MAKE THE EXPERIMENT.

The minister of justice is credited with a desire to solve one of the greatest problems, namely, how some offenders may be punished without at the same time punishing the family or dependents. The incarceration in jail of an offender is supposed to be a punishment for his offence, says the Mail, "and a warning to others that they must not transgress. But to him the punishment may be no hardship, whereas the sufferings of those who depend for their bread upon the wages he made may be unendurable. The efficacy of the punishment would be increased were he put at work of a monetary value, and his earnings paid to his family." Mr. Doherty's predecessor in office, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth, had the same subject in his mind, and failed to hit upon a plan by which the aim sought might be accomplished. It revives, though under different conditions, the difficulty formerly experienced, of providing productive employment in prison and putting the result of it in a competition with the results of free labour. More and more it is becoming apparent, however, that imprisonment rarely reforms a man. It hardens poor men, and makes them less and less susceptible to an influence for good. That being the general conclusion there must, sooner or later, be a change, and the government has experiments—even though it sometimes fail—will be doing the work that is expected of it.

SOME OFFICIAL MISFITS.

The letter carriers are to be commended when they lay aside the tunics which the government provides and the wearing of which in torrid weather is contributory to a waste of energy. The government, conservative or liberal, has not treated the letter carriers aright. They have been submitted to a drudgery or a slavery to which no man of reasonable temperament should be expected to submit; and in some kinds of weather, in summer especially, they are clothed in a most uncomfortable way. Why should they not be given a uniform in keeping with the seasons? Let those who are responsible for the uniform of the letter carriers visit some American city in June, July and August and note how the men who deliver the mails are dressed. The head covering is a light straw or Panama hat; the body covering a light blue serge, the coat a sack and open at the front; the shoes light and well made. Is there any reason why the Canadian post office department should have less consideration for its employees? The same argument, or comment, with regard to uniform, applies to the police force. Its members are not so comfortably attired. The uniform is not up-to-date in any respect, and the heavy peaked cap is the survival surplus of a past dispensation. Why should the guardians of the peace be debarr'd from the comforts of light and easy fitting clothing? Why should they not wear the lightest hats available? here is nothing portentous and awe-inspiring about heavy and ill-fitting clothes. It does not help officers to discharge their duty more faithfully, added it operates against efficiency of service and the marvel is that its use is continued.

NO MORE SHAMMING.

The news from England is that the Canadian ministers have been allowed, most opportunely, to see a rare display of Britain's naval power. Apparently the admiralty has taken special pains to impress the colonial visitors with the greatness of the mother country, in respect of its navy, and its needs of assistance in order to protect its overseas interests, in any emergency. The conflicting emotions of the Canadians—their varied fidelity to the demands of the dominion and the demands of the party—seem to be fully understood by the imperial government, and in its own way, it has been teaching a great object lesson. The writer of Canadian events in the Round Table, an English publication which is credited with absolute independence, and whose articles are said to be without any party bias, has intimated that the wants of Canada suggest either a modification or an extension of the Laurier naval policy. For the time being the naval act has been repealed. The new government has been without any declared naval policy. The premier and his colleagues are said to have gone to England with open minds. They are supposed to be willing to accept advice. Let us hope that this is true. Let us hope that the Borden party will return to Canada with very definite views, with regard to the navy, and that it will submit a definite proposal to the people without delay. Canada is not unwilling to assume its share of the burden of Britain at this particular juncture. It cannot do less than Australia and New Zealand, and it ought to do considerably more. The conservatives wobbled shamefully on the naval question. They did not play a patriotic part. They succeeded to power under false pretences so far as the navy is concerned. They are not entitled to any consideration from the liberals. And yet every lover of his country can be depended upon to vote right if the naval issue comes properly before him. The Whig does not want to see any more shamming on this subject. The country has been sufficiently humiliated, and by the party which is now in power.

THE SANITARIUM IN USE.

The tuberculosis hospital is open for the treatment of patients and has received its first case. Others will follow as last as arrangements can be made for their accommodation. Presently the institution will be recognized as fully established and doing the splendid work for which it was designed. The governors are to be congratulated, for they have put into their work a great deal of energy and it has produced the desired results. The aim of the hospital—bearing the name of Sir Oliver Mowat and memorial of his public virtues and labours—is to treat the consumptives of this district, and to make manifest its value so well that other and similar sanitariums to which government aid is given, but too much is left to the impulses or emotions of masses. The law makes it imperative that the municipalities shall provide comfortably for their helpless and indigent poor. It should go further and insist that the sick from consumption shall be sent to the sanitarium which are equipped for their treatment. Then and only then, can there be such an isolation of cases as will prevent the spread, if it does not in some cases effect the cure, of a disease that is most wasteful of life.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Ottawa Free Press—announces that the water at the capital is still unfit to drink. The medical health officer suggests that it be boiled, which is a comforting suggestion with the temperature at 90 degrees in the shade.

