

ALL ARE NOT AGREED

UPON TEACHING THE BIBLE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Some Hold Up Both Hands, While Others Claim the Home and Sunday School are the Places for Religious Teachings.

That religious and moral instruction will eventually form part of the regular curriculum of all public schools is the opinion of many prominent members of the Ontario Board of Education and the clergy. Dr. John Seath, who, under instructions from the department of education, has lately been canvassing the opinions of members of the various denominations regarding the introduction of moral and religious instruction into the public schools, has made a report in which the scheme is divided into three departments—instruction in denominational doctrine, instruction in bible knowledge and systematic training in morality. Dr. Seath's scheme, which will not interfere with the regular work of the schools, will be in the hands of special instructors who will combine with the literary and historical study whatever doctrinal matters it is deemed advisable to take up.

Some of the ministers and clergymen and school trustees have expressed their opinions as follows: Rev. T. W. Savary—The proposal to, as I understand it from a recent newspaper article, examine in public schools our religious instruction, I should agree with. Denominationally I believe Protestant people should and do agree on the fundamentals of Christianity. We already have, to a certain extent, bible reading in the classes.

Rev. Alfred Brown—While I have not yet gone into the question to any degree, the general principles commend themselves to me, and I am disposed to at once endorse the scheme to that extent.

School Trustee James Craig—In my opinion, the Bible, as a religious result should this scheme of religious instruction, or any one similar, be introduced into the public schools. The effect of it in classes where the pupils have been reared in families of different denominations, and different religions (for there are many Jeweled children) would inevitably be undesirable. I agree with bible reading in all schools and good moral influences around the children. The Sunday school and the home are, where religious instruction should be given.

Trustee W. H. Macnee—Yes, I believe that something should be done in this matter of religious instruction in the public schools. Of course, in this the Sunday schools and the home have the special opportunity, but in the case of the latter, are the parents discharging this responsibility? I believe, on the whole, the answer is No. However, many points require careful consideration, particularly that of "denominational" instruction.

Trustee Thomas Mills—I would not care to express myself on the matter at this time, without further thought upon it. This question of religious instruction is a very important one in the schools requires careful treatment.

Rev. J. W. McIntosh—I am emphatically in favor and consider that it is essential to the preservation and culture of the ideals handed down to us by the founders of Canada, that the rising generation should be acquainted with the scriptures on which these ideals rest.

Rev. F. G. Robinson—I am greatly in favor of teaching the scripture in schools with proper text books, competent teachers, and a special instructor on the same, but let the teachers be competent. Many declare that this subject should be taught in the home, but very few would receive any instruction at all if left to the home. All large educational institutions should have a special instructor appointed or if this cannot be done let the scriptures be taught in such places by the ministers of the city.

Rev. C. A. Lowes—I am in favor of teaching it in the schools if it is done in a reverent way. A large number of the teacher are owing to the number of sects in the Protestant religion they might give a wrong version to the children.

H. F. Metcalfe, Trustee—I am in favor of the Bible, being taught in a graded form from the juvenile classes to the higher forms. It could be taught to good advantage in the schools, but although it may be successfully carried out, I think the home is about as good a place as any for it.

R. Wallace, school trustee—Owing to the divided condition of Protestantism it is in my mind impossible to introduce Bible study into the school curriculum, unless it might be the simple reading of scripture, without commentation by the teachers.

Mr. Elliott said: In an address I made in 1904 I urged that in the schools the making of citizens was the desired goal; that it was our duty "to build up in the school pupils a character, strong, true, vigorous, intelligent and patriotic." I think so still. The teachers of Kingston stand for the truest and best in life and can breathe into the children the very spirit of morality, industry and frugality. False impressions of life should be taught out of the children. The home should do its share in moral teaching and character building, but unfortunately it does not, hence the one-sided fight of the teacher against baneful influences outside. I am convinced that the education that will tell in the life of the country must be grounded in moral force and genuine worth. Study of books will not do this as effectively as though the teacher instructed his pupils incidentally and not primarily. Training the pupils for helpful service should be the aim of all teachers: teach the gospel of service, of righteousness, of morality, by precept and example.

Rev. R. Meek—Dr. Seath proposes, in his plan of religious study, the one thing necessary to give effect to the plan of study adopted by the Board of Education in Kingston. There has been study, but no examinations. The fifth scheme requires religious training in the home and Sunday school. It must be supplemented in the public schools or the plan becomes a failure.

THE LATE ALBERT BARNES

He Passed Away After Years of Suffering.

