Tips For the Farmer

BY UNCLE JOSE.

Why Not More Sheep?

Sheep husbandry says Bulletin No. 20 just issued by the United States Bureau of Agriculture should receive more attention from the farmers of this country than it does at the present time. Unquestionably sheep raising could profitably be fitted into the general management of thousands of farms where there is none at the present time. On many other farms the size of the flock could be increased and more attention given to this branch of farming with resulting profit to the owner.

Mutton never has been as highly appreciated in America as it should be. Probably one reason for this has been the supply of cheap beef that this country has enjoyed up to the past few years. The days of cheap beef are over, however, and it is necessary that some substitute for it be found. Mutton is the logical solution of the problem. It is true that the people will have to be educated more thoroughly as to its value, but mutton is now more in favor as a food than it used to be. A particular class of American people who have underrated mutton are the farmers, many of whom keep a flock yet, seldom, if ever, slaughter one for their own use. A lamb or sheep could frequently be killed for use by the flock owner and the world would be much better than buying meat. There would also be the satisfaction of knowing that the meat was fresh and wholesome.

Having been engaged in clearing land for a number of years, I would like to give some of my methods of clearing new land. In the removal of large stumps I have found in the most convenient to use dynamite. While it will seldom blow the stump out of the ground, it will usually split it in several parts and lay bare the roots, thus enabling the grubber to remove the stump piece by piece, which is less laborious than removing the whole stump. The cost of this explosive will not justify its use on stumps under 6 to 8 inches in diameter. It is too expensive for general use in clearing land, and while it is no doubt the cheapest method for removing stumps of large size, it is a question whether it is advisable, for general farming, to clear land covered with many such stumps. The cost of dynamite will vary approximately from 10 to 20 cents per stump, it is readily seen that, if there are hundreds of these per acre, the cost will be too great to justify clearing by this method land destined for general farming.

Another good method is by clearing with a horse and chain. This method consists in pulling the young trees out of the ground. Best results can be obtained where the growth consists of saplings, say 2 by 4 inches in diameter. The ground should be soft and loose. The plan is to make a chain, consisting of fastening one end of a long log chain to the trunk of the tree as high above the ground as the flexibility of the tree will permit, and hitch a steady horse to the other end of the chain. While the horses are pulling at the tree a man should be at its base with an axe and assist them by cutting such roots as seem loath to give way.—A. E. J.

Notes of Interest.

Many poultry men fancy says the American Agriculturist, that by having warm water or "with the chill off" they will get more eggs from their fowls during winter. E. T. DeGraf, of Montgomery county, N.Y., thinks "drinking animals" like the cow or the horse. She doesn't take enough water in at a time to reduce the temperature of her body enough to affect egg production one way or the other.

An increasing interest in being manifested in underlining, and considerable tiling was done during the season, especially in the western half of the State.

Turkeys on the Farm.

There is no branch of poultry raising where expense counts so much as in caring for turkeys. I find the best feed for young poulters is corn bread for the first week or two, with free range so that they will pick their own meat supply. Some brands of chick feed are all right for the young poulters, and some brands have some kind of seed or grain that is deadly poison to them. I saw one woman kill some fine young gobblers she was fattening for market by giving them beet scraps. If one starts with a single turkey, giving it free range and

Feeding Young Pigs.

Some remarks on feeding young pigs in Canada. In America, as will be read with interest. A newly-born pig's body is largely water, and to grow he must have food that will produce tissue. That's why the milk, primarily designed to furnish proper nourishment for growing animals, needs to be as it is in a nitrogenous substance. Later, when the time comes that he is intended for quick fattening, he should naturally be supplied with feed containing much fat-making material, and it is that quality which has given corn its high place in finishing pigs for market. It is readily seen, therefore, that different kinds of feed will be needed to furnish the most beneficial results, according to the stage of growth of the animal, and the energy required for its maintenance, and the end to which the animal is destined, yet it does not necessarily follow that a ration should be one of solid or be dominated by one element to the exclusion of a variety.

The Best Pigs.

