Rivals Her Daughter in Youthful Beauty

(From Social Register.)

A well-known society matron whose youthful beauty is so well preserved that she is regarded as her daughter's rival, in this respect—though she does not pose as such—attributes her girlish complexion chiefly to two things. She says:

"I am convinced that creams, by overloading the skin and pores, tend to age the complexion. Reprovider was just the opposite effect. It keeps the pores clean, permitting them to breathe, and removes dead particles of outside, which are constantly appearing and which give the complexion that faded look. Whenever my skin begins to get the least bit off-color, I go to the use of a simple face bath prepared by dissolving one ounce of powdered asacite in a half-pint with water. This keeps the skin tight and firm."

WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC

HOW IT IS CARRIED ON IN EUROPE.

Swiss Girls Invited to Go to Spain as Waitresses—Fines Are the Only Penalties.

Geneva, Sept. 6.—In the summer months the Swiss papers contain a large number of alluring advertisements for young girls who are offered splendid places in Spain, Hungary, Argentina, South Africa, etc. Side by side of these advertisements may be read the warning of the federal department of justice and police to the Swiss girls not to accept a place without full inquiries. Not only the police, but the Swiss homes in the chief towns of Europe and America, besides several women's societies, undertake inquiries gratuitously on behalf of the Swiss girl going abroad.

In spite of these institutions and notices many Swiss girls are lured away by the international white slave traffic gang, which, like an octopus, has claim on every large Swiss town.

There are at present many advertisements in Swiss papers for waitresses in Spain at high salaries, but the Swiss consuls report that only men are employed in Spanish cafes. Another recent example is that of a well-to-do woman's governess, being trapped in Egypt, where her "employers" gave her jewellery and dresses, and then presented a large bill with an ultimatum: The girl's relations and friends subscribed the sum and saved her from a life of shame.

Unfortunately, kind penalties in Europe in connection with the white slave traffic consist of fines only, which are promptly paid, and the persons implicated disappear to be replaced by other agents of the gang.

"A GREAT CONCERT."

A Halifax Paper's Tribute to Bishop.

Halifax music lovers, on Aug. 31st, revelled in the delights of a magnificent concert at the Academy of Music. It was given by David Bishop, whose name is a household word among those who follow the best in music or who know anything of it.

It was a great concert, made so by the magnificent voice of Mr. Bishop, his dramatic, sympathetic and artistic interpretation of the music and words he used; by the fact that it was an all-English programme and lastly by the fine accompaniments and instrumental solos, played by Harry M. Gilbert, who presided at the Mason and Birch piano.

The applause after each song was strenuous and brought responses to encore to three numbers. Following "When Two Are Parted," Mr. Bishop sang "Stephen Storrie's 'Pretty Creature' (and of course he was careful to give Storrie's English and not his Italian name). After Tennyson's "Ring Out, Wild Bells," he sang "The Two Grenadiers," and following a splendid rendering of "Danny Deever," with Walter Damrosch's music he sang one of the "Benedicta Ballads."

The programme concluded with a recitation set to music—Longfellow's "King Robert of Sicily."

Death of Wilton Resident.

Wilton, Sept. 4.—On Sunday morning Lemuel Storms passed away at the home of his son-in-law, R. N. Lapum. Although deceased had reached the advanced age of ninety-two he had been very active until a few weeks ago. Besides a widow, there remains a daughter, Mrs. E. E. and Oswald C. Storms, all residing in Wilton. The funeral was conducted on Tuesday morning, at the residence of R. N. Lapum, by Rev. D. Williams, of Morven, a former pastor of the Methodist church here. Mrs. Bernard Mills is confined to the house with an attack of pleurisy, but is much improved. Rev. W. D. P. Wilson and Robert Miller have returned from their western trip. Miss I. Thompson, of Chicago, is visiting friends here, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Orena, Kingston, were visiting at H. Mid's last week. W. Hall's house is undergoing repairs.

RESCUED FROM DEN OF SNAKES.

A Secretaryship at Bronx Zoo Open to girl Without Nerves.

Some young woman who has no prejudice against associating with poisonous snakes and lizards can obtain a comfortable secretaryship by applying to Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles, whose office is in the reptile house at the Bronx Zoological Park.

Until a week ago Mr. Ditmars had a very competent secretary, who liked her work and was not afraid, but last Monday she received a letter from her fiancé, who is unwilling to lose her. He brought such pressure to bear that she resigned, and Mr. Ditmars has so far been unable to replace her.

