TORONTO'S REVOLTING CASE.

Dr. Helen MacMurphy, of Toronto, who is carrying on a great educational campaign, in the interest of the feeble-minded, embodied in her report for 1911 facts of the most startling character. The pity is that the report, so brief and yet so comprehensive, is not put into the hands of every intelligent elector in Ontario, and to the end that he would rise in rebellion against the conditions which exist.

"This sort of thing must be altered," said an Englishman, fifty-odd years ago, when he took his son to the outside wall of the workhouse and showed him the village idiot chained to that workhouse wall. "This sort of thing must be altered. If it is not done in my life time mind you help it in yours." The quotation which Whig makes from Dr. MacMurphy's report, and it is a pathetic and peculiar one. The evidence is supplied, overwhelmingly, that Ontario contains many feeble-minded, that they should be removed from harm's way, that by allowing them to run at large, without adequate protection, the social relations becomes pitifully and deplorably lower. Toronto, this week, supplied a dreadful example of what follows when the physically or mentally unfit are uncared for. A lad of twelve years was arrested for an offence so absolutely revolting that the press says the facts cannot be printed in anything save the court's records. The boy is the offspring of a mother who is declared to be "feeble-minded and immoral." She knew what the lad, a moral pervert, was doing, and "treated them as matters of no moment."

The commissioner for juvenile offenders—Rev. Mr. Stitt, formerly of Kingston—is hopeless. Why? He declares that despite the fact that the city council passed a measure sanctioning the establishment of temporary provision for the feeble-minded of the city, "he is still without any place to commit them, and, in even such revolting cases as this is without remedy." Is that not a serious reflection on the boasted civilization of this twentieth century?

WHITNEY'S CHANGE OF POSE.

The change of front by the Ontario government, on the bi-lingual school question, cannot be imagined without a close examination of the parliamentary record. It will be remembered that in the local election Sir James Whitney said "there were no bi-lingual schools," and "my dear Foy" said that if there were any they should cease. Then, to head off Mr. Rowell, who was persistent on the subject, and had definite views upon the subject, Sir James Whitney made an announcement on the last day of the session; and he would not allow it to be discussed.

Sir James said that the government proposed to provide additional inspectors; that state aid should be conditional upon the employment of teachers giving instruction in English; that no textbooks should be used except those authorized by the department of education; that English instruction would begin as soon as the child entered the school and continue only until the end of the first year. The liberals argued, through Mr. Rowell, that the schools were inefficient, that the teachers were not carrying out the regulations, that there should be adequate training schools, a supply of competent teachers, and regulations which would guarantee that the pupils in every school in the province would receive a thorough English education. The same ideas were embodied in an address which Mr. Rowell made a few days before the election.

Mr. Rowell went further and said the scheme of the government would not meet the requirements of the day, and the first and great defect lay in the fact that it did not contain any plan for procuring adequate teachers. The Whitney government had abolished the model schools, including that at Plantagenet, county of Russell, which had been established for the purpose of training French-English teachers. This was a huge blunder, against which the liberals protested, and apparently the government has repented of its act, for it now proposes to erect model schools at Ottawa, Vankleek Hill, Sandwich and Sturgeon Falls.

On this bi-lingual school issue the government has changed its mind several times, and its policy does not yet appear to be settled.

FAILURE OF THE FRENCH.

In Canada the French set the pace in the matter of large families and population. The habitant is happiest when surrounded by ten or a dozen children, and he croons out some lullaby at the end of the day with sweet contentment. He corresponds very largely with the peasant farmer of France, who has no luxurious tastes to indulge and does not worry over the poor fortune he is to leave to his successors.

In Canada the French are regarded as most aggressive, and the average representative of the race is as anxious to preserve his language as he is to preserve his place in the national life. He is doing so well generally, so thrifty and successful, that one fails to appreciate the wall from the French congress which is being held in Quebec city. The main idea is that the French must somehow maintain a separate and distinct position while the idea of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is that they shall become a part of the whole, speaking their language if they will and seeing that their children speak it, but losing themselves in the national ambitions of the Canadian people.

There would be some ground for distress if the French of Canada were having the experience of the French at home. Three times in five years the population of France has shown a falling away, in 1911, to the extent of 34,839, and this has suggested serious meditation with the result that M. Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, the economist, has declared that were this condition to continue in six years the population would cease to exist. Another distinguished man, M. Adolphe Messimy, has a remedy. It is to pay a premium, or a pension to the mother of more than three children, at so much per head, all or a part of the bounty to represent an annuity which she shall receive at the age of fifty.

