PRINCE SHOWS FIRE

IN THE PREFACE WHICH HE HAS WRITTEN.

To the Book "Germany Under Arms"—The Prince's Preface I. Attracting a Good Deal of Attention.

Berlin, June 12.—The Crown Prince of Germany, Frederick William, has written a preface to "Germany Under Arms," which is attracting a good deal of interested attention, in view of the fact that this young man is destined some day to rule the German empire.

"Our fatherland, more than other countries, is compelled to rely upon its arms."

"Joy in bearing arms was ever in the hearts of our people. Even with the old Teutons a youth became a man only after he had had his baptism of fire."

"We live to-day, indeed, in a period which emphasizes the high level of its civilization and which delights in fantastic dreams of the possibilities of an eternal and universal peace."

"Since its last great wars Germany has passed through a period of economic development that almost awakens anxiety."

Cured Eczema Like Magic

Suffered for Years—Tried All Kinds of Treatment—Surprised at Results from Dr. Chase's Ointment.

You can soon tell when people are enthusiastic about medical treatment by the language they use. After experimenting with all sorts of ointments in a vain effort to obtain relief and cure the writer of this letter was astonished at the quick and satisfactory results obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

"It worked like magic," she writes. Indeed, it is surprising the healing that is often effected in a single night by this great ointment. The stinging and itching are relieved at once, and cure is only a matter of time and patient treatment."

Things are tacitly tolerated to-day that formerly were condemned. Everything is sacrificed in the pursuit of money. Old ideals, even the reputation and honor of the nation, can suffer, so long as the people enjoy a period of peace in which to amass wealth.

"If we study history we see that the lesson of the need of warlike efficiency in a people runs like a red thread through its pages. Even strong and great nations have lost their long-maintained position in the front rank when the nurture of military virtues has given place to the passion for easy living, and when a fresher and more efficient people, seizing its advantage, has appeared in the arena."

"Diplomatic skill can and should postpone conflicts for a time, and sometimes settle them. All men in leading positions, must accept their enormous responsibility in the deciding hour. They must see clearly that the gigantic conflagration, once kindled, cannot be extinguished easily and quickly."

"And therefore every man who loves his country and believes in the great future of the people must joyfully contribute his part to prevent the old soldier spirit of our fathers from being lost. The sword alone does not suffice; the arm that holds it must be made strong by practice. Every man of us must keep himself able to bear arms and ready at heart for the great and earnest hour when the emperor calls to the colors—the hour when we no longer belong to ourselves, but to our country."

"All our abilities must be brought to the highest state of efficiency to supplement that will to conquer which never in history has known defeat."

FEARS UNITED STATES.

Yet Bourassa Sees in French-Canadian the Safeguard.

Edmonton, June 13.—That the maintenance of the French language and the retention of the distinctive characteristics of the French-Canadian race in the dominion formed the principal safeguard against the dominion ever being politically absorbed by the United States, was the principal contention put forward by Henri Bourassa, the nationalist leader, who was the guest of the Canadian Club.

The relations between the United States and Canada, from geographical and commercial reasons, said Mr. Bourassa, were much more intimate than those existing between the dominion and Great Britain.

English was the prevalent language spoken in the United States, and if the same tongue were exclusively spoken in Canada there would be, Mr. Bourassa contended, a grave danger of the great republic, with its hundred million inhabitants, mentally, the dominion, with its seven million morally and intellectually assimilating people.

Everybody is building Concrete Roads

CONCRETE roads have literally taken Canada by storm. From Halifax to Vancouver, road commissions, town and county engineers, town councils and good roads associations, have been quick to discover the remarkable advantages of the concrete pavement. Its use, either for country highways, or for city streets, is so clearly the best solution of the good roads problem, that there has been little of the delay which usually accompanies the introduction of a comparatively new method. Experiences such as the one which Mr. Hines reports are responsible for this rapid growth in popularity:—

An Authority's Statement

Extract from paper recently presented by Edward N. Hines, Chairman of the Board of County Road Commissioners, Wayne County, Mich., before the National Association of Cement Users, at Pittsburgh, Pa.

"It is a sad commentary on the conduct of an undertaking of any magnitude, that individuals, municipalities, states or nations, all seem to find it necessary to do a certain amount of experimenting and dilly-dallying before accepting the conclusions and avoiding the failures of previous demonstrations. This is particularly true of the various phases of the good roads movement.

"The initial cost of a good concrete road is little, if any, greater than that of a first-class bituminous road. One of the greatest fallacies indulged in by communities starting to improve their highways is that cheapness in cost of original construction of roads means economy and that the highway official who can build the greatest area of roads at the least outlay per square yard is working for the community's best interest.

"On one of the main highways out of Detroit, Grand River road, the first two miles is tar macadam. If someone had offered to build this road absolutely without one penny's cost to Wayne County, stipulating only that we should maintain it in a fairly average condition, at the end of eight years we would have been money ahead by rejecting the offer and building it of concrete under our present specifications. Of course, six years ago, when we built this road, we did not possess this knowledge, but our experience was one of the reasons for abandoning the construction of this type of road and turning to concrete. When it comes to annual cost, the concrete road stands pre-eminent. With more than 60 miles of concrete road in Wayne County, some of it in its fourth year, we have spent less than $300 on its surface for maintenance and this is what makes this type of road the cheapest of all roads."
