THE Pillar of Light
By Louis Tracy

Down he went. Without waiting, Brand and the girls bawled lustily at the rope. It was no child's play to hoist a heavy pulley and several hundred feet of stout cordage.

Very unwillingly, they left him hauling alone at the rope though their predecessors, knowing the need of it, helped vigorously from the gallery. Indeed, it was with difficulty that Pyne was held back from returning with the descending rope.

The newcomer was a typical Briton. "Thanks," he said. "Close shave. Have you a light? We must signal after each arrival."

COMPLICATION OF WOMAN'S ILLS
Yields to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Athena, Texas.—"I had a complication of diseases, some of them of long standing. I wrote to you for advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and some other things that you suggested. I must confess that I am much better in every way and have been relieved of some of the worst troubles. My neighbors say I look younger now than I did fifteen years ago."

While looking forward to health and long life it is possible that you are unaware of the conditions necessary to attain healthful old age.

Overeating is the usual cause of torpid, sluggish liver action, and is thrown on the kidneys and they break down. Kidney disorders are the great source of suffering in old age.

The survivors on deck worked with feverish energy. The time was drawing short. They did not know the second that some unusually tempestuous wave would devour them utterly.

"Now, Mr. Pyne, you next," cried the chief officer, addressing the young Philadelphian, who, mirabile dictu, had found and lighted a cigar.

"Guess I'll swing up along with the captain," was the answer.

"Up with him," shouted the captain, fiercely, himself helping to loop Pyne to the fourth officer.

All others had gone. The officers were leaving the ship in order of seniority, the juniors first. Just as the quartette were about to swing clear of the ship the captain grasped Pyne's hand. "Thank you, lad," he said, and away they went.

There were left on the vessel the third, second, and first officers, the purser and the captain. The others wanted the captain to come with them. He resisted, held out for his right to be the last to quit a ship he had commanded for more than twenty years, and hoarsely forbade any further argument.

Very unwillingly, they left him hauling alone at the rope though their predecessors, knowing the need of it, helped vigorously from the gallery. Indeed, it was with difficulty that Pyne was held back from returning with the descending rope.

The newcomer was a typical Briton. "Thanks," he said. "Close shave. Have you a light? We must signal after each arrival."

CHAPTER VIII. AN INTERLUDE
"Please be careful; these stairs are very steep," said Constance, swinging the lantern close to her companion's feet as they climbed down the top-most flight.

"All the more reason why you should not fall. Wait here a moment. I must have a look at the hospital."

The visiting-officer's room, which also served the purposes of a library and recreation room in normal times, now held four injured persons, including two women, one of them a stewardess, and a little girl.