To make the men of France feel their responsibility, and meet it, there is a provision that all over thirty years of age shall pay a special tax, divided into three categories: (1) celibates; (2) married men or widowers, or men divorced who have never had any children; (3) married men or widowers or men divorced having none or having had only one child. The tax on the first and second categories would be double that paid by the third category. This tax is estimated at about £17s. 6d. for the first two categories, about 18s. 9d. for the third category.

Some good should certainly follow the enforcement of this law. It will cure the people of the idea that marriage is expensive, and may be avoided. Under the new law men will be heavily taxed, and taxed the less when they are contributors to this new pension and annuity fund, and to the extent of about $30,000,000 this year.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mr. Northrup, of Belleville, has been criticizing his leader, Mr. Robert Borden, whose variable attitude on the navy question has divided his party.

The one thing about the Roosevelt campaign is that while he is denouncing the trusts, he combines, the capitalistic traitors, Mr. Perkins, late partner of Morgan & Co., is his chief ally or agent.

In Canada last year over $21,000,000 was distributed in insurance money. A large part of this represented dividends on stock, for the insurance business appears to be very profitable.

Where is Mr. Duff? He is farmer-general of Ontario, and he cannot be found. Perhaps he is imitating so many of our busy men, who mysteriously disappear, and gone fishing.

While the commissioner of agriculture is in hiding somewhere Hon. Mr. Beck is demonstrating the value of his electric milking machine. Mr. Beck is clearly trying to earn his salary, but Mr. Duff is no good.

An Ottawa coal dealer offers to supply the federal government with hard coal at $6.00 per ton, while the city, under contract, pays $7.65 per ton. Some one is either losing money, or he is outside one of the most scandalous rings that has ever operated.

Mr. Roosevelt was coldly received at Oyster Bay when he returned from the Chicago convention. The plain people were clearly unable to understand the man. He was a kind of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and his old friends were afraid of him.

Sir James Whitney said that there were not any model schools in Ontario. Mr. Foy said the same thing. Now they are providing for the perpetuation of these schools, which existed all the while and were poorer than any one imagined they were.

The republican senate would repeal the reciprocity act, but the democratic lower house will not have it. Canada used to boast that it had a standing offer, and for years, regarding reciprocity. The United States will now hold out the olive branch, and Uncle Sam is long in the reach.

The chairman of the railway commission should be not only learned in the law, but a resourceful man and a man of sound judgment. H. Mr. Hanna does not accept why not of for the place to Mr. Cowan. As counsel for the western provinces he is making the railway companies sit up and listen.

Changes While You Wait.
Toronto Globe.
Conservatives in Saskatchewan have the advantage of dominion government support. That is now important, as it involves the practice of tariff changes while you wait.

Standing Together.
Windsor Record.
Windsor loves the man who has pride enough in his town to trade where he makes his living. Let us stick together, boys, and be loyal to our city. We can all help one another that way.

No Easy Task.
Toronto Star.
In the heat of political controversy we may have dropped some harsh remarks about the Whitney government, but our sympathy goes out to the fellows who have to distribute those five millions in Upper Ontario.

Back to a Brewer.
Montreal Herald.
We are all familiar with the experiences of the reformed drunkard who mourns the platform at a revivalist meeting and describes, for a consideration, his horrible past. Let us, however, register a desire to listen to Rev. Herman Kaufman, who has given up the ministry and returned to the fatherland to become a brewer.

Some Chance for Picking.
Peterborough Examiner.
The Russian douma has adopted a naval bill which provides for expenditures amounting to $640,000,000 in the next five years. There should be some pretty good pickings for real Russian patriots in the expenditure of this money; and Russia seems to be very well supplied with patriots capable of appreciating the value of such pickings.

Cut Rates Get Cheap Insurance.
If you are paying cut rates you are only getting cheap insurance, but if you are paying established rates why not get the best security your money will purchase? It is unwise and unnecessary to take an inferior article when you can get the best for the same price. The Manitoba Assurance company, a home institution and backed by a company of gigantic strength, offers you the best security to be had in the Fire Insurance world to-day. Insist upon getting its policy. Agents, C. W. Wright and E. B. Thompson.

EDDY CO'S NEW POWER PLANT.
One of Largest Private Industrial Plants in World.
The E. B. Eddy company, one of the biggest industrial concerns in Canada, in order to keep pace with its ever-increasing business, has decided to erect a hydro-electric power plant which, when completed, will be one of the largest self-owned industrial power plants in the world. Excavation has already been made and the concrete retaining walls built for the generating station, which is expected to be in operation in a little over a year.

power wheels. Apart from this the company is forced to expend annually about $30,000 for power, obtained from the Ottawa and Hull Power company and from the C.P.R. generating station at Deschênes. The new plant will obviate the necessity of purchasing power from outside sources and will centralize the entire water power system of the company.
