GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Blanche Bates in "The Witness For The Defence."

A strong company in a strong drama was at the Grand last evenng. The play, "The Witness For the Defence," depicts a young English woman in India brutally used by her nusband; her shooting him, half in self-defence and half in nervous terror; her acquittal and return England; falling in love with and marrying a young man; and then, under persuasion, telling him that she was not guiltless of slaying her brutal husband. The play is skilfully worked out, and is one of the strongest dramas presented here in a
