H. S. BEGG TESTIFIED

WITH REGARD TO CHARGES MADE AGAINST HIM.

How He Made the Ointment—Little Time Taken With Regard to Some of the Charges.

(Continued from page 1) H. S. Beggs was then called by Mr. Givens and he explained how he had mixed the ointments about which complaint had been made. He had always used fine powdered opium in making up this ointment. The lumps referred to would be caused by exposure to light or the air.

Dr. Etherington said that the commission had heard enough on the ointment charge, and had their opinion on the matter.

Witness said that Convict Laird refused to take milk ordered by the doctor. He questioned Laird, and latter stated that he had never suffered from stomach trouble and witness, on his own authority, had given the convict some tapoca and tea. This did not hurt the convict, as he was able to be out four days later.

Mr. Givens referred to other charges which had been lodged against Beggs by Overseer Wilson, which included neglect in keeping the key of refrigerator cellar in his possession, insolence and insubordination, towards the overseer and the falsifying of records. On the first two charges, very little time was spent, the evidence being unimportant, and attention was then given the last charge.

Prison records were again inspected relative to the absence of prison officials, but nothing of importance was brought out.

Bathing of Prisoners. Mr. Beggs was questioned as to the charge made by a convict that he had not been bathed while in the hospital. Witness could not give any information on this matter.

Mr. Downey was asked to know what was the general rule for the bathing of patients but witness said he had no recollection of any general regulations.

"And how long have you been in this position in the hospital," asked Mr. Downey.

"I have been here eleven and a half years."

"And you have been in charge of the hospital three or four times?"

"Yes, I was," was the reply.

Mr. Whiting—"What are your orders? What have you been in the habit of doing in regard to bathing patients?"

"I used my own judgment."

"And what is your own judgment?"

"That a man should get a bath every day."

"When you were in charge did the convicts get a bath every day?"

"I do not know. I suppose they did."

Witness said that he always took his orders from the surgeon, and he left it to the orderly. If a convict was not bathed, he would complain to witness or Wilson. It was not a common thing to have complaints about convicts not being bathed.

To Mr. Givens, witness said that he would not want to have an order from the surgeon before he gave convicts a bath.

"As a matter of fact, has there not been ill feeling between you and Overseer Wilson?" Mr. Downey asked the witness.

Given Too Much Work. Witness admitted that this was so, but explained that the trouble was due to the fact that too much work had been placed on his shoulders.

Mr. Downey—"The trouble was over the failure to divide the work?"

"Yes," replied the witness.

Witness was questioned about the falsification of records in the book kept in the surgery and which records the absence of officials.

Overseer Wilson stated that two weeks after he had taken over his duties in 1912, he found that several changes had been made in the case of Beggs.

It was shown that this record was not presented at Ottawa, for the pay sheet, but that the book kept in the warden's office was used for this purpose, so that there would be nothing to gain in the changing of the records for Beggs.

He had reported this to the surgeon.

Beggs swore positively, that he did not know anything about how the changes had been made, and no solution was arrived at to clear up the mystery, although the chairman was anxious to have it cleared up.

There was no further evidence in the Beggs charges, and the chairman then announced that the case was closed. If counsel on either side desired to add anything further, they could submit a memorandum to the commission.

The commission then adjourned for lunch.

It was stated that at the afternoon session a report would be given by Dr. E. H. Young, of Rockwood hospital, regarding the condition and treatment of convicts in the insane ward.

EMINENT SURGEONS

Grieve With Russia Over Ebbing Health of Czarevitch.

A recent photograph of the czarevitch of Russia and his mother. The young heir to the throne, according to the report of eminent surgeons, is suffering untold agonies from rapid tuberculosis of the bones, for which there is no cure. For some time past, the youngster has appeared in the streets of St. Petersburg, but always in the arms of an orderly, as he cannot walk. The sad life of the young czarevitch, whose illness has filled the life of the czarina with sorrow, has touched a sympathetic cord in all the world. Arrangements are being made at Holwan, Egypt, for the reception of the young fellow, who is to undergo treatment at the famous sulphur springs at that place.

TREATMENT OF CRIMINALS

Misplaced Leniency Is But Additional Spur to Crime.

