THE ARTS FRESHMEN DINED THE SOPHOMORES

At the Frontenac Hotel on Thursday Night—Political Science Club Officers—Senate Room Magazines Open for Use of Science and Medical Students.

By Correspondents. The banquet which was advertised to take the place of the regular Arts rush, passed off without any interference on the part of the senior students, Tuesday night, at the Frontenac hotel. To avoid outside interference, the banquetters secured the services of four policemen, who guarded the entrance to the hotel. This precaution, however, proved unnecessary, for the freshmen and sophomores had kept the affair so secret that scarcely one outsider got wind of what was to happen until he read about it in the Whig.

At eight o'clock the students gathered round the festive board. They were honored by the presence of their honorary presidents, Professors Matheson and Morrison, each of whom made fitting addresses to the gathering.

When seen Friday morning, both freshmen and sophomores were jubilant over the success of their undertaking. Sophomores state that it even surpassed the Arts dinner, and the freshmen are overjoyed that they succeeded in stealing a march on the other students.

On Thursday evening the first regular meeting of the political science club was held. Vice-president Garvoek presiding. Discussion took place regarding the programme for the session, and it was decided to introduce a greater number of impromptu debates than previously. These debates proved a great success last year and enabled more members to participate in the activities of the club than was provided by the longer debates. The prospects are very bright. The election of officers resulted as follows: Hon. president, Prof. Skelton; president, R. M. Fisher; vice-president, J. F. Twigg; secretary, Clive Burke. Committee—Arts, Mr. Baker; science, John Marshall; education, W. A. Campbell; medicine, A. Whytock; theology, M. Omond.

Invitations are being sent out for the freshmen's reception to be held on Wednesday next. Tickets will be on sale Friday at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

Many of the students expect to spend Thanksgiving day at their homes.

George Sleeman, arts '15, will not return to college this year, but expects to enter upon a course in medicine next year.

Miss MacKay has resumed her studies in arts.

Mr. Alguire, Quebec, is registered in arts.

Archibald Beecroft has returned to the city and is again registered in theology.

Miss Gladys Dix, arts '13, has resumed her studies at Queen's.

Roy Goodearle has joined the year arts '16.

Miss Mabel Mackenzie, arts '13, has returned to college.

At the Medical College.

The senate room has been thrown open to the use of medical and science students, for access to the magazines on file there. This is a great advantage to the students as the very best periodicals of England, Canada and United States are subscribed for by the senate and it would be difficult to secure an equal advantage any other place than at the college.

Medicine will take a prominent part in the parade this year, as preparations for the "best yet" are in progress. Last year, although the exhibition was very good, it lacked originality, but by present indications of activities of the parade committee, it will fulfil expectations and give the best citizens a treat. The exact date of the parade has not been settled but it will probably take place some Saturday night during November.

James H. Moxley has discontinued his course in science and has entered the first year in medicine.

E. J. Reid, B.A., of Melville, Sask., formerly of Kingston, has returned to Queen's, and entered medicine.

There will be a faculty executive meeting in medicine on Friday at which the question of fees will be considered. Registration in medicine closes next week.

The different years are holding meetings for the purpose of electing officers and appointing athletic committees.

The medical laboratories building is being used for certain lectures of the Kingston teachers' convention. The lanterns with which the lecture rooms are equipped are especially advantageous for the illustration of the lectures in anatomy, arts and biology.

COMMENTS ON CURRENT EVENTS.

The election of Mr. Cardin, in Richelieu, carries with it a deep significance. The constituency went liberal in the last election, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier was regarded as the peerless leader in Quebec. Under a change of government it was expected that it would go conservative, that its electors would show that they were without political principle and conscience.

Sir Rudolph Forget represented the mind and purpose of the government when he visited the constituency and attempted to bribe it with the promise of a railway scheme. The liberals have cast his bribe in his face. They have told him and the government that patronage may have some influence in some constituencies, but when its acceptance meant the desertion of Laurier they would have none of it.

The Forget faction have been rebuked in another way. They were ostentatious in the display of their money. Sir Rudolph bet $5,000 that the conservative would be elected. To-day he is out the $5,000 and much of his bluster and bluff. Richelieu is liberal; soundly liberal; and now that it has spoken one can see why the election in it was not called at the same time and on the same date as the election in Macdonald. The Borden idea of having all bye-elections for vacant seats, on the same day has proven to be only an opposition idea.

THE GUILT OF BECKER.

After a trial which was not allowed to drag, but during which the man in his defence was shown the utmost fair play, Becker, the captain of police, in New York, who was accused of inspiring the death of Rosenthal, has been found guilty.

The verdict is one which must appeal as a just one to any one who has read the details of the trial. Rosenthal, aggrieved, and feeling that he had been imposed upon by the police and taxed unduly for the protection of his gambling house, "squealed," (to use a word which described his offence), to the district attorney. His removal was a means to an end, and that and the closing of his mouth.

The defence was that the gamblers had "framed up" the charge of murder against Becker, and the conspiracy was alleged to have been hatched in jail. But long before that the district attorney was after the "higher-ups," and now that Becker has been convicted he may see his way clear to lift the veil and give the officers of the law a view of the men with whom he associated, and who profited to an infinitely greater extent from the taxation of gamblers.

