FATHER MEA'S SERMON

ON MIXED MARRIAGES IN ST. MARY'S CATHEDRAL.

The Dean of Regiopolis Gave a Logical Discourse—Church of England Does Not Recognize Civil Marriage Law in England.

Rev. Father Mea, dean of Regiopolis College, preached in St. Mary's cathedral on Sunday morning on the subject of "Mixed Marriages." He dealt with the impediments to such unions. When one party is not Roman Catholic the celebration of the marriage is performed outside the church, although binding by the law of the land, were not tending to the conscience and religion of the Roman Catholic. Father Mea said these rules were for the protection of Protestants as well as Roman Catholics.

The Roman Catholic church is not the only church, he said, that differs in its laws from those of the land. English law recognizes the marriage between a man and his wife's sister. The Anglican church does not. He claimed for the church authority in spiritual affairs of life, as the state claims authority in civil affairs. Marriage was not only a civil contract, but has been raised by Christ to a holy sacrament. The laws of the Roman church were designed to protect and protect society against the evils of unwise and wrong unions. Father Mea stated also that the laws of the church were not supposed nor designed to mar or upset unions sanctioned by the laws of the country.
