As we grow older we gain a nore matter of fact way of viewing and we lose more and more of the sentiment. There is one sentiment. lowever, if a sentiment it may be alled, which instead of fading rom our lives deepens in our na-ure. That is the love of offspring o parent. One has said that next to religion, the greatest thing was nother love. Not next to, but a part of religion is mother love. The irst divinity we are privileged to see is the loving mother's face. The irst lesson about God is learned from mother. The nearest thing to God's love is mother's love. A sonmay leave his home and set up a new hearth, but mother's love and nother's prayers are still the greatest hold God has on him, and are he ties that help to draw him out of wrong and evil.

The speaker said he was glad a lay had been set apart as "Mother's day." We have all sorts of memorial days now to remind us o the great ones who have passed, but we are likely to forget that "The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." An old Jewish saying was. "God could not be everywhere, so he made nothers." It might be better to may that "God makes Himself felt! verywhere through mothers."

Mothers are deeply responsible for the early teaching of their hildren. The early thoughts never leave us. Thomas Payne said he was an infidel because the first five years of his life had made him so. Mothers should teach their children about God. The things they earn when young they never forget and it is here that the hand that rocks the cradle holds in its hand the fats of nations.
