Those who suffer with it know well the misery of catarrh. There is just one thing to do—have it cured. It can be done. To prove it to you, send your address and the means of a quick and safe cure will be sent to your home free in every way. The idea in getting it to you free is to prove to you that there is a home cure for catarrh, scratchy throat, asthma, stopped-up feeling in the nose and throat, catarrhal headaches, constant spitting, catarrhal deafness, etc. The remedy that does it is the invention of Dr. J. W. Blosser, an eminent doctor, who has, for over thirty years, been identified with the cure of catarrh in all its worst forms. His discovery is unlike anything you ever had before, as it is not a spray, douche, ointment, atomizer, saline cream, or any such thing, but a genuine tried-and-true cure that clears out the head, nose, throat and lungs as you can again breathe the free air and sleep without that choking suffering feeling that all catarrh sufferers have. It will save the wear-and-tear of internal medicines that only ruin the stomach. It will prevent colds and heal up the mucous membranes so that you will not be constantly blowing your nose and spitting. If you have never tried Dr. Blosser's discovery and know that you need such a cure, and want to make a trial of it without cost, send your address to Dr. J. W. ## TRY TO PENETRATE

THE NORTHERN WILDERNESS FROM EDMONTON.

Prospectors to Set Out Next Spring to Gain Definite Information of Gold Deposits Near the Liard and Nabanani Rivers.

Edmonton, Alta., Oct. 4.—When the ice goes out of the Liard river next spring, a party of prospectors, whose practical knowledge of mineralogy was gained in the foremost gold camps of the United States, Canada, South Africa, Australia and South America, will start from Edmonton to penetrate the northern wilderness, more than 500 miles west of the confluence of the Liard and the Nabanani rivers.

The prospectors will take with them twenty pack animals and ample supplies for a stay of at least six months. Three members of the party will pass the winter in Edmonton to assemble the outfit and arrange for its transportation to a point, whence it will be carried to its destination beyond the outpost of civilization. William Brew, now a resident of Edmonton, who went to the headwaters of the Liard in a skill with two prospectors in 1890, discovered placer gold there in paying quantities, but a shortage of provisions forced the men to abandon their exploitation project.

William Melrod, now a resident of Edmonton, previously a post trader for the Hudson's Bay company in the Fort Nelson country for thirty years, accompanied by W. J. Weir, a young Scotchman, left Fort Nelson in the spring of 1899, intending to explore the district at the headwaters of the Nabanani river, a tributary of the Liard.

Nothing was heard of them until 1906, when a younger son of the post trader, going over the same route, with a party of hunters, found the skeletons of his two brothers side by side, both having been shot. Their guns and ammunition were nearby. Weir's bleached skeleton was found three miles away. There was a ragged hole in the skull. The remains of the horse which were identified by an article known to have been carried by them, were buried near where they fell.

The theory accepted by the elder Mordick and his son, as well as by trappers and traders in the district, is that Weir, high strung and new to the country with its solitude and mystery, became insane and shot his companions, while they were asleep, afterward taking his own life.

The younger Melrod and his men, who prospected near the headwaters of the Nabanani river for some time, returned with samples of rich gold-bearing quartz. The prospectors reported at the trading post that they found gold in abundance, but the impossibility of the country, the long distance to pack supplies and the hardships encountered made impossible the development of the ground.

George McLaughlin, for years in the employ of the Hudson's Bay company in the Fort Nelson district, was a member of a party organized several years ago to investigate the reports brought down by explorers of 1898, 1899, and 1906, but the loss of his life prevented him from going, and he others postponed the long journey until he returned from England, where he underwent treatment for his eyes. Subsequently the project was abandoned.

The trip to be undertaken next spring will be the first determined effort since 1906 to gain definite information of the gold deposits reported to exist in bonanza quantities in the mountains at the head of the Liard and Nabanani rivers.

