As the spring process into summer there is always a subtle change in millinery. Smartness yields to grace; correct trimness to a certain artistic picturesqueness; brims grow wider, crowns lower; trimmings are more airy and informal; and less stiff and conventional. By the time the dog-days have arrived the chic little straw hat selected in March for wear with one's tailored suit, is as impossible as would be the veriest velvet and fur toque of midwinter type.

This year's millinery materials lend themselves admirably to picturesque expression. Laces are used for brims, crowns and trimmings; soft changeable taffetas in shaded and pleated effects are combined with lace in wonderfully artistic ways. Maine and not are prime favorites; embroidery is much used on informal hats for country wear—elegant sprigged dimities and cross-barred lavans are pressed into service. In fact, many summer hats seem to have ignored entirely the merits of straw—that lion, established summer standby. When straw is used at all, it is of the soft beautiful quality which may be blown up in the hands without cracking. Some of the new humps and millans are as supple as fabric and the leghorns imitate the genuine panamas in flexibility. Of course one pays a pretty price for such beautiful straws—especially when the shape of the hat is very modish. Many of the straw tan or shantier shapes run up to twenty dollars untrimmed, and this is a price to turn one's hair gray indeed, until one remembers that twenty-five cents' worth of ribbon may insure a cockade will be all the trimming required.

Though the tendency is to favor toward wide-brimmed hats, when mid-summer comes, the jaunty tam styles promise to be popular all season for traveling, driving and the like. These hats have a trick of making their wearers look youthful unless the face is definitely middle-aged—and they fit the head snugly, for all their delightful softness and lightness that they are ideal for wear in windy weather. Many women passed the tams by when shopping for the spring hat, because of the unattractive appearance of these shapes, of the head. The tam must be donned to look like anything at all. Off the head it is merely a big, flat plaque of soft straw with an indeterminate-looking crown that heaves up or caves in, according to the way the plaque is picked up. Pull the shane down on the head, however, and the plaque becomes a jaunty tam with a narrow, outlining brim which presses snugly against a big, soft crown that hugs the hair as flexibly as would a knitted tam of shiner or worsted. These hats are so comfortable and supple that many women are planning to use them all creation and appeared first at Audouin during the spring race meet. Before leaving the smaller shapes for a discussion of the characteristic summer picture shapes a word should be given to the smart ostrich trimmed toques for restaurant wear with dinner and theater costumes in town. The small hat has a place all its own for midsummer wear, but the place is never in the sunlight—or in fact during the day at all. Many of the handsome restaurant gowns, worn at the popular balcony and rooftop garden dining places in summer will be accompanied this year by chic little hats trimmed with ostrich, if the promise of the milliners are to be created. A hat of this kind designed by Virot, is pictured. Very soft satin straw in a light silver-gay tone is draped around a high-crowned shape which has a narrow brim, faced with coral-colored velvet, turning back over the face. Two thick, short plumes, one coral color and the other in shaded grays, are massed at the back of the crown. This smart little toque accompanies a restaurant gown of black shot taffeta made with an upper bodice of black lace over white. The bodice is cut square to show the lace and straps of pleated taffet and black velvet cross the shoulders. In the décolletage are laid folds of coral-colored chiffon which cross in surplus effect. Black satin boots with crystal buttons and long white silk gloves embroidered in gray and coral accompany this dinner costume.

Another attractive little ostrich trimmed dinner hat is of white tanzel with a rolling brim faced with Copenhagen blue taffeta. The brim is caught to the crown, over the left brow with a neat buckled blue feather matching the taffeta facing, sweeps backward over the crown. Could anything be more becoming to a woman with blue eyes? Sometimes the brim of the hat is slashed at one side of the front and the slash is filled with ostrich plumes which raise straight upward above the crown. Most of these small midsummer shapes have brims sharply turned off the face in front, and the facing of the brim is an important matter. While crowns are frequently of the dainty Dolly Varden taffeta in flowered pattern brim facings are almost always plain in color and effect and the taffeta facing is selected after a careful study of madame's eyes, hair and complexion. The amber tones are delectable on women with hazel or brown eyes and the blue and green shades bring out the color in blue or gray eyes. Rose tints are for women with flawless skins, and lavender and mauve only for Dresden china complexions clear white and bluish pink, with no slightest hint of sallowness. It is a discreet woman who avoids lace in summer for even the complexion of milk and roses, or strawberries and cream is likely to become tanned, and the tanned woman in a lilac or violet trimmed hat is an object for pity.

Wide brims distinguish all the out-of-door hats for midsummer wear. An "indoor hat" seems rather paradoxical; but restaurant hats come under this head and so do bridge and luncheon hats which are supposed to be worn out of doors under cover of a carriage or limousine top. The picture hats for afternoon wear with lacerie frocks are things to dream on even if one cannot afford to buy them. Two hundred dollars is really very little to pay, nowadays, for a modish garden party hat trimmed with real lace or handsome plumes. Ostrich becomes more and more popular for summer use and the ostrich hats are the most artistic and distinguished of all the midsummer beauties. A ravishing ostrich-trimmed garden hat by Lewis is pictured. The odd roll of the brim off the face, as though the rim had been twisted back between thumb and forefinger, gives an impression of softness and elegance to the graceful shape of the hat. This hat is of very fine white in cerise color and the brim is tinged with black satin. The stillfully arranged plumes are white with center ornaments of black heron egrettes. One plume encircles the base of the crown and two other rear aloft with the ends wired and twisted sideways in the queer, broken-backed manner that is considered the grand chic just now.

Disease of The Kidneys Brought on By Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Made a Well Man of Me.
I Cannot Speak Too Highly of It.

MR. GEORGE KING

Mr. George King, 458 St. Denis St., Montreal, Canada, a well-known business man of that city, writes:
"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's disease, and after you have gone through the suffering that I have with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble, and have been cured you are pretty apt to remember the medicine that did the work."
"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me well and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since. Every spring and fall I take a bottle of it and it keeps me well."

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease. It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs. The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked. They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work. Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed. However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate. Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body. In the kidneys it is liable to terminate in Bright's disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal. The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal, systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the trouble.

catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty. Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys. That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits. The testimonials given here are only specimens of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

Kidney Disease of Long Standing.
Mr. Samuel A. Paxton, 1118 Troost Ave., Kansas City, Mo., member I. O. O. F. and National Auxiliary Association, writes:
"I am a well man to-day, thanks to your splendid medicine, Peruna. I was troubled with catarrh and kidney disease of long standing when I first began using Peruna. I soon found I was getting better and continued taking it for four months. It cleared out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."