In a recent railway wreck, in connection with which forty persons lost their lives, the driver of the locomotive is said to have been drunk. Its a sad reflection, and emphasizes the demands of the railway management that its trainmen shall be absolutely sober.

The Toronto World solemnly announces that Teddy Roosevelt "will sweep the country," that is the United States. Which suggests that Mr. Maclean has been playing an unusual part, that of Rip Van Winkle. He must really wake up.

The lash, as a great corrector of sensuality, is coming more and more into use. It is the one thing that terrorizes the moral prevert and makes him think. Fines and imprisonment do not ordinarily affect them. Their understanding must be reached through the skin.

Who is the boss of the Ontario cabinet? That's what the Orange Sentinel wants to know. Its curiosity has been aroused by the declaration of Hon. Dr. Reume at the French congress, that the French schools will not go, and that the French children in Ontario will be educated in their own language.

Major Beattie, of London, and at present member of the commons, declines to enter the senate. He is too young. This confirms the idea, which is foolish and absurd, that the senate is the resort of the patriarchs. The senate wants young blood and young life. And Major Beattie should not object to supply both if he gets the chance.

The father in St. Thomas, who laid the lash, in a whipping ordered by the magistrate, upon his seventeen-year-old son, until he fainted, realized too late that he had spared the rod too long. The lad that grows to be a prevert, under his father's eye, is a menace to the family and community.

Twice within a week lightning has struck the transmission lines of the Electric Development company and put them out of business. Comment has been passed upon the unflinching supply of power by the Hydro-Electric commission. Which suggests that Hon. Adam Beck has some arrangement with Providence by which his lines are exempted from damage by storms.

THE SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

An Expensive Work. Stratford Beacon. The Panama canal, says the New York Sun, is almost done. It will cost only $100,000,000 more to finish it.

Ryan All Right.

Toronto Telegram. The evidence of Mr. Travers would have been damaging to Peter Ryan if Mr. Ryan had stood on the pinnacle of his alleged rights and declined to permit enquiry into his private affairs.

Kind to Mr. White.

London Advertiser. A surplus of $38,000,000 and a decrease in the net debt of the dominion for the past fiscal year are Mr. Fielding's legacies. Mr. Foster was not so kind to Mr. Fielding as Mr. Fielding has been to Mr. White.

Women Dismissed.

Hamilton Herald. Until the other day Seattle had two female police constables, but they were dismissed because they talked too much. The Seattle police authorities must be very inconsiderate. How can any lady be expected to confine her conversation to the monosyllables, "Move on?"

Here's a Hot One.

Brockville Recorder. Talk about civil service examinations. And plans being made, as to the severity of the examination, the Recorder will gamble that it can put its hands on at least two cabinet ministers who could not pass the qualifying examination of the lowest grade in the civil service under the present board of commissioners.

Cut the Meat Out.

Montreal Gazette. A New York meat dealer is reported as saying that the wholesale price of beef is now so high that if the retail price is raised in proportion people will refuse to buy. This situation, if it arises, will be the natural corrective of the high price movement. When people cannot buy what they would like, they buy what they can, and a falling demand for the affected article has its influence on the price.

Baseball Played in Ark.

Baseball is of much greater antiquity than is supposed. It was played in the ark when the dove was "put out on a fly." This is the latest saying of the Portsmouth Philosopher. Miss Dollie Hunter, the guest of her uncle, S. Conley, has returned to Toronto.

CHANGING THE GRADE. Railway is Making it Steeper Than Planned. Ottawa, Ont., July 12.—Some sensation has been caused by a statement made by M. J. O'Brien, the well known contractor of Renfrew, to the effect that the Grand Trunk Pacific which has the contract to build the section of the Transcontinental east of Cochrane, is changing the grades from decimal 4 to steeper grades. The effect will be, according to Mr. O'Brien, to lower the efficiency of the new railway which was designed to be the finest in America.