Fire Had Curious Origin. Toronto, Oct. 5.—A skunk figured in a fire which destroyed the shack on the east side of the Municipal hotel on Queen street, just west of Bay street, last night. The fire was the skunk's revenge, for the blaze started when someone tried to end the animal's life. The animal had been disturbing the neighborhood with its odoriferous presence for some time. A man armed with a gun set out to render it service. He shot at the animal, the bullet went through it and into a can of gasoline, which exploded it and set fire to the shack.

Two Hundred Resorts Raided. Chicago, Oct. 4.—Led by State's Attorney John W. Ryan, 300 bailiffs and deputies last night raided over 200 resorts and arrested over 500 keepers and inmates. The prosecutor said he will secure 1,000 more warrants and give Chicago the most thorough cleaning in its history. He declares that he will not confine his operations to the so-called vice districts, but will invade the residential sections, where many alleged disorderly houses are now conducted.

Lawsuit Sequel of Canal Smash. Montreal, Oct. 4.—A sequel to the recent smash up in the Lachine canal is the claim for $12,000 damages filed with the registrar of the admiralty court, by the Canadian Sand and Gravel company against the steamship Nevada. J. L. Ross is mentioned as the plaintiff, his claims being looked after by Messrs. Perton, Taschereau and company. The owners of the Nevada deposited $12,000 bail.

DRINK BEER TOO FAST.

Americans Do a Marathon Stunt, Says German.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—Dr. Albert Oliven, one of 216 German physicians on a tour of the country, discussed the great American hurry. He admitted it was impossible to make the American go slow, but for the sake of the Fatherland he pleaded the rights of German beer and the privilege it should have of being consumed slowly and with a regard for dignity. "You Americans live too hurriedly," he said. "You don't sleep enough. You eat too rapidly. You don't digest your food properly. The principal trouble is with your drinking. I makes my heart ache to see an American drink beer at a bar. One gulp—two at the most—and the glass is empty.

"Our German method of tavern drinking is the only way. We don't try to do a Marathon stunt with our beer or to see how much we can drink in a given time. Take a glass of beer and tease it along—take half an hour to drink it. Sip it, sip it, and enjoy it. Shake it occasionally to keep the foam on the surface. Just try this when you drink beer again and see how much you will enjoy it."

PRINCESS WANTS AIR TRIP.

Enamoured of Aviation—Flies Miniature Airships at Balmoral.

London, Oct. 5.—A young lady at Balmoral when the royal family are there, is the instruction of the young princess and her sister in Scottish dances. Now Princess Mary has become enamoured of the sport of miniature aeroplanes in the heath. Indeed, this pastime is said to be outwitting shooting among the younger of his majesty's guests, and Princess Mary is even more interested than her brothers.

Last week her royal highness declared it was her greatest ambition to soar aloft, but her parents have so far declined her permission.

BOLT QUITS SHIP.

Flies by Way of the Captain's Pipe.

New York, Oct. 5.—The freighter Kusdale Hall, laden with iron pyrites from Huelva, reached New York today with her lower topmast split, and her captain's pipe a total wreck, as the result of a thunder storm through which she passed on Sept. 20th.

The bolt, which split the foretopmast, wrecked the truck and, passing through the vessel, hurled the man at the wheel to the deck. It passed out by way of the captain's pipe, dashing it from his lips and breaking it into bits.

An announcement of great importance to the three-goers heralds the engagement of "The Lion and the Mouse," the phenomenal success of the last three years, at the Grand on Saturday, October 12th, matinee and night. "The Lion and the Mouse" has all the elements of popularity—a powerful central interest, an intense love story wherein the lovers are in peril many times, and a good portion of comedy. Added to this the people of the story move in the most "select circles" and talk of millions as though they were juggling copper cents. The seats are in sale for "The Lion and the Mouse."

Most people find living an agreeable job.

Moran, vice-president; Melville Cooke, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Trotter asked to be released but the meeting requested him to reconsider the matter and it was held over until a later date.

Rugby News.

Ben Simpson, of Hamilton, has been agreed upon as referee for the McGill varsity game in Toronto.

Varsity's sup of joy will never overflow till H. C. Griffiths accepts the chair of rugby at that seat of learning.

