THE GIFT OF LEONARD
TO QUEEN'S WILL START A NEW ERA.

What is Proposed and What It is Hoped Will Be the Result of the Provision For Military Instruction.

Montreal Gazette
Major R. W. Leonard, chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway commission has undertaken to introduce a new element into the life of Queen's university. His project presents so many points of interest that a statement of a few of them is timely. Queen's is a fairly old university as Canadian institutions go. It is doors were opened more than seventy years ago it for a while was the absolute possession of that Presbyterian body known as the Old Kirk; about thirty years ago this phrase ended and the university became a distinctly independent institution, bearing a legal relation to the church which founded it most easily expressed by saying that it was "under Presbyterian auspices," a year ago this link was broken and Queen's now is an independent, national university with no denominational bonds. The majority of the students long have been non-Presbyterians, though it is possible that Presbyterians constitute the single denomination represented. The university founded on the model of the Scottish universities, it has no residence, it accords a large measure of freedom to its students, and that freedom has been abused in the past. There are several faculties, arts, medicine, mining, engineering and architecture; the arts students in attendance number several hundreds. Very many of the students earn their own way through college and have to consider ways and means with wholesome care. A peculiarity of the arts course is the wide latitude given to the individual students, who is allowed to select a large number of the subjects which he is to take up and undergo examination in. The university itself always has been cramped for means and has made its resources stretch creditably far. The graduates of Queen's are well represented among the leaders of the Canadian people. Side by side with Queen's at Kingston is the Royal Military College. This institution is acknowledged to be one of the best educational institutions in Canada. It gives an admirable military training; it turns men into excellent civil engineers; and it imparts a moral training the result of military discipline and the military code of honor, which has given its graduates a peculiar and most enviable standing in the regard of the community. It was founded to supply the Canadian people with a military element which would be of value in any emergency which might arise. Nearly every comment which can be passed upon the institution is favorable, and yet there is a certain note of disappointment about the notices of it. It supplies a number of excellent officers to the British army, and that is good. It supplies some well-trained officers to our permanent force, and that is an advantage. It reinforces our engineering profession with a stream of well-qualified and upright men. It is increasingly useful to our active militia. But on the whole it has failed to impress itself upon the nation's leadership. It is a striking fact that although it has been in existence for nearly forty years it has not contributed one member to the Canadian parliament. Many of its graduates are professional soldiers, and many are engineers, and in circumstances which do not make them suitable parliamentary candidates. Canadian men of the leader class have not the knowledge of military organization, of the relations between military policy and the general life of the nation, which we might expect from the money spent on the Royal Military College and the excellence of the type of man produced. Queen's situated in the same town has had far more influence upon the national life and in Queen's no means have existed to give to the future professional men and leaders in business the particular advantages of a military nature which have been given to the graduates of the Royal Military College. It may be guessed that some such set of considerations moved Major R. W. Leonard to make the gift to Queen's which has been announced. He himself is a graduate of the Royal Military College who has prospered in civil life, and he has found that the disciplinary training and the practical acquaintance with the art of organization with the Royal Military College course gives of great service in the world of affairs. A man who has had military training, for one thing is not likely to insist on doing his subordinates' work for them; that is a peculiar vice of Canadian administration as seen here in Ottawa.

undergraduates undergoing the ordinary university course. To their studies of the older type they add a measure of military training, which the university authorities will recognize as conducting to their education. They will drill a specified number of days a year; they will undergo instruction in musketry; they will receive certain theoretical teaching of the sort needed by regimental officers, and they will be taught how to train others. In time each member will pass examinations which will qualify him to be an officer in any arm of the Canadian militia and he will leave the university able to join on advantageous terms the local regiment of his future abode. This is the general outline of a scheme which is being hammered into shape in the headquarters staff.

This general plan Major Leonard proposes to apply to Queen's with great energy. He has bought a good site close to the university and upon it he will erect a residence for the "contingent" which Queen's is to furnish. In general the plan is that there shall be sufficient dormitory accommodation for four companies, each fifty or sixty strong, and an administration building to contain a dining hall, offices, adjutant's quarters, classrooms and the other equipment necessary. The militia department will erect a drill hall on a part of the site. There will be an adjutant, a professional soldier seconded for duty, who will reside on the premises and who will exercise the discipline which is part of the training for which the scheme is devised. To live by exact rules strictly obeyed is part of the training of the Royal Military college which has proved so admirable. The members of the training corps will live under these conditions of daily discipline; they will undergo a moderate amount of training in gymnastics, drill and musketry; they will attend the summer militia camps; they will take certain lectures on military matters; they will take certificates among them to rank in the militia; and for the rest they will be ordinary students at the university, proceeding to their degrees. What they receive in return for discharging these duties, apart from the general benefit conferred by such a regimen, will be first, that the university is expected to count the work so done as part of the course for a degree, and, secondly, that Major Leonard's generosity will enable them to live in these quarters, neat, but at rates substantially cheaper than those charged by the best houses of the town. The militia department may supplement this aid with certain grants.

DENIAL FROM OTTAWA
Story of Newspaper Immigration Campaign a Canard.
Ottawa, Jan. 20.—The Canadian immigration department has denied a charge made before a congressional committee in the United States, on Saturday, to the effect that the Canadian government was yearly spending $100,000 to fill the pages of country newspapers in the Western States with misinformation designed to attract Americans to Canadian lands.
In the charges it was alleged that the government was making use of a western newspaper union to fulfill its ends and have this erroneous information disseminated. E. Blake Robertson, assistant superintendent of immigration, when seen in regard to the matter, stated that no information of the kind alleged had been supplied to any newspaper by the government. He furthermore asserted that if necessary the department was prepared to send representatives to appear before congress and disprove the allegations made.
It is understood here that Western United States railway interests, with large tracts of land for colonization purposes, are at the bottom of the charges.

To comply with the American tariff, Argentina recently removed the duty she imposed on imported semolina, a product of wheat.

Three Mighty Forces Close Linked

Have you ever noted how an audience yawns in the face of an uninspired speaker? On the other hand, have you noted how an audience will lean forward and grasp the chair arms when the speaker reveals enthusiasm? Enthusiasm is the buoyant expression of truth. To impart belief in anything, a man must believe it deeply himself. We call such a man an enthusiast. This applies to the written word also—particularly to advertisements. When the manufacturer really believes in his wares, his enthusiasm will almost inevitably find expression in Advertising. And enthusiasm will be contagious—his audience—the readers of the newspaper—will, figuratively speaking, "lean forward and listen intently."

To be convincing an advertisement must convey an unmistakable impression of enthusiasm. This it will only do when the article advertised has inherent worth.

Thus we have:
Sincerity—Enthusiasm—Advertising:
Three mighty forces, close-linked.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper. If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 563, Lansden Building, Toronto.
