

Unable to Work for 14 Months

Mr. Henry Black.

What a helpless mass of flesh and bone the human body is, once the nerves become exhausted. Extreme weakness comes over you, and you lose control of the limbs. The next step is paralysis.

You will be fortunate if, like Mr. Black, you get the building-up process in action before it is forever too late. My forming new, rich blood Dr. Chase's Nerve Food carries new vigor and energy to every organ and every member of the human body.

Mr. Henry Black, 31 St. Catherine street east, Montreal, Que., writes: "The wonderful results I obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food constrain me to write this letter in order that others who suffer from nervous exhaustion and weakness may use this medicine with equally satisfactory results. As a result of overwork I became completely exhausted, and was unable to work for fourteen months. As I am the father of a family, these were sad days for me, but after I had used six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I had improved so greatly that I continued the treatment until I was completely restored to health and strength. I now work twelve to fifteen hours a day, and keep in excellent health."

Shirriff's True Vanilla. EASY AND SURE WAY TO CURE COLDS

Don't Neglect a Cold, Ely's Cream Balm Will Stop it in the Sneezing Stage.

A cold generally attacks the weakest part, affecting the eyes and ears in some and producing nasal catarrh and throat troubles in others. A cold is due to an inflammation of the membrane lining the air passages, and may be promptly cured with a little Ely's Cream Balm, which immediately relieves the inflammation and all the distressing symptoms, such as sneezing, coughing, running at the nose and eyes, hoarseness, sore throat, fever, and headache. The reason why this pure, antiseptic balm acts so quickly is because it is applied directly to the tender, sore surfaces.

Even in severe, chronic cases of catarrh, Ely's Cream Balm never fails to quickly and effectually check the poisonous discharge which clogs the head and throat, causing the disgusting hacking, spitting and blowing of the nose. This remedy not only drives out the disease, but heals and strengthens the weakened membranes, thus ending catarrh.

Catarrh is a filthy, disgusting disease. Don't put up with it another day. Get a 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and see how quickly you will be relieved. It is perfectly harmless. G. W. Mahood, agent.

R. & O. SECURITIES

IS SIR T. DAWSON WORKING R. & O. MERGER PLANS?

Continental Jumps From $1,100 to $1,350 on Five Share Sale—An $8,000,000 Manufacture Harbor Plant.

Montreal, Nov. 21.—The strength which has developed in Richelieu and Ontario securities has been welcomed on the street. These days even a small gain is regarded as an indication of considerable strength, and it is now no secret that a group of English and Canadian financiers are earnestly striving to round out this long drawn-out merger project. In connection with the information that the Furness interests would likely make an offer to the holders of Richelieu & Ontario, it can be stated that Sir Travers Dawson, of London, who is now in Montreal, is reported to be working on a plan which it is expected, will go through, but arrangements in connection with same have not reached a point as yet where it can be said that there is any certainty about it being brought to a successful conclusion. In some quarters it has always been felt that the English interests now had more to secure from the Richelieu & Ontario than any other crowd, and on this account, they are likely to stay with the deal until they have rounded it out.

May List Issues in Toronto. Toronto, Nov. 21.—The Tuckett issues—25,000 shares of the common and 20,000 shares of the preferred—having been called for the first time on the Montreal Stock Exchange on Tuesday, arrangements are now being made to have them listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange, and a definite announcement is expected in this connection in the course of a few days.

A Big Advance. New York, Nov. 21.—On a sale of five shares of its stock the quotation for the shares of the Continental Oil company, at one time a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Trust, jumped two hundred and fifty points. The price of the stock at the close of business on Saturday was $1,100. On the opening of the market yesterday a bid for five shares sent up the quotation to $1,350.

Applying to Parliament. Montreal, Nov. 21.—The Manufacturers' Harbor Terminals, Ltd., which will develop manufacturing properties at Longue Pointe, is applying to parliament for a capital of $8,000,000. The company having decided to build five six-story buildings instead of four, as was originally intended.

Attracting Attention. Montreal, Nov. 21.—American locomotive, the stock of which a large number of Montrealers made big money some years ago, is again attracting attention on the Wall street market, selling around 47 1/2, a new high for recent years. The stock has been consistently strong even when other issues were showing some weakness, and it is said to be the result of the greatly improved position the company is now in, owing to orders that have been booked with various American railways.