Ottawa Free Press: Wally Young, one half back in the days of Harvey Colford, Stuart Rayside, et al, watched the Ottawas at work yesterday and thinks the game has lost some of its charm. Wally will be right there in Hamilton Saturday.

The Queen's and Ottawa College authorities failed to agree on officials and the appointment has been left in the hands of Graham Ross, the second vice-president of the Intercollegiate union, so it is likely that he will nominate a couple of Montreals.

Ottawa Journal: There is some getting going on locally on the Col. J. Quinn's game. The prevailing opinion in the intercollegiate struggle is about 3 to 2 on Col. Quinn.

Father Stanton, of Ottawa College, was indignant when shown reports in Toronto papers that "Mike" Millian might be protested for having played baseball at North Bay in the summer just closed. He asserts that Kilian is an amateur, and that he has never played with or against professionals.

The Ottawa Citizen says: The much disputed question of offside interference, which led to so many verbal protests last fall is likely to cause an upheaval in the interprovincial and intercollegiate football unions this fall because of the coming of the American coaches and the introduction of a radical change in the system of attack, utilized by the various teams. The Ottawa, McGill and Hamilton Tiger clubs will all follow different styles of play and it is a question whether or not the latest innovation will come under the head of "legitimate."

General Sport.

The New York state boxing commission suspended Papke indefinitely for refusing to keep an engagement. There will be no more hockey rink in Ottawa ready for the season of 1913-1914. The rink will be provided with an artificial ice plant, and every detail has been arranged for.

Late Sir Richard Cartwright.

Toronto Chronicle-Guardian. At the ripe age of seventy-seven one of Canada's foremost public men has passed away. Sir Richard Cartwright was for many years one of the most effective political orators in the country. A marvelous memory, a great familiarity with English literature and especially with the Bible, the ability to marshal his facts in convincing array, and a mastery of the English language made Sir Richard a political orator of the first order. He was too much of a fighter and too hard a hitter to win the warm friendship of political opponents, and yet all who knew him gave him credit for both great ability and deep sincerity. He was a confirmed bachelor, and we do not know that he ever changed his views upon this point, but at least these views did not prevent him from holding office in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's cabinet. He retained his mental vigor to the very last, and his name will long be cherished as one who gave freely of his time and great ability to serve his country. Political friends and political foes alike join in a tribute of praise to the memory of one whose life was largely given to the public service of his country.

An interesting event took place at the home of the bride's parents, on Sept. 25th, when Tena, the fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Rankin, Lanark, was united in marriage to John Orville Stewart, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Stewart, Hopeville.

A sudden call came to Mrs. William E. Croft, Middleville, on Sept. 29th. On Saturday there was a stroke and the final scene the following day. She had reached the age of seventy-five years.

KINGSTON LIBERALS PREPARE FOR BATTLE.

President—Lt. Col. R. E. Kent. Vice-presidents—Dr. J. J. Hart, R. J. Carson, Dr. A. W. Richardson, R. J. Baiden (Portsmouth).

Secretary—W. B. Mudie. Treasurer—N. C. Polson, Jr. The president-elect rose to reply, amid applause, to the honor which had been conferred upon him. Though appreciating it, a realization of the responsibility it carried with it had been placed upon his shoulders. He drew the memories of his hearers (or many of them) back to the times, when as a boy he was interested in an election. He held up the liberal party as the "whole thing," in those days, and signified his assurance of this still. The reform party, to be sure, received a set back a year ago; but it was by no means "down and out." It was starting out to retrieve itself. The colonial said that it was amusing to see their conservative friends crowing up everywhere, from "away back" only a year ago. And they would be put back again.

The new chief officer, at some length, outlined a plan of organization, from the officers, ward chairmen, to the sub-division chairmen and impressed its importance. He asked for enthusiasm and united effort to put Kingston back where she always was, and will be—a liberal constituency. Terms expressive of the hand work of the retiring chairman, were included in Colonel Kent's speech.

