Schoolgirl's Exhausted Nerves
Headaches, Dizzy Spells and Weakness Overcome by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

At about the age that most girls are working hardest at school studying for examinations there are important physiological changes taking place which are an additional strain on the nervous system.
Miss Gallop has had experience in the cases of her daughter and grand-daughter, and for this reason her letter is particularly interesting to parents.
Mrs. J. A. Gallop, 125 Victoria Street, St. John, N.B., whose husband is a carpenter, states:—"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in our family for nervousness, headaches, business and nervous dyspepsia, and have found them satisfactory in every particular. My daughter Beale was going to school, and became quite run down in health. By the time she had used three boxes of this remedy her nerves were steady, her general health was excellent and she was entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells. We are more than pleased with the results of this treatment.
"More recently we used the Nerve Food for my granddaughter, who was out of school for nearly a year from nervous trouble, and noticed improvement in her condition at once."

The New Minister

"New, Cynthia Peel, you're acting outrageous. You don't know how folks are talking." Mrs. Peil's little mouth looked as if the puckering string that confined it had been given an extra jerk. "I guess I've got as good a right to my opinion as anybody."
"It happens to be the wrong opinion this time," Mrs. Hite nearly rucked herself out of her chair in exasperation.
"I don't know as it's a wrong opinion, and until I do I shall hang to it," retorted Mrs. Peil.
Mrs. Hite laughed in her vexation. "Hang to it," she said, "but you won't find anyone to hang with you. Everybody's in love with Mr. Brant. And you would be, too, if you'd ever heard him speak."
Mrs. Peil inter-upted dryly. "No danger of my ever hearing him if I don't go where he is. Now, you needn't try to do a deaf, harrier. I don't like the church sending Mr. Rodney away. He pleased me well enough if he didn't please other folks. As for this young upstart you've called, he can preach here till he's gray-headed and I'll never go to hear him. I shall attend the Presbyterian church."
Mrs. Hite bit her lip. She was so angry that she was red in the face. "Cynthia Peel, I feel just like shaking you," she said. "And would, too, if I could shake any sense into you. But some day you're going to change that opinion of yours. You've got to run up against the minister somewhere in the course of time and when you do you'll think he's the nicest thing out. Just the way the rest of us do. Now good-by."
Mrs. Peil watched her as she got her two hundred pounds and more down the ley front steps and over the still icier walk to her own house a few yards away.
Spring was well on its way, but the sharp blast that followed Mrs. Peil as she closed the door made her appreciate twice over the coziness of her little sitting room. The cat leaped over his cushion and she bent over and stroked him. Stroking the cat always soothed her when she was upset.
"I'm just about tired enough hearing them talk 'new minister' 'new,'" she told the cat, which was the sole confidant of most of her little problems. "My land, you'd think from all they say that he was an angel straight from the land above. There's Harry and Sam, never could go Mr. Rodney. But they say he's clean daffy over. I don't say much, but I know that no woman who wears a willer plume and a dress that looks like a man's night shirt the way that young Mrs. Brant does is fit to head a congregation like ours has always been. And he no better else he wouldn't allow he to do it. I don't want anything to do with them—I don't."
The large old-fashioned clock on the wall struck the hour.
"Noon," exclaimed Mrs. Peil. "Must get my lunch."
Though Mrs. Peil lived alone, she had lived alone ever since Mr. Peil had passed into the rest beyond, she ordered her meals with a much regularity as if a dozen were coming to eat them. She was poor and old, but she loved the comfort of life. As she lingered over the "showering meal her thoughts wandered as they invariably did of late, to the new minister and the un- toward circumstances he was bringing into her life. She loved her church and it was a terrible cross for her to bear when on Sunday she had to go past its door to that of the Presbyterian church beyond. She had expressed her opinion in forcible terms at the outset and she would not depart from it now no matter what came. In vain her old maid argued, in vain the good women of the church had called, in vain the dapper young minister had sought admittance at her door.
She was pouring her second cup of tea when she chanced to glance at the large figured calendar on the wall opposite. There was the date and the date, and in the stress of larger matters she had forgotten both.
"My land, it's the 16th!" she exclaimed. Then came another thought. "My insurance runs out to-day! Suppose the house had got on fire to-night and that paper not renewed!"
She turned pale at the thought. Rising, she got the important paper from her desk and examined it.
"I shall have to go right downtown and see about it," she said.
Mrs. Peil would never have of venturing out on the ice if it were not for the insurance. Yet her precious papers in her black bag she made her way nervously to ward the heart of the town. In some places coal ashes had been thoughtfully sprinkled, in others salt had been cast on the sidewalks were uncomfortable slippery.
"I've got to go right by our church and the parsonage," she sighed. "That young minister won't have laid a shovel to his walk, I know. Mr. Rodney was always so good about keeping it cleaned such weather as this."
But as she neared the parsonage she saw that the walk was as bare as one's hand, and liberally dusted with ashes. She hurried over it with ease. But just as she was stepping from it on to the walk beyond her foot slipped. She clutched for support, lost her bag and her balance, and went down jarringly with a shock that sent her senses fleeing.
She was just beginning to think again when hands grasped her and a man's face peered anxiously into hers.
"Hurry up, Nán," said a deep voice. "Lift her up. Thank God her limbs are not broken."
She was supported while a gentle touch straightened her hat and brushed down her skirt.
"My bag," she gasped.
"I've got it," said a woman's voice. "There! Being her along. Dick, I guess she's coming out all right."
Mrs. Peil was hurried up steps and into a warm atmosphere fragrant with rose geranium. A soft

