THE YOUNG MEN'S CLUB A PROPOSAL TO HOLD

OF QUEEN STREET METHODIST CHURCH HELD SUPPER

On Thursday Evening, a number of Good Speeches Were Given— "Service" Was the Chief Theme.

The Young Men's club of Queen street Methodist church held a supper on Thursday evening to which they invited representatives from the other clubs of the sister Methodist churches. A sumptuous supper was served at 7 o'clock, and by the young ladies of the Sunday school, who received a warm tribute from J. Stagg, the representative from Brock street Methodist church club. After supper a fine programme was given which included speeches from R. Meek, J. M. Farrell, T. P. Maxwell, representative of Sydenham Methodist club, J. Stagg, J. Lockett, Rev. J. Webster, P. C. Anderson, Rev. G. J. Campbell, and R. Crawford. The duties of chairman were carried out by A. J. Struthers, president of Queen street club.

After a short introductory address, Mr. Struthers called upon Mr. Meek, who spoke chiefly upon "The objects of all studied men." The speaker said the busy man is the best man, and he should always use his talents to the best advantage. Mr. Meek went on to describe the difference between the types of men to be met with. He took as an illustration that dreadful catastrophe which occurred at Chicago several years ago, where the Iroquois theatre was burned and so many lives were lost. One man escaped, but in doing so he helped to trample over women and children. This man was a large robust fellow and instead of giving a helping hand to rescue some of the poor unfortunates, he continued on his rush for safety thinking nothing about the hundreds who he helped to trample down to death. This same man was afterwards congratulated upon his escape, but nevertheless he realized the error he had made, and stated to those who wished to have congratulated him, that it would have been better for him to have perished than have such a blot rest upon his life. This was the one type which Mr. Meek described, and the other was a young athlete, the son of a noted doctor of Chicago, who while passing the same theatre when the catastrophe happened and hearing the cries for help rushed in and amid the flames and was instrumental in saving nineteen lives. Not being content, he continued to save others, but before long the plank on which he was standing broke, and he crashed down into the flames. The young athlete was taken to the hospital, but he had received fatal burns, and expired in a few hours. When dying the young athlete repeated a short passage of Scripture, "For this came I into the world." Mr. Meek's address carried with it the keynote "Service."

J. M. Farrell corroborated Mr. Meek in his point pertaining to service. Mr. Maxwell told of the many experiences which he had had during his life and paid a tribute to all fathers, who in many cases are not dealt fairly with by their children. In many instances they are left out of the question when they should be consulted about some of the enterprises which their children undertake. F. G. Lockett told how on several occasions he had been tempted to go to Chicago and start up in the hardware business, but fortunately the great fire of that place broke out and thus detained him from going. In a few years he came to the conclusion that he could do just as well at home. This Mr. Lockett did and finally came to be one of the successful business men of the city. Revs. J. Webster and G. I. Campbell added interest to the evening's programme. The latter clearly defined the character which every young gentleman should possess. W. G. Anderson said that there is no better calling than that of a teacher, which calling should be a teacher with the professions of divinity, medicine, etc. R. Crawford was the last speaker of the evening and was very witty in his remarks. During the course of the evening William Evans sang. The programme was concluded by singing the national anthem.

"FIRST AID" CLASS FOR FIRE-MEN AND POLICE

The Matter Referred to the Fire Chief and Chief of Police—Kingston's Insurance Rates.

The proposal to hold a class in "first aid" work for the firemen and policemen, under the auspices of St. John's Ambulance association, came before the attention of the members of the fire and light committee on Thursday afternoon. A communication was received from the secretary of the association setting forth the work covered and the financial aspect. The committee realized the benefit of such a course for the men, and referred the matter to the chief of the brigade and the chief of police to consider and report.

The chairman, Ald. Sutherland, read communications which had passed between him and the secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters association relative to the request of the committee that the insurance rates in Kingston be reduced, in view of the added efficiency of the brigade with the addition of the four new men, and the arrangement by which the apparatus at the lower station does not respond except on second call, making provision for protection to the business section while the other apparatus might be at a fire in an outlying residential section. The underwriters association has not given anything definite on the matter yet. The matter of the risk on the fire apparatus, horses and men, should the brigade respond to a fire at the Royal Military College, will be taken up again with Col. T. R. Carter, the commanding officer. The militia department is willing to stand for the indemnity on the apparatus when crossing the bridge, but the committee wants this agreement while the temporary bridge is in use to cover not only the outfit and horses, but Ald. Nixie held that the men should be included. The militia department should assume the risk on the whole from the time it leaves the stations until it returns.

The city solicitor will be asked for a more definite answer to the question of the committee as to what are its powers in placing lights, now that the Utilities' commission is in vogue. Residents on Victoria street, between Johnson and Durham streets, petitioned for gas and street lights. The committee will ask the Utilities' commission as to the location of the present lights and the distribution of the new ones. Engineer Way, of the fire department, asked for an increase in salary. The matter was left over for the time being. Ald. Sutherland presided at the meeting. The other members present were Alds. Gilchrist, Hanley, Clugston, Nickle and Stroud.