On Friday, December 19th, there passed away in the person of Albert Barnes, one of Dufferin's most promising young men. Mr. Barnes, although only forty-three years of age, had been a great sufferer seven years ago his disease was diagnosed as diabetes and although the best medical skill was employed, and he was faithfully nursed and cared for by his devoted wife the doctor could hold out no hope of his ultimate recovery. Many times he bore his sufferings and hopelessly awaited himself of every remedy recommended by his numerous friends, but to no avail and finally with his trust in the Saviour, to whom he had ever turned, he succumbed and looked forward with Christian faith and fortitude to the end.

Mr. Barnes was the youngest son of the late James Barnes, Dufferin, and leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife and five small children, three sons and three daughters, James and Henry Barnes, Dufferin; William, John of British Columbia; Mrs. J. Milton and Mrs. Martha Barnes also of British Columbia, and Mrs. Robert Gates of Dufferin. The funeral, largely attended, took place on Monday December 22nd and the body was placed in the vault at Cataract.

She was born in Glenburnie, Ontario, and resided there until about nine years ago, when she came to Kingston, and lived with her daughter, Mrs. McConville, ever since. The deceased had only been ailing for a few days. A week ago she was able to be down street to do some shopping.

There are left to mourn, four sons and two daughters, William, of Kingston; James, a keeper in Portmouth penitentiary; Joseph, machinist at the locomotive works; Thomas, at the home at Pittsburg; Mrs. A. McConville, of this city, and Mrs. E. McCarthy, of Syracuse, N.Y. The deceased also leaves one brother and one sister, Marshall Fair, of Kingston, father of Ald. W. J. Fair, and Mrs. S. Stewart, of Kingston. The late Mrs. Doyle was a Roman Catholic in religion, and the funeral will take place at St. Mary's cathedral at 9 o'clock, Wednesday morning, where mass will be sung for the repose of her soul. ROUGH HOCKEY PLAYERS ARE TO BE REPORTED

Davidson Among the Number — Toronto Globe's Opinion of Frontenacs — Belleville Juniors To Play Clean.

Several players are to be reported to the National Hockey Association for the rough work which marred the Ottawa-Toronto game at Toronto Saturday night. Referee Brennan informed the Ottawa club after the game that he would lay the facts concerning the brutal work before President Quinn and recommend the suspension or expulsion of the men in question. It is understood that McGillivray will be heavily punished for his persistent foul tactics, and that Davidson will be reported for his attack on Barragh, while Roman may also come in for attention because of his efforts to put Davidson out of the game.

For Kingston, Brouse played an effective game, but did not backcheck. Crawford also did good work at center. The defence was good and have been taught to check the man with the stick and to use their bodies.

Unusual For Belleville

Belleville has a remarkably clean-looking junior team. The management threaten to let out any player who displays a nasty spirit or retaliates for roughness of opponents. "Play hockey and stay on the ice," is their motto.

Seely's Bay Won

STORY OF LADY'S "YES"

Letter Follows Man for Fourteen Months.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—A romance, in which Cupid was banished for nearly two years by the exigencies of modern travel and the energy of the world's post officials, has had a happy sequel at Topeka, Kansas, where the marriage of Mr. Harry T. Plunkett, a rising young civil engineer, and Miss Ruth Perrotti, a wealthy young society woman of that city, has taken place.

The bridegroom arrived at San Francisco from the east on December 11, received a letter which had been following him across the Pacific for 14 months, and which contained the lady's acceptance of his proposal, made two years ago.

The couple met at Topeka two years ago, and it was a case of love at first sight, the lady left for a touring party, and Mr. Plunkett, having been offered a remunerative post in China, decided to propose by letter.

The proposal followed Miss Ruth Perrotti from one country to another and did not reach her until she returned home seven months later. It had been re-directed in 16 languages. She replied accepting this much-travelled proposal.

In the meantime, Mr. Plunkett had gone from China to Japan, Korea, Manchuria, back to San Francisco, and back to the east. Had the postal officials been at all dilatory in several places they would have caught up with the eagerly expected letter, but the authorities displayed commendable promptitude in redirecting the engineer's mail and six times the letter crossed the Pacific.

At last Cupid triumphed, for Mr. Plunkett tarried long enough at San Francisco to enable the elusive letter, the envelope of which was almost covered with rotations in Chinese, Japanese, Korean, Russian and other languages, to catch him up.

On receipt of the letter he acted with energy. A train left San Francisco for the east in one hour's time, so throwing a few things into a handbag he rushed to the station, stopping only at the telegraph office to send a long explanatory telegram announcing his departure for Topeka.

PROTEST AT COBALT

Claim That Mayor Trudell Was Wrongfully Elected.