Financial Notes. The three leading railroads in the dominion have, this year, placed orders for 43,164 freight cars and 727 locomotives. Large orders have also been placed with United States companies.

The International Paper, New York, may, if a reduction is made in the paper tariff, under which Canadian manufacturers can sell paper in the United States at lower prices than the International, transfer its plant to Canada. The purchase of the Boston and Maine Railroad by the commonwealth of Massachusetts is called for in a bill filed with the clerk of the house of representatives by Henry C. Long, of Cambridge. The Boston and Maine, controlled by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad through a holding company. The October statement of Canadian banks shows that the Bank of Commerce has increased its lead on the Bank of Montreal, secured during September, being ahead of the Montreal institution, by about five millions in assets, and eleven millions in liabilities. The latter represents increased deposits.

Application will be made at the next session of the dominion government for the incorporation of the Quebec Rapid Transit company, with powers to construct a railway from Quebec through Montmorency, to Lake St. Charles, making a belt line. A. B. Powell, for some time in charge of the Montreal branch of the Equitable Life Insurance company, has been appointed superintendent. Lieut.-Col. Wilson has been made local manager of the Canada Life Assurance Co., Montreal, succeeding J. A. Bucknell, who has gone to Detroit.

The Ontario Brick company have placed practically all the issue of $1,250,000 bonds through the Quebec Savings and Trust company and others.

REVENGED HIS SLAIN DOG. Riddled Occupants of Death-dealing Auto With Shot.

Eric, Pa., Nov. 21.—Because a large touring car ran over and crushed his dog, Lloyd Pastorius fired both barrels of a double-barreled shotgun at the rear end of the automobile, it is alleged, and as a result three persons are in Hamlet hospital riddled with fine holes and Pastorius is a prisoner at police headquarters.

BUMPER APPLE CROP.

Present Season Shows Great Increase Over 1911.

The apple crop of the United States is of generous size, showing some increase over that of 1911, and a substantial gain in the commercial or orchard belt, says the American Agriculturalist. In this, its final report, it places the yield at 32,300,000 barrels, something considerably short of an occasional big year, yet substantially more than the total included in the 1911 revised figures.

In New York a splendid showing was made, with an output of 1,000,000 barrels of apples, a big increase over last year. This gain, by the way, is almost entirely limited to the group of western counties, where apple orcharding has been brought down to a positive science. In the Hudson valley the crop is really deficient. Michigan comes next in importance, with a gain over last year, large quantities of apples already held by speculators now going rapidly into cold storage for winter market. Pennsylvania has a smaller crop than last year. New England, as a whole, will not differ from that of 1911, Maine failing to realize in its entirety earlier hopes, owing to a somewhat trying season, yet the Pine Tree state has a fine showing of splendid fruit.

The central west and the far west, the latter including the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific coast, have a good many more apples than a year ago. This is taken as a whole, irrespective of quality. While the Pacific northwest and California lay splendidly with the black braids, produces a very true of the southwest. In contrast with the partial failure of a year ago, Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas show up with a big total, but much of this is decidedly inferior fruit. Colorado has a magnificent crop of medium fruit, but a little less than expected. —American Agriculturist.

CARTWRIGHT REMINISCENCES.

Just Published, are the Sensation of the Season.

Sir Richard Cartwright's "Reminiscences" issued on Wednesday by William Briggs Toronto, will provide the sensation of the season. Not for a long time has there appeared a volume with so intimate a personal note or so remarkably frank in its estimate of Canadian political leaders who are not beyond the scope of living memory. The late Sir Richard Cartwright was a very methodical man, as well as a highly interesting figure in contemporary politics. For forty-nine of the seventy-seven years of his life—1835-1912—he sat in the House of Commons and played a great part in the events of a stirring time. No actor on the political stage knew better the rules of the parliamentary game or surpassed him in the faculty of vigorous and terse yet classic English.

His "Reminiscences" have evidently been carefully set down and are cast in the form of a succession of interviews with an imaginary reporter. The scene is Sir Richard's library in many respects these reminiscences of leading men and women are the best yet published for the light they throw on the last half century of Canadian history.

The preface to the book is written by T. M. Courtney, at one time deputy minister of finance. An Irish Cinderella

Eileen Ivor was polishing the copper tea kettle. Her married sister, the minister's wife, had the Irish woman's love of orderliness, but with two babies and the many duties of a difficult parish imposed upon her slender strength she had no inclination for housework. So the baking, marketing, and scrubbing fell upon Eileen.