The new first vice-president, Dr. J. J. Hart, responding to the call of the meeting, said that he was with Col. Kent, that the liberals of Kingston were not dead, half-dead, or asleep. With proper organization behind him he believed, the colonel, hearkening to the call to arms sounded from Sir Wilfrid would rally the reformers of Kingston and lead them on to victory, as he had led his old regiment, the 14th P.V.O. Rifles, over Barfield in the past. (Cheers and laughter.)

"Here, take Kingston, put her where she belongs, and enroll her in the ranks of Canada's liberals," he called to the chairman.

R. J. Carson, R. J. Baiden, W. B. Mudie, and N. C. Polson, Jr., also spoke, congratulating the president on his election, thanking the meeting for the honor of their appointments, with the assurance of the rallying of the warriors around him and prophesying liberal victories in the future.

In his usual eloquent manner Dr. A. W. Richardson added greatly to the enthusiasm and weight of the speech. In part he declared that the liberal policy had always been the advance guard of progress, intellectual, commercially, and every other way. True, it is not always thought so, but history, sooner or later, vouches for this. His belief was that the people were becoming more and more convinced of the wisdom and strength of the Laurier policy, the principals of which are in the best interests of Canada and Canadians. (Cheers.)

"And look at the cause we have," he said. "Sir Wilfrid had said that the country must be well organized and thickly populated. Never in the history of any nation has the progress been so great as during the liberal reign."

The speaker expressed his pride at what the liberal party had done for the development of our transcontinental railways and waterways alone. The building of the former had been hoveled at by their opponents. The deepening of the St. Lawrence river from Montreal to Quebec, now under way, is only following out the policy of the recent government. The navy question, the doctor said, was one of the things that killed the Laurier government, but it was going to place it in office, he was sure. The electors were glad that Sir Wilfrid was making this a prominent feature in the liberal platform, outlined in his speeches from place to place.

The speaker said that the Borden cabinet reminded him of Heinz pickles—fifty-seven varieties. Mr. Borden also had several varieties. (Laughter.) He contended that they were the most heterogeneous group of men that ever attempted to govern a country, and will fall in their weakness.

Looking back the liberal party had nothing to regret, said the speaker. One battle lost is not the failure of the campaign, and he believed that there were hundreds of electors all over the country sorry for the change. "The liberal party is not down and out, but only 'down for the count,' the doctor emphasized.

The old guard is here to-night, and chosen on the fringe are only waiting to be brought in. "We have" everything to work for—country, our illustrious leader, homes and families. The battle cry of the liberals is the same as that of the Crusaders of old—"Forward!"

Dr. Richardson congratulated the president upon the new contract he had taken during the evening, but, as he said, all the big contracts are going to liberals now.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring president for his labors in the interests of the liberal party, on motion of R. J. Carson and W. J. B. White, and the meeting broke up with cheers for the king, Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, N. W. Rowell, K.C., and Col. Kent.

BUSINESS TALKS

To the Readers of the Whist by the Advertising Department

"Advertising divides people into two classes—the quick and the dead."

So says an advertising expert in an American magazine. It is a terse yet true statement of fact. Some readers have possibly heard the remark that a duck after laying an egg, says nothing, while, on the contrary, a hen makes a good deal of noise, and there seems to be more money in hen eggs and more of them used.

The twenty-four hour strike in Chicago, last March, when the newspapers were reduced to four pages in size, gave everybody a chance to see a city without advertising.

"On regular business days," says the Mail Order Journal, "when the Chicago papers come out without their usual amount of advertising, the street cars are always crowded, the business parts of the city are always filled with people, and the stores with shoppers. On the day when the papers carried no advertisements Chicago had a holiday appearance. The downtown business streets looked almost abandoned; there were no strap-hangers in the street cars between the hours of 10 A.M. and 4 P.M., and the great department stores, usually visited by thousands and thousands of people, were quiet and doing almost nothing. What the newspapers lost by not carrying the usual amount of week-day advertising was an insignificant percentage of what the big and small stores and the transportation lines lost in trade on that day. It was a day that made not only the business community but also the entire city of Chicago realize what advertising means to modern life and how little can be done nowadays without advertising."