The office of Curator Ditmars is in a den. To enter it one must first traverse a dark passage on either side of which are hundreds of choice rattlesnakes, pythons, king cobras, and other deadly as well as harmless snakes. In the office proper one is welcomed by a grinning woolly monkey, whose particular job is to stick his fingers in the ink well and leave his mark around the place. A pet hamster is very apt to jump on your back unless you have first made friends with him. Then there is a troop of trained mice to add to the mental occupation of any woman secretary, when dictation is dull. A peek into the adjoining room will disclose a scowling man of stout physique, bathing in the hot sand.

Miss Florence Graham, daughter of a civil engineer, is the young woman who resigned her position at the request of the man to whom she is to be married in the fall. She was not at all uneasy about her surroundings, for she quickly made friends with Rex, the king snake, who is boss of the office, and after proper introductions thoroughly enjoyed the place. But now there is a vacancy and Mr. Ditmars insists it be filled by a young woman otherwise unengaged.

A woman's idea of what makes a highly satisfactory reception is wearing a gown that will excite the envy of every other woman present.

THE VISIT OF THE ANGEL.

Who Records What Kingston Has Need to Do.

By J. W. Mc.

An angel flew over the limestone town as in long, long years ago. The angel of death over Egypt flew and tormented her people so. And he waved a scroll at the grand old burg, and it lit at the mayor's door.

And it said, "Good, Sir, this scroll I bring, take heed on your council floor."

Quoth the mayor, "And what is your name, good sir?" for a fearless man was he.

And the angel replied as he disappeared, "I'm the Twentieth Century."

The mayor went to the council hall and the witan, wise and bold, were ranged all in that ancient hall, where even the stoves are old.

Then up spake the august mayor as brisk as a man might be.

Who was bucking the ways of ancient Rome in the twentieth century?

"This paper," said he, "was given to me, and he who runs may read—Ye all have run and ye all have won—a plague on your cursed speed."

"It was given me as you soon shall see, by the angel called Up-to-date.

I bid you read and take blamed good heed, God grant it comes not too late."

The scroll was opened and read by all and it cut to the very bone.

For it plainly vowed that an antique crowd was reigning in old "Limestone."

Approx the missive made bold to state that the bulging body of men, The fathers, the council, that noble bunch, should be lessened to hall of ten.

That five good men could get through more "biz," with brains and a little "go."

In minutes ten than the bunch of them could dream in a day or so.

And further this pertinent paper said to the men who were ranged around,

That nowhere else in the wide world would a worse main street be found.

Though of lately name and ancient fame, it passed as a thoroughfare. The way it joggles the human frame is more than the heart can bear.

Bumps and bumps and hollows and bumps as far as the eye can see, But not so hard on the eye are these as they are on the seat of me.

Your streets should all be paved by this, and your gradual crossings built.

Although where the street meets the K. and P. there has little blood been spilt.

Your supply of water, said "Up-to-date," is not the kind for me. The typhoid bug, the aquatic thing, should be started in a filter. See! The sewage you dump in front of the pump, that sucks water for the town.

You dose it with dope, kill part of the peril, and the drinks are handled down.

Your yards are blessed with that cool sweet smell that comes from the standing rot.

Of the garbage can that every day should be emptied, but it's not, And the people say in their fretful way, God bless the innocent folk.

For they're not to blame and we're all the same, "the system's a ghastly joke."

I could mention more, said the witten score, but the rest I will reserve.

"Till my words sink in and you work and win the position that you deserve.

You've the situation of all creation, you've advantages out of mind, And ye that arrange 't take this from the angel, "You're dead if you hang behind."

ONE WOMAN DEFENDS HER FAVORITE HAIR DRESSING

While shopping the most annoying thing for me is to have someone try to sell me something "just as good" when I ask for Newbro's Herpicide. To be sure there are not many druggists who do this, but what few there are should know that such nepotism will destroy the customer's confidence. When they try it on me I never wait for the story, simply hunt a store where they will sell me what I want.

It is absurd for anyone to say that a preparation is as good as Herpicide. I don't think they believe it themselves. Every druggist knows that there is but one genuine, original dandruff-removing destroyer and that is Newbro's Herpicide.

James B. McLeod and L. T. Best, special agents.

It keeps the head free from dandruff, prevents the hair from coming out and stops itching of the scalp. Herpicide is really a wonderful remedy which does just what you want and expect it to do.