Eileen was so grateful for her home that it never occurred to her that she learned it in the dearest way. She had not a cent of her own and America was new to her. She was skilled in nothing save housework. Her conscientious and faithful service, her sweet obliteration of self, had given her more of the air of a mental than of a member of the family. Her sister's visitors seemed never to be aware of her. Her brother-in-law did not speak to her unless he had to. She was there in the house and she was necessary. That was about as much as her presence amounted to.

She was scouring away as for dear life and trying to lighten her labor by singing her favorite song, "The Shoogly-Shoo," when the front door bell rang. Eileen looked at her hands and her soiled apron. Her sister always answered the door when at home. "I'll pretend I don't hear it," Eileen said, and went singing, although in a lower key. The bell rang again and then followed silence. The called had evidently departed.

"You don't remember," said the young man, smiling, "to have heard them say they were expecting a visitor?" "No, sir," stammered Eileen, thinking a dozen times in an instant—how she looked and how he looked and what he must think of her and the way he impressed her. "All gone to drive. Nobody at home save myself."

"It's rather awkward, you know," he said. "My name is Donovan."

FRINGE AND BRAID HELP TO MAKE THIS COAT LUXURIOUS.

Sealette, one of the clever substitutes for seal skin, was used to make this handsome carriage or limousine coat, which is intended for afternoon wear above gowns of a formal character. The coat is braided in a graceful design, the braiding suggesting a draped effect, though the material really hangs perfectly straight. Herringbone silk fringe, in combination with the black braid, produces a very luxurious wrap. The wrap accompanies a gown of granitum and white brocade, accompanied by a white hat with a geranium colored plume and buttoned boots of white satin with coral buttons.

MRS. WM. ARCHER

Tells Mothers What to Do For Delicate Children.

"My fourteen year old daughter was very thin and delicate. She had a bad cough so that I became very much alarmed about her health. She was nervous and did not sleep well, had very little appetite and doctors did not help her. Having heard so much about Vinol I decided to give it a trial. It has helped her wonderfully. She can sleep all night now without coughing once, in fact her cough is gone. Her appetite is greatly improved and she has gained in weight. Vinol is a wonderful medicine and I will always keep it in the house. I wish every mother knew what Vinol will do for delicate children." Mrs. William Archer, Long Branch, N.J.

Eileen sang more loudly and sweetly: Sweet and slow, swinging low, Eyes of Irish blue, All my heart is swinging, dear, Swinging here with you— A quiet knock at the open door behind her, with the kindest and truest pair of eyes she had ever seen, in her life.

"Good afternoon," he said, and his voice matched his eyes. "Is Mr. Ralston at home?" "No, sir," stammered Eileen, thinking a dozen times in an instant—how she looked and how he looked and what he must think of her and the way he impressed her. "All gone to drive. Nobody at home save myself."

"You don't remember," said the young man, smiling, "to have heard them say they were expecting a visitor?" wrote Mac—Mr. Ralston—that I'd arrive to-day. I've come a good way to see him. We were chummy at college. It must be he didn't receive my letter."

"That's it, of course," Eileen said, eagerly. The postman had brought a letter among the afternoon's offerings of pamphlets and circulars, and she had placed it on the minister's desk. This must be the letter he meant. "My people will be back soon, I think. You might come, and wait."

It was the utmost hospitality she dare offer. She had never heard the name Donovan mentioned in the house, but then she knew next to nothing about her brother-in-law's affairs. She led the young man to the library, bade him make himself comfortable and left him to refresh himself by the kettle polishing. But she did not again sing. Her mind was busy. Through her thoughts were the pleasant remembrance of the unexpected visitor's merry dark eyes and courteous manner.

During her sojourn in the minister's household Eileen had seen men come and go constantly without feeling interest in any of them. She had her own idea of what her lover must be, and she meant to wait until her idea found personification. In the meantime she could not help sighing a little with longing for a home of her own and somebody to abundantly love her. But for the most part she sang and laughed away her depressions of spirit. The kettle returned to Eileen told them the strange man who was waiting in the library and they went in to see him. In a few moments Mrs. Ralston came bustling out into the kitchen, where Eileen was preparing tea.

