R. WALDRON

AGITATION IN INDIA HAS BEEN SILENCED

By the Measure of Self-Government Given.

INFERIOR POSITIONS

UNDER GOVERNMENT IN HANDS OF NATIVES.

Rev. R. A. King, D.D., Who Has Just Come From India to the Presbyterian Theological College, Edmonton, Speaks about Conditions in That Country.

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 21.—"I am not saying how far I think Britain should go, but she is a Christian nation," said Rev. R. A. King, D.D., who has just come from India, India, to Edmonton as professor at Robertson Presbyterian Theological college, "as my own opinions would probably be out of the realm of practical politics. On the other hand, the spirit of Gladstone is not dead. The non-conformists who stood behind him in the pro-Hellenic movement, are the main supporters of the present British government. They would gladly see the Turk bundled out of Europe."

Discussing political conditions in India, where he spent nine years as professor at Indore college and as examiner in philosophy in the University of Allahabad, and their relation to the struggle between the Christians and the Mohammedans, said that the agitation in India, if not satisfied, has been silenced. Continuing, he said: "The measure of self-government given by Lord Morley's act has at least silenced the agitator and he will have to show that he can use what he has before he can demand more. At the same time the most erroneous ideas were current in the west as to the extent of self-government in India even before Morley's legislation."

"All the interior positions under the government are in the hands of Indians. Of the better positions ninety per cent. of those carrying salaries of 1,000 rupees and upward are occupied by Indians. There was, however, always an official majority in the councils and the Indians' complaint was that he was always in a perpetual opposition. This led to irresponsible criticism. The opposition is now relied upon to fulfill their suggestions as to what ought to be done. Under the recent act the non-official members are in the majority."

Referring to the extent of the franchise, Dr. King said that an extensive franchise is impossible among a people, of whom ninety-five per cent. are illiterate, but the various communities, elect representatives. These, if they combined, could out-vote the official members.

"But," he added quickly, "there is not much likelihood of the Mohammedans combining with the Hindus for example. That is their own fault, and not the fault of the government. At any rate a vast amount of the unrest which made for so much anxiety a few years ago, has now disappeared."

Asked if the conflict in the Balkan states is a matter of interest to India, Dr. King said it means much to the educated Mohammedans, adding: "The Pan-Islamic movement is one in which the Indian Mohammedan leaders are actively concerned. Though their leaders are far removed in their thoughts from the crude conception of their prophet, their college at Aligarh is really a rationalistic centre. Still the minorities of the Turk is a blow to the cause of the present. They hold the Balkan states and any other states that may help them in no great favor."

"Will this effect the attitude of Britain towards the struggle?"

"It certainly has affected Britain's policy in the near east in the past and not unnaturally. Britain has more Mohammedans in the India empire than there are elsewhere in the world. They make up a fifth of the population but they are different from the wild Hindus. They have not forgotten that before the British regime they were masters of India. However, they are outspoken in their protestations of loyalty to Britain."

"Now, if any action inimical to their religionists is proposed, is it not natural that such a section of the Indian community, is it not only natural that Britain should consider well such action?"

"What do you think will be the attitude of Britain if the Turk has to abandon Constantinople?"

"I don't know," replied Dr. King. "I have tried to tell you what the influence of Indian feeling would be. Whether it would outweigh other considerations I am not politician enough to forecast."

Speaking of the visit of King George and Queen Mary to India, Dr. King said it was a marked success from beginning to end.

"Whatever one may think of the partition of Bengal or of the change of the official from Calcutta to Delhi," he added, "it was a stroke of policy that appealed to the Indian mind."

"There was a king, indeed, who, by mere proclamation, could change a province. The average Indian knew nothing about the long correspondence between the secretary and the secretary of state, and cared less. Personal government is what the Indian knows and likes. 'The kind did it,' the Indian thought. 'Long live the king.'"

ARE NOT REPORTING.

Ticket-of-Leave Men are Shy at Registering.

Some of the men allowed out from the penitentiary on parole, and who are better known as "ticket-of-leave" men, have not been reporting to the police in the city or district where they belong, and there is trouble in store for them.

