not going to retire, he replied that he wanted to go out for a few minutes before doing so, and he went out without his hat or coat. She waited for him to return, and when he failed to do so, the family sought him. A search was kept up nearly all night, and then it was concluded that he had been drowned. Grappling has been going on around the shore of the island.

Coroner D. E. Munsell was called, but decided that an inquest was unnecessary, no evidence of foul play appearing on the body, death being caused by accidental drowning.

The late young man had worked for the Calvin company for some years, having sailed on their vessels, part of the time serving as mate. This year he intended to stay ashore. Several who knew the deceased have spoken of his good-heartedness. He was survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Simons, with whom he lived; one sister, Myrtle, at home; and four brothers, Gilbert, engineer on the steamer Simla, and Edwin, John and William, in New Jersey.

RED WAR FOR IRLAND.
"Men Drill in Shipyards and Football Grounds of Belfast."

A Belfast, Ireland, man questioned as to the feeling in that city, regarding the home rule bill now passing through the British parliament, said: "The men of the north will fight, they've about finished talking. There's a hundred thousand army reservists in the north of Ireland ready and willing to shoulder arms."

"I've seen ten thousand men drilled in one night on the Linfield football ground over at Queen's Island. The shipbuilders drill every dinner time. Half an hour of it, they have, marching and counter marching, forming fours and practising skinning. The heater boys and riveters are keen as can be. Fight! Yes they will. They've the arms and ammunition to do it with, too. Some keep them at home, but those who haven't got them know where to go to when the call comes."

"I was one of the four hundred thousand men who took part in the big demonstration Easter Tuesday, the biggest the world ever saw. Five hundred old soldiers met Carson when he came in, every man as ready to shoot when he's called on as he was to cheer that day."

"When Churchill came he had to take to the back streets, Carrick Hill. They call it 'Winston's Walk' now."

FUNERALS OF JUDGE MABEE AND CHARLES M. HAYS.

The Funeral Train Containing Judge Mabee's Body Left Toronto for Port Rowan on Wednesday Morning.

Toronto, May 8.—At practically the same hour this afternoon, the remains of two of the greatest men connected with the railways and transportation in Canada are being laid in their last resting place—Charles Melville Hays, president of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, at Montreal, and James Pitt Mabee, chairman of the Dominion railway commission, at Port Rowan, Ont.

It has been recalled that when the fate of President Hays in the Titanic disaster was established, Chairman Mabee pronounced a feeling eulogy of Mr. Hays, little imagining that the final obsequies over his own remains would take place the same day as those of the subject of his eulogium. This double funeral is a striking comment on immutability of human life. Both these men were of the strongest constitutions; they were considered first class risks by insurance companies. Today they are no more.

At 9.20 o'clock this morning, Hon. James P. Mabee's funeral train pulled out of Union station for Port Rowan. Following the well-known character and tastes of the chairman of the railway commission, an effort had been made to avoid anything spectacular, but a number of distinguished men who gathered to do the last honor to the departed and who filled the long train, made the occasion an impressive one. Divisional Superintendent Gillen, of the Grand Trunk, was personally in charge of the train. The remains were brought to the station about 8.30 o'clock. There was no funeral procession. The casket had been placed in a heavy oak box, and a few flowers placed upon it. It was put on one baggage truck, and two other trucks were loaded with flowers. The three together were wheeled to the siding at the west end of the station, where an express car was waiting. The casket was put in, and the flowers piled about it. They covered nearly the whole floor of the car. When the train was made up, this car came next to the locomotive. Then came three first-class coaches, a private car, special car for members of the commission and the commission's special car, in which travelled Mr. Mabee's relatives.

The train started quietly, and as it moved slowly out of the shop, the people left on the platform stood fire-headed. The regular traffic of the station had been stopped, but as the funeral train disappeared into the yards, it was resumed, and the little silent groups on the platform broke up and disappeared.

Eleven justices of the superior court of Ontario were at the station, headed by Sir Charles Moss, chief justice of Ontario. Hon. T. W. Crothers and Hon. A. E. Kemp, representing the dominion government, and there were representatives present from several provincial governments, for the late James Pitt Mabee was known and honored in every province of Canada, for his justice and equity to all peoples. The Canadian manufacturers' association, boards of trade and other business and professional interests were fully represented at the station as the funeral train pulled out. Interment will take place at quiet Port Rowan this afternoon.

The Late C. M. Hays.
Montreal, May 8.—This afternoon the remains of the late C. M. Hays were conveyed from the family residence on Ontario avenue to their last resting place in Mount Royal cemetery. A short but impressive funeral service was conducted at the house by Rev. Dr. Johnson, pastor of the American Presbyterian church, of which the late Grand Trunk president has been one of the most prominent members. Despite the fact that the funeral had been announced to be private, a large number of friends of the late Mr. Hays assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to his memory. The general offices of the Grand Trunk office was closed between two and three o'clock this afternoon.

Yarker Happenings.

Yarker, May 7.—M. C. Dunn has moved his family to Kingston. His residence here has been purchased by his brother, William Dunn, now a resident of Round Road, agent here. William Dunn will move his family here this week from Newburgh. B. Gilbert has purchased the residence of Fenwick Connolly. The funeral of the late Mrs. Wesley Ainsbury took place Sunday afternoon, at the Methodist church. Deceased being a member of the C.O.C.F., the members turned out and marched at the head of the cortege to the church. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. McMullin, to a very large congregation. Mr. Saulsbury has the sympathy of the entire community in his bereavement. He has two little children to care for, the youngest but a few days old. The remains were taken to the White church burying ground. The remains of the late Jehiel Snider, were brought here for burial, from Kingston. Arthur Smith has gone to Selby, as assistant cheesemaker. Mrs. James Gordon, and son, Percy, are spending a few days at Tanworth. Mrs. H. Good is in England. Sperry Snider, of Kingston, was here and called on some of his old friends. The fire brigade was given a run to Woodmucklet to subdue a fire that broke out in the roof of the residence of B. Babcock. Prompt and energetic work saved the home. Harley Deare has returned from Toronto, and will attend to the setting up of Massey-Harris machines in this section.