The best pigs would be pigs of a pure breed, said the department of agriculture, New Zealand. "The sale of pure-bred boars and sows would materially assist the returns. The chosen should be one quick in reaching maturity, and in which the laying-out of flesh and fat is rapid. Berkshire are, no doubt, one of the best breeds for both bacon and pork; nevertheless, if they are allowed to mature before being fattened, they are prone to lay on fat at the expense of flesh. Berkshires cross exceedingly well with other pure breeds (especially the Tamworth and Large Black), and the produce when skillfully managed will weigh at four months old downward, eighty-four pounds and upwards. Therefore, the breeding stock should be composed of pure-breeds and the feeding herds of cross-breeds to obtain the best results but in no case should the breeder go beyond crossing with two pure-breeds, as thereby a mongrel is bred, which is unprofitable.

the province. More would have been done but for the scarcity of labor. Many new dwellings have also been erected or remodelled, and a large number of bars have had new basements put under them for stabling, with cement flooring. A large amount of woven fencing has also been put up this season.—Ontario Agricultural Bulletin.

At a meeting of a farmers' Mutual Protection Association, held at Indian Fields, N.J., the opinion was expressed that any man who keeps a dog should be compelled to keep the animal at home, the same as a farmer is required to keep his stock at home and under control. It is urged that failure to comply with such requirement should subject the dog to seizure and confiscation. There is no more reason why dogs should run at large than live stock. Worthless curs have their liberty and roam about without let or hindrance. And these dogs furnish one reason why lambs and sheep are so scarce.

A report to the Trade and Commerce Department by Canadian Trade Commissioner Beddoe, of New Zealand, states that the steamship Maraca, leaving Auckland on Nov. 21 for Canada, carried 17,500 cases of butter, 278 carcasses of veal, and 1,250 carcasses of mutton for Canadian consumption.

If you have a mongrel flock, why not select the best of the females and purchase a strong, vigorous, pure-bred male to mate with them. It will increase the value of next year's flock twenty-five per cent.

Do not cut down the hen's ration because grain is high. Eggs are high and the hen cannot lay unless she is well fed.

Weak-looking or deformed fowls, or those which have ever been seriously sick, should never be kept, but should be disposed of immediately, because they are never profitable.

A good breakfast for laying hens is good wheat scattered in a deep litter where they will get exercise in scratching it out.

Don't forget that a variety of grain, beef scraps, or other meat food, oyster shells, grit, charcoal and green food are necessary to produce eggs.

Agricultural production has been greatly stimulated by the use of fertilizers, the consumption of these having risen from 1,600,000 tons in 1890 to close upon 6,000,000 tons in 1910, valued at $100,000,000.

Castle Ashby and Its Texts.

Castle Ashby, the residence of the Marquis of Northampton, stands alone among all the "stately houses of England" as embodying in its architectural features texts of Scripture in solid masonry set out for every one to see in the most prominent places possible. The porter's lodge at the entrance to the mansion bears on its cornice the inscription in Latin, "The Lord preserve thy coming in," and on the inner cornice the text, "The Lord preserve thy going out." The same ideas have been carried out in the design of the balustrades of the terraces surrounding the lawns and flower beds, which make the gardens of Castle Ashby among the most beautiful in the country. The mansion itself is unique, as all its pediments are composed of texts of Scripture in Latin. Commencing at the south end of the west wing is the inscription in bold letters, "Except the Lord, the Keeper, keep the house, in vain he watches who keeps it." Then follows another inscription dated 1624, the year the house was completed, "Except the Lord build the house, they have labored in vain who build it." Along the outer balustrade we read: "Blessed are they who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways. Praise ye the name of the Lord. Amen."—Trenshy.

Has Ancient Inca Mummy.

T. G. Taylor, of Halifax, N.S., and Chill, has brought an Inca mummy, 2,000 years old. Taylor found it several months ago in Chill, where he was superintending the digging of a railroad cut. He will loan it for exhibition at the Provincial Museum at Halifax.

The figure is in a squatting position, with its hands over its knees, and is not more than a foot tall. According to the superintendent of the museum in Antofagasta, Chill, the Inca possessed a lost art of reducing the size of a body after death. The numerous skeletons found in constructing the railroad, said Taylor, were all about eighteen inches in height and seemed to bear out this theory.

Notes of Interest.

Many poultry men fancy says the American Agriculturist, that by having warm water or "with the chill off" they will get more eggs from their fowls during winter. E. T. DeGraf, of Montgomery county, N.Y., thinks "drinking animals" like the cow or the horse. She doesn't take enough water in at a time to reduce the temperature of her body enough to affect egg production one way or the other.

An increasing interest in being manifested in underlining, and considerable tiling was done during the season, especially in the western half of the State.