"You'll have to put on something extra," she said. "It's Mr. Donovan. And to think Mac did not get the letter in time!" This served to impress Eileen with the fact that Mr. Donovan was a guest of distinction, and her heart sank lower as the gulf between them apparently widened. While tea was in progress she wheeled the babies up and down the back walk, that the conversation of the guest and hosts might flow uninterrupted. Her own supper, for which she had scant appetite, however, and the washing of extra dishes kept her busy until dark. By that time callers had arrived. The parlor seemed to be full from the varied sounds of voices, among which was that of Miss Cornell, who was evidently making herself very agreeable.

Mrs. Ralston came hurrying out, bringing with her a strain of music from the parlor, where Miss Cornell was singing. She ordered iced lemonade and waters for the refreshment of her guests, then vanished, leaving Eileen to squeeze lemons, crack ice and open boxes of wafers, certain that all would be as she would have it.

Eileen arranged her work dress for a simple, sprightly white one. Her thick, wavy hair crowned her head with glory, but her poor little hands were stained with her afternoon's work. "How can I go in there?" she thought. And her heart failed her for a moment. Then her courage came flowing back in a wave strong enough to tint her pale cheeks. "I will go in," she said aloud. "Why should I care? He'll never see me."

She lifted her chin and walked toward the parlor. Her entrance into the room produced an expectant hush. Miss Cornell, looking very fine in the blue flowered gown, was discussing music with Mr. Donovan on the piano. Other people were scattered about—a very gay party, certainly. Eileen felt like a humble moth beating its way into the light from the night

Cost Keeping

Cost keepers are constantly being criticised because the cost department costs too much. They want the information, but it costs too much to get it. Now the Split & Normal Burroughs is one of the machines that is used in a great many cost departments for the reason it does about three times the amount of work the ordinary adding machine can do. For instance, it will give you—pay checks, workmen's number and amount in one operation,—show you hours and amount,—give you labor and material—or, workmen's number, hours worked and amount—or job number, labor and material—or, date, number of pieces and amount—all with one operation of the handle, and will add only those columns that you want added.

Probably you have been worrying along with the ordinary type of adding machine, possibly because it costs a little bit less than usual.

If you haven't seen this Burroughs, you haven't seen the latest thing in adding machines.

somewhere, but she dispensed her refreshments calmly, and the little stained hand scarcely faltered. "Eileen!" Mrs. Ralston's voice had a tone of command. "Set down your tray and sing the 'The Shoogly-Shoo' for Mr. Donovan. He's been asking for it and nobody here knows it but you."

Eileen obeyed, looking neither to the right nor left as she stepped to her place at the piano. She laid her hands on the keys, playing her simple prelude by ear. Then she began to sing. As she sang she was lifted beyond herself, as she always was. The beautiful song filled the room and her heart with rapture. It ended, and she sat a moment quietly with her hands upon the keys as if she were just waking up. Then her eyes moved and met another pair of eyes in a wondering, startled look. That aroused her. And catching up her tray she ran from the room before anyone could speak to her. Safe in her room she knelt down before her open window and, gazing out into the moonlight and the dew, dreamed and dreamed.

She was up early next morning. There was much to do before the family came down. She was beating eggs when Donovan, of whom her mind was full, stood smiling in at her door. "Good morning!" he said cheerily. "Isn't there some little chore I can do for you? Mayn't I split the wood or—empty the ashes?" Eileen shook her head. Her face was one glad color. "All's done, Mr. Donovan," she said.

"You speak my name as if you liked it," he said. "I do, it's Irish." Eileen caught her breath. "I do, it's Irish." He was serious now. "Just as Irish as yourself, Miss—Eileen. That should prove a bond between us, eh? You wouldn't stay last night, and even now I can't tell you what it meant to me. Eileen, I've come a good way to hear that song—and find you. I've got a church 'out west and a paragon that I don't live in, however, because

"Palm oil," a synonym for "graft," is not at all a novelty in this sense. In 1627 Middleton wrote that "palm oil will make a pursuivant relent." metaphor, Greene speaks of rubbing turies revealed in varieties of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries with the "oil of angels." A humorous allusion to the coin named after the angelic figure stamped upon it, and "oil of angels" seems to have been quite a common joke in England. Another writer has a reference to "anointing" an ecclesiastic in the last "with Indian oyle." Both "anointing" and "greasing" were frequently used to mean bribing, even without special mention of the hand as the part greased.