The view that the aim of the law should be to protect society from further onslaught by the criminal, and not merely to wreak vengeance on the offender, is here to stay. The institutions of parole and of probation are doing good, and their influence should not be curtailed. At the same time, however, our courts should not abandon discretion to the winds.

Judge Oison's arraignment of the "foolish sympathy" which turns loose upon the community the pick-pocket and petty criminal who will never reform deserved consideration. Leniency toward a misguided youth who gets into trouble, but who will mend his ways if spared a prison sentence, is justified. This same leniency extended to a thoroughly "bad" fellow, in spite of his "stage grief" and promises, is wasted. In fact, it is but a spur to further crime.

DR. FERNOW ADDRESSED

KINGSTON CANADIAN CLUB AT LUNCHEON ON FRIDAY.

Distinguished Authority Reviewed Canada's Timber Resources and Their Preservation—Called For Type of Patriotism Which Improves Conditions.

Addressing a well-attended gathering of the Kingston Canadian Club, at luncheon, in the Hotel Frontenas, Friday noon, Dr. B. F. Fernow, the head of the department of forestry at the University of Toronto, on "Mortgaging the Future," called for a type of patriotism that strives to conserve and improve conditions that make for true greatness of a nation. Patriotism of the military kind he could see no occasion for specially fostering; of that of the braggard, it is not optimism, seeing things better than they really are, or pessimism, seeing the darkest side of the situation, but it is "mediumism," which is the policy of Dr. Fernow. He contended for the kind of patriotism that will see how things can be made better.

"I propose," said he, "to direct your thoughts to the one problem with which I have occupied myself for a life time, the proper use of forest resources, which in Canada more than elsewhere needs the active interest of every patriot, who desires the area which contains and is capable in."

"Canada has had, and still has, the reputation of being a timber country; and, as I heard Mr. Borden himself declare, it has inexhaustible timber resources. 'Inexhaustible,' to be sure, is a mere phrase and can only mean 'very large,' compared with the population and the present demand.

"We have little statistical data upon which to base declarations of this kind. But, if by timber is understood material for saw mills to supply the general market, the estimates are, that as to areas the dominion has hardly three-fifths of the timber producing area of the United States, and as to amounts, not more than one-quarter of what is estimated still standing ready for the axe in the United States. The woodland area of Canada, is indeed, vast, but to make his country the best land to be of growing commercial log timber is quite limited.

"There are really large contiguous areas of commercial timber in Canada, as are found, e.g., in the southern states; such timber occurs more frequently in pockets, islands or small areas distributed among the less valuable woodland.

"It is true the present annual cut of Canada, with a population of less than one-tenth that of the states, is small, and if it did not increase with the increasing population, the present cut could be had for more than a hundred years from the present stand of timber.

"But, of course, the cut will increase as the population grows; and since our neighbors are rapidly getting rid of their supplies at a rate of 40 billion feet per annum they, too, will call on the dominion to help them out more and more, so that the problem of log supplies for the future will much sooner become an important matter, than present conditions would make it appear.

"It is needless here to call attention to the erroneous notions, that lumbermen and other good people have regarding the rate of growth at which trees grow to long size. This is an important matter, as it determines the attitude which people take towards provision for the future."

The speaker dealt at some length on the damage to the forests by conflagration, and the extent of the areas of agricultural soil of the dominion. He concluded:

"Let me warn you that this policy of non-concern in the fate of your poor forest soils can have only one sequence: the revenues from this source, which could have been kept flowing forever are bound to give out sooner or later, and direct taxation must be substituted. Then Canadians will begin to take interest in their governments. What is needed, is first of all a patriotic spirit which takes an interest in these internal economic problems a recognition of the moral obligation which the present generation owes to the future generations to hand over, unimpaired in their productive power, the resources, which like the soil and the forest can be kept in inexhaustible reproduction; then breaking with the antiquated methods, which fitted the early pioneering times, and substituting a more modern up-to-date and efficient management of these resources."

Prof. W. Gill presided at the luncheon, in the absence of the president, J. L. Whiting, K.C. He gave a brief sketch of the career, both in the United States and Canada, of the Dr. Fernow, who is one of the leading authorities on forestry of the continent.