Cobalt, Jan. 13.—The supporters of Dr. E. F. Armstrong, the defeated candidate in the recent mayoralty contest, have decided to protest the election of A. Z. Trudell, the mayor-elect, and the chief magistrate of the town last year. The necessary documents are now being drawn up by the lawyers, and will be filed before District Judge Hartman at an early date. The grounds are alleged impersonation at polls one, two and six, alleged marked ballot at poll six, hiring rigs, a charge that polls one and six were not open until 9:30 a.m., and the statement that no one was present to receive income tax. This last named, it is said, was the cause of several voters, who had not paid their tax on the day of election, being disqualified. Mayor Trudell had a majority of seven in a record poll.

THE KING'S SON

The Prince of Wales Enjoys Only the Life of a Country Gentleman.

The Prince of Wales, George V., that is to be, has no taste innate or acquired for sovereignty. He is less the King's own son than his grandmother's own grandson. The King loves urban life with all its excitements and excitements; the prince, like Queen Victoria, prefers life in the comparative retirement of the country. The King has little taste for domesticity; the prince is a born bourgeois in his liking for domestic life. The King has the tastes, the habits, the requirements of a man of the world. Paris pleases him no less than does London. He is at home in Marienbad or Biarritz. The prince enjoys the life of an English country gentleman on his own domain, and he is uneasy when he makes visits of obligation to the continent or "imperial tours" to open federal legislatures in distant colonies. The King takes his sport vicariously—from the royal enclosure at Ascot or Epsom or Doncaster. The prince is one of the best shots in England, keen to follow the grouse across the moor or at the stalking of stags in Scotland. The King has an amiable liking and a practiced familiarity with the arts—music, the drama, painting, sculpture, letters. The prince is indifferent to all these things. They do not interest him; he cannot make them interest him. The King has a kind of instinctive aptitude for the formalities of sovereignty; now that the prince has begun to exercise some of them he has needed sedulous coaching. The King's tact, the King's talents for sovereignty, the King's genuine capacity for constitutional monarchy have not descended to his son. The King's traits are warmly outlined in his life, and they are clearly in play wherever and whenever he is in close contact with his subjects. Many of them are the aristocratic traits that in sovereignty, in their lighter relations with their people, so commend them to a democratic community. The prince lacks such distinctions, and he is outwardly so cold of temperament that he seems distant and indifferent when it is the least of his wishes so to be. England is conventionally "loyal" to the Prince of Wales. It holds the King in an affectionate regard that makes "loyal" seem an academic adjective.

His Rescue.

Before the erection of the pier at the Castle Rock passenger ferry from Dumbarton, Scotland, had to be conveyed down the Leven to the Clyde steamer by a ferryboat, rowed by two sturdy and generally elderly ferrymen. On one occasion an English traveler had secured himself on the gunwale at the stern. One of the old ferrymen, aware of the danger to any one so placed when the rope of the steamer should be attached to the bow of the boat, took occasion to warn the man of his danger.

"No, my man, come down all that or ye'll couer!"

The traveler replied by telling him to mind his own business and trust him to take care of himself.

"Weel," said the ferrymen, "mind I've telt ye. As sure as ye're sittin' there ye'll couer, come down all that or ye'll couer!"

No sooner had the rope been attached and the boat got the inevitable tug from the steamer than the fellow went over the stern.

"I telt him that!"

However, being in the water, it behooved that every effort should be made to rescue him. So the ferrymen made a grab at what seemed the hair of his head, when a wig came away. Throwing this impatiently into the boat, he made a grip at the collar of his shirt, when the front came away. Casting this from him with still greater scorn, he shouted to his companion:

"Tammas, come and help save as muckle of this man as ye can, for he's comin' awa' in bits!"

Wet and Dry Moons. There is an old superstition, which dies hard, that the position of the horns of the new moon tells what the weather will be; if the horns of the crescent are on the same level, it will hold water, and hence it is dry moon; but if it is tipped up, then the water will run out, and it is a wet moon.

One thing has helped keep this belief alive; the moon is "dry" in the part of the spring that is usually fair, while it is "wet" during the season of autumn rains.

If this were a sure sign of the weather we could have our predictions years in advance, for an astronomer can predict the exact position of the moon at any time in the future.

The cause for the different positions of the crescent is simple: The moon is south of the sun in the autumn and north of it in spring. The crescent is formed by the light of the sun falling on the moon, and the horns are naturally in a line perpendicular to the direction of the sun from the moon. That is all there is to it.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Keep Her Locks Dark, Glossy, Thick.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we age living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50c a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.