The dominion police are working on the case and when the defaulters are caught they will be sent back to the penitentiary to serve their sentences. Detectives are now at work and will track down the offenders.

The prisoners are released on parole on condition that they report to the nearest police station to which they are living at least once a month. Some of those who have failed to report lately, so it is stated, have rather bad records.

The parts were taken by Miss Lillie Murray, Minabaha; Arthur Mingay, Hiawatha; J. Burke, Arrowmaker; Mrs. Hugh Macpherson, Nokomis; Walter Macnee, Paupukeewis; Miss Ardelle Elder sang, and dances were performed by Miss Marjorie Campbell as Silvershoe, Miss Marjorie Gainsbury and Miss Mary Stewart. Record Drain Digging.

A number of Russians who on Tuesday morning went to work on a drain to lead the gas main down Cataract street to the North American sewer, have in two days dug a drain nearly six feet deep and one block long. They worked from eight o'clock till six in the evening, at twenty cents an hour. They wanted more money, and so they asked to be allowed to work an hour a day longer so as to earn the full two dollars.

TO CUT OUT THE CABS

THE ACTION OF THE LEVANA SOCIETY OF QUEEN'S.

The Young Ladies to the Rescue of the Young Men—Big Advance in the Prices Charged for Conveyances.

The lady students at Queen's university have come to the rescue of the young men, who are so gallant in their attention, and to whose invitations they readily respond to attend the faculty and other dances at Queen's university. They greatly appreciate the courtesy of the young men and, having learned that the cab rates have been very largely increased, they have decided that hereafter cabs will not be one of the accessories in connection with the invitation.

The members of the Levana Society possess that business acumen, which is not generally associated with the feminine part of the community, and think that $2 for a drive from their homes to the college and return is quite an extravagant bit of expense, and particularly when, on a fine night, a walk has greatly increased advantages over driving. They thought it was preposterous to charge such a figure for driving possibly two or three blocks at the most, and it gives the cabmen this advantage that they can handle two or three parties during the night, making a fairly good bit of money for the occasion. Heretofore $2 had been the price paid, though $3 had been customary on a trip to the Royal Military College and return. The young ladies say that unless the cabmen come down in rates "We Walk" will be the motto for quite a number of the events that are still to come off in the college during the present term. They believe that the young men have sufficient expense associated with the invitation to the popular dances without the added fee required for travelling with all the luxury associated with society life. They believe that they can walk to the college with an added interest as the longer moments taken will be full of pleasant memories in days to come.

SEA MYSTERIES.

Solved by Workers Employed by Carapic Institution.

"A thousand mysteries are hidden in the life of the sea," says F. J. Haskin in the Washington Star, "and to their solution the department of marine biology in the Carapic Institution has addressed itself. A well-equipped laboratory has been established on Tortugas Island, Florida, and a vessel for the needs of the work has been built. The department maintains its own crews of workers, and offers the facilities of its constant to all visiting scientists. Last year Prof. Urie Dahlgren of Princeton was sent to Hampton roads to enable him to collect young specimens of a little denizen of the deep known as the 'star gazer,' the eye muscles of which develop into electric organs capable of giving a severe shock. These are being studied in the hope that some new lessons of electricity may be learned."

"During last year G. Harold Drew carried out a series of observations which are said to justify the belief that he probably has discovered one of the most interesting facts yet revealed through the study of oceanography. He found that the most abundant faunas, at depths between ten fathoms and the surface of the water of Jamaica and Tortugas, is a form that possesses the capacity to convert all the nitrates of the water into nitrites and finally to expel all the nitrogen from the sea in the form of gas, thus depriving the surface waters of the ocean of nitrogen, which accounts for the comparative paucity of marine life in those regions."

"Dr. T. Wayland Vaughan is making a study of the growth of coral reefs, and is rearing many colonies under natural conditions. He is making the most intensive and carefully controlled study ever undertaken of the life history and struggle for existence among corals, and it will be extended so as to include the great barrier reef region of Australia."

"These are only a few of the principal activities of the department of marine biology, but they serve to indicate the scope and importance of a work which gradually is bringing out knowledge which will be of infinite aid to the men who take abstract truths and from them make the world's applied science."