Long since the mayor received a notice that there were illegal relations between the police of New York and the gamblers. He did not act upon the information. He was inclined to abuse the district attorney when the Rosenthal murder occurred, because of Mr. Whitman's deductions. Perhaps he and his police commissioners will realize the necessity of purifying the service so that the guardians of the peace will perform their duty fairly and impartially, so that they will be a terror to evil-doers and a help to all who do well.

and the elections will be held from 9 to 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Good men have been chosen and the election will be close. Prof. William Nicol is honorary president by acclamation. W. Dalzell and T. Sterne are contestants for the presidency.

Students in geology will go to Barrifield Saturday on the weekly excursion. They are to meet on the bridge at eight o'clock, but if it rains another disappointment will be felt. Don't forget your lunch, boys.

THE BULGARIANS WON

ONE OF BLOODIEST BATTLES OF MODERN TIMES.

Ottoman Forces Surrender—The Fortress at Kirk-Kiliseh—Thousands Were Slain—Conquerors Headed for Sultan's Palace.

London, Oct. 25.—The Bulgarian army, having captured Kirk-Kiliseh, a heavily fortified outpost, after one of the most sanguinary battles of modern times, is advancing on Adrianople, the fort encircled city that stands between the northern invaders and the sultan's palace at Constantinople.

According to a late report from Sofia the advance guard of the Bulgarian and Servian armies has taken two outer forts of the city and begun a heavy cannonading of the city with the Turks' own guns. Practically every division of the allied army is on the move, maneuvering so as to ultimately attempt a united assault on the stronghold.

The number of dead in the battle of Kirk-Kiliseh is not definitely known. Advices from Sofia, Vranza and Belgrade estimate the losses as "several thousands," both sides suffering heavily.

The Bulgarians took a great number of prisoners who are said to be on their way northward to cross the border into Bulgaria. That Czar Ferdinand achieved yesterday's victory by a daring flanking movement which brought a strong division of Bulgars to the Ottoman rear is confirmed by all dispatches from the war zone to-night.

The battle had been in progress practically three days before the advantage turned to either side, although the Bulgarians were known to be developing a strategical division of their forces that would double their chances of victory in a final assault.

How Battle Was Fought.

The czar divided his forces into three distinct armies, sending one against the Turkish front and the other two detouring to strike from the rear. The Turks concentrated their strength before them. Turkish reinforcements arrived almost hourly, until in numbers the armies were about evenly matched. The second army found a vulnerable spot in the right flank of the Turkish force, and it was turned by a swift, crushing assault. The outcome of the battle hinged on the success of this daring move.

The second army then marched straight to the enemy's rear without effective resistance and joined the third army operating from the left. The Turkish surrender followed.

Thus the Turks are now between two fires. The line of communication between them and Constantinople is at the invaders' mercy, and the conquering armies are marching on the capital.

Sultan Minimizes Reverse.

Official despatches from Constantinople sought to spread the belief that the Bulgarians had been utterly routed, and later, apparently after discouraging messages from their own commanders, the porte issued messages minimizing the importance of Kirk-Kiliseh, and insisted that only the surrender of Adrianople could be accepted as a recognized reverse.

Conditions within the city of Adrianople are reported to be alarming. The inhabitants are said to be panic-stricken and threatened famine adds to the horror of the situation. The occupation of the city by tens of thousands of reinforcements has reduced the food supply to starvation rations.

The Greeks report the capture of the Ottoman town of Servia, seventeen miles north of Mount Olympus, and their claim is unchallenged from any source. They report that the Turks massacred seventy Christians and a priest before fleeing. Several hundred prisoners were taken.

Kirk-Kiliseh fell at eleven o'clock in the morning, according to the latest reports received from Bulgarian sources. The Turkish troops retired in disorder in the direction of Banhariz, fourteen miles to the southeast. They left a battery of quick-firing guns, sixteen ammunition wagons and large quantities of ammunition and food.

When the news was received in Sofia vast crowds bearing the flags of all the allied states formed processions and marched to the Greek, Servian, Russian and British legations, the palace and the Military Club. In front of each the national anthem was sung and cheers were given.

A party of boy scouts headed one of the processions and the Greek minister was carried through the streets on the shoulders of some of the enthusiastic demonstrators. Church bells were rung and the whole city was hung with flags.

Turks to Fall Back.

Constantinople, Oct. 25.—It is stated here semi-officially that the Turks will make no real effort to defend Adrianople, but will at the psychological moment abandon the city and fall back on General Abdullah Pasha's main Turkish army. Then the great and decisive battle of the war will be fought south of Adrianople.

A Feroocious Fight.

Vienna, Austria, Oct. 25.—Direct advices received here to-day of fighting around Kirk-Kiliseh state that the position was carried by the Bulgarian troops at the point of the bayonet, the Turks resisting till the last man dropped. Hand to hand struggles were the most ferocious in the history of modern war farce. Three thousand Bulgarians were killed and five thousand Turks, while the wounded on both sides exceeded ten thousand. After repeated charges of assaulting troops, dead and wounded were piled up in trenches five feet high. Red cross parties are still sorting out the dead and wounded. Adrianople is still strongly fortified, but poorly provisioned and watered. The Bulgarians expected to begin bombardment of this town any time.

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—W. F. Garland, of Ottawa, was the choice of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the county of Carleton, which met in convention at Stittsville to appoint a successor to contest the riding for the Federal seat made vacant by the death of Edward Kidd, M.P.

It is likely that the nomination will mean an acclamation.