ECCENTRIC FASTENINGS IN NEW EVENING WRAPS.
The straight up and down front fastening is a thing of the past, so far as wraps of the moment are concerned. The more eccentric is the manner of opening, the more chic the garment as a rule. This new Paquin wrap of old gold plush opens obliquely down the front from the right shoulder to the left under-arm seam and the long, oblique line is edged with ermine. A similar line at the back meets the ermine trimming at the front and makes the wrap appear as though a long fur sash had been draped over it. The sleeves are loose and baggy and white silk gloves with gold embroideries, which are retained after the wrap is removed, are worn.

Woodrow Wilson's Million.
The contributions to Woodrow Wilson's campaign fund amounted to $1,100,000, and were made by 91,000 persons. His popular financial support was far ahead of both Roosevelt and Taft in the presidential campaign. The contributions came from all sorts of people and from all parts of the United States, so that there was never anything like it before in a presidential campaign. The members of Canadian parties might well profit by this example. By individual subscriptions from large numbers they could place their party names above obligations to the great interests. This system was advocated by Sir Richard Cartwright.

Oso Station Notes.
Oso Station, Nov. 27.—The heaviest November snowstorm in a number of years fell here on Sunday last. J. Ravella and his gang of men moved to Sharbot Lake yesterday. A few from here attended the party at John Larmon's on Monday evening last, and report a good time. Miss Thora Clow visited Hettie Bourk on Saturday and Sunday last. A number from here attended the funeral of Mrs. John Charlton to-day. Mrs. John K. Hourk moved to Smith's Falls yesterday.

E. J. Blair, Perth, has purchased and taken possession of the Windsor House at Rosburgh.

One of Thomas A. Edison's New Blue Amberol Records was played 3,000 times on an Edison Phonograph—and gave just as true and sweet a reproduction the last time as the first

This was not an endurance test for mere hardness. It was an endurance test for quality of reproduction—to find if the Blue Amberol would be as far superior to all other records in tone after countless playings as it is when new. Your Edison dealer will play some of these wonderful records for you on an Edison Phonograph. Ask him to do so today.

NEW YORK LADY CURED BY RESTORATONE TABLETS.
Was so weak, fainting was a common occurrence.
"For years I suffered from inward trouble until I became a nervous wreck. I grew thin and pale and as my appetite and sleep became very poor I became much weaker and fainting was a common occurrence. After giving up all hope I was introduced to the great name given RESTORATONE TABLETS and decided to try a box. I have never regretted it, for RESTORATONE TABLETS after taking three tablets only one week, after the end of two months I felt as if a miracle had taken place for all my troubles had disappeared and I was enjoying good health. I cannot say too much in praise of RESTORATONE TABLETS. Should any girl or woman in ill health wish to write to see they are at liberty to do so." G. COLEMAN.
