COMMENT ON KINGSTON COMING TO THE GRAND

BY A CHICAGO MAN WHO VISITED HERE.

He Tells About the Golf Club Links and Old Fort Henry—The latter the Place for Boys to Play Indian.

"B.L.T." writing in the Chicago Daily Tribune of September 2nd, has the following amusing comment upon his visit to Kingston:

I see no difference between Southern Canada and the northern boundary of our blessed country, save that there is more breathing room at present over the border, and ten wild places to summer in to one on this side. At Kingston, for example (though Kingston is far from wild), there is fishing and boating and swimming in quantity and quality to suit the individual taste. The Rideau River, as far as Ottawa, offers unlimited camping ground, and the St. Lawrence with its islands is likewise within striking distance.

We dropped off at Kingston for a day, and found it an uncommonly quiet place with a great number of attractive old houses. The chief industry of the city appears to be religious calm, judging by the number of churches and the solemn atmosphere that pervades the place. The sound of church bells is as magically evocative as the pipes of the piper of Hamelin.

In the afternoon we chartered a funeral appearing carriage and visited the remains of Fort Henry across the river. An interesting fortification in a state of picturesque dilapidation. Peace has spun cobwebs in the cannons' mouths as prettily as a cartoonist can do them, and war and rumors of war seem distant as the Pleiades. What a place for a boy to "play Indian"!

There are underground passages and dungeons at Fort Henry and wandering through them I reflected how little attention was paid to sanitation in the best days of dungeon building; the ventilation is uniformly poor, and the lighting leaves much to be desired. I was informed that the gentleman who laid out the fort was faced by a wrong, and, on being recalled, committed suicide on his way back to England. The criticism of his plans seemed to me ill founded. The view is excellent, and had I the work to do I should face the fort to-day. The English builder was supersensitive.

Between the fort and the town sprawl the links of the golf club, as "sporty" a course as you please. I remarked a clubhouse and a number of putting greens; for the rest, one plays anywhere across the rock-strewn landscape. Wire fences surround the putting greens, on which the grass is tall and thick. A herd of cows were cropping the air green, and these I took to be the members of the greens committee. Although it was Saturday afternoon, only two players were on the links, and they, as long as they remained in view, were searching for balls among the myriad stones of the hillsides.

Our driver was communicative, but we really heard nothing about Kingston until evening. Passing a shop, Arethusa spotted a piece of old Wedgewood, and we entered the place, to be imprisoned for an hour by a flow of talk unequalled since the yarn of the Ancient Mariner; and, like the wedding guest, we could not choose but hear. Passing from the various processes of china manufacture, the shopkeeper began on the history of Kingston, with copious footnotes. Eventually we bolted, leaving the narrator in the middle of a sentence. Had I affinity of leisure I would gladly devote an aeon or two to hearkening to the history of Kingston.

Must be Properly Housed.
J. C. McConachie, the local agent of the Children's Aid Society, told the Whig, on Friday afternoon, that unless a number of small houses are erected in the city this fall, he has sad forebodings of the condition of some of his "kiddies" this coming winter. The parents of many of these are now in crowded quarters. A number of cases verging on destitution were discovered when he was out "scouting" for Santa Claus, last December.

To Re-open in October.
The work at the renovation of Queen Street Methodist church has progressed most favorably and the edifice will be re-opened for worship at the 1st of October. Rev. G. I. Campbell, the new pastor, has commenced his ministry in Kingston under most encouraging auspices.

Spend Sunday in Watertown.
Good going Saturday 5 a.m. or 2.30 p.m.; Sunday 7.30 a.m. and 2 p.m., returning up to Monday night, $1.65 return.

"THE FLIRTING PRINCESS" THE BILL TO-NIGHT.

"The New Barmaid" by an Entire English Company has Been Secured for Next Tuesday Evening.

The solid stamp of approval has been placed by the entire eastern press on the new edition of "The Flirting Princess," Harry Bulger's present starring vehicle. This is the third successful season of this really meritorious offering of Mr. H. Singer, by its first local visit to Kingston, owing to the imperative demands and requests of eastern theatre managers, with whom "The Flirting Princess" has played three and four times in one season. It is said to be entirely unlike any other musical comedy. Harry Bulger and his large company of fifty-two people and a complete scenic production, will be welcomed at the Grand to-night.

"The New Barmaid."

Next Tuesday, at the Grand, Kingston theatregoers will see "The New Barmaid" presented by an all-English company, direct from London. The locale is laid in England, the first act on the banks of the River Thames, near Henley. Although naturally "The New Barmaid" at the club figures prominently in the story of the play, she does not by any means exclusively control the interest far from it, as Alexander Loftus, the celebrated English comedian, playing the role of "Bertie White," a clubman, has an exceptionally strong comedy part. "The New Barmaid" is a clean, wholesome, genuinely funny, musical comedy of the best type, just full of fun and life and gaiety, and is played by an exceptionally strong cast, headed by Alexander Loftus and including Misses Edna Mollon, Lillie Leslie, in the principal female roles, and Vincent Erwin, R. N. Cooper, James Wilson, Norman Clark and other English actors in the chief male parts. An added attraction is the strong chorus of twenty picked English voices, and an augmented orchestra, under the direction of Basil Horsfall.

Ernest Marks Stock Company.

Two favorites, Ernest and "Kitty" Marks, will appear at the Grand Opera House on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, September 12th, 13th and 14th, with an entire change of plays and specialties. The company, supported by a first-class orchestra, is of exceptional strength. The opening bill will be a play that appeals to all classes. The company will, no doubt, attract large throngs.

REQUEST IS MADE.

That School Children be Given Half Day for Township Fair.

The big fair of the Kingston township, the banner fair of Frontenac county, will be held on September 10th and 11th, and the directors are taking steps to have the children given a half holiday on Wednesday, the 11th. Members of the board of education are being asked to agree to a half holiday for the "kiddies," and allow them a chance to see the wonders at the big show. At this fair there is a grand exhibit of mechanical drawing, and, in addition, many exhibits which will be of interest to the children, and from an educational standpoint there is no doubt but what the children would benefit from a visit to the fair. The trustees have yet to be heard from.

MORE TEACHERS READY.

Stated That There Will Not be Scarcity This Fall.

The report that there will be no scarcity of teachers this fall, such as has been experienced for some time, should be pleasing news to the members of the school board.

It is stated that throughout Ontario, the scarcity of teachers this fall will be nothing like as great as it was a year ago.

Reports from the inspectors, in many of the counties, show that the schools in which unqualified teachers have been doing duty, will be filled by qualified instructors.

Wanted a Free Return.

The firemen from the steamer Kingston, who struck recently, thus causing delay in the steamer's schedule, were Americans, and when they were stranded on the Canadian side of the line, after partially filling up with "strong stuff," two of these worthies made application to the American consul, for transportation, but they were informed that they would have to get back on their own resources, as transportation could only be furnished if they were employed on an American boat.

Ordered Off the Street.

A local driver was "held up," Friday afternoon, by Police Constable Samuel Arnie, and made take his horse off the street, as it was regarded as unfit for service. Constable Arnie acted on behalf of the Horse Soci-ty, and the driver complied with the request. There would have been "something doing" in police court circles if he had not obeyed orders.
