Quite the event of the season took place on Friday evening of last week when the matrons and maids of Napanee entertained many friends at a dancing party in the town hall, says the Napanee Beaver. Splendid music was furnished by the Picton orchestra, and the guests were well attended to by a committee of young ladies who made charming hostesses in every way. The ten members of this committee were Miss Edna Ashley, wearing a gown of mauve satin with ruffled overdress and touches of Paddy's green; Miss Constance Grange, in white satin with crystal trimming; Miss Diana Miller, in yellow satin with lace miter; Miss Gladys Miller, in violet crepe de chene with lace; Miss Nora Soby, in pink satin with spangled tulle; Miss Hazel Leonard, in yellow satin with violet; Miss Ethel Hawley, in pale blue charmeuse; Miss Lucella Hall, with rose pink brocaded satin with shadow lace bodice and rhinestone trimming; Miss Nora Waller, in white satin and lace; Miss Florence Johnston, in mauve satin, veiled in embroidered nylon. The patronesses were also handsomely gowned, Mrs. B. P. Davy, who was also honorary secretary, wearing white satin with handsome lace trimming; Mrs. F. S. The Man On Watch

"Sober saints and smiling sinners" takes the cake for the most startling sermon topic recorded in last Saturday's Whig, remarks the Lampman, who wonders if the First Congregational pastor had his flock of the sober or smiling kind.

The Lampman agrees with the Queen's theological principal that Greek and Hebrew should not be cut out of the divinity student's course, but he does not for a moment think that a knowledge of those two dead languages will aid in converting a single sinner. How much Hebrew and Greek do the Salvation Army, the Hornerite or the Christian Science preachers know? And behind the great array of their converts!

The Lampman imagines that it must be amusing to Ex-Town Councilman Polson to read about the paving of Princess street in this year of grace nineteen hundred and fourteen when he tried to get the council to pave that thoroughfare twenty-five years ago. Progress is slow to be sure, when it took successive councils just a quarter of a century to finally decide on something that Mr. Polson pressed for so long ago.

The Lampman was of the opinion that the church was a place that welcomed sinners, even to actors, and therefore, he was surprised that some of the Sydenham street Methodist governing board should feel so badly over the fact that the Woman's club of the town used their hall to listen to an address from an eminent actor. However, the Lampman claims that the Methodist church is not opposed to the theatre. The people compose the church, and he ventures to assert that a vote of the members and adherents of the four Methodist churches of Kingston, for instance, will result strongly in favor of the theatre. It is only a few weeks ago that the Lampman sav' at the Grand Opera house two or three very prominent members of the Sydenham street Methodist quarterly board, and he supposes that those gentlemen will silence those who are protesting.

Badminton, the Lampman is told, is very much recognized by the department of militia, for when a volunteer company of the Kingston Rifles wanted to practise indoor shooting on a Saturday afternoon, it was informed that it could not have the building as the Badminton game must not be interfered with.

Queen's is years ahead of Toronto University in "abolishing the bar" at its student dinners, which once upon a time were very "wet," particularly that of the "sawbones," where there were more bottles on the tables than cups, saucers and plates. For a long time, liquor has been barred from all Queen's functions and no one seems to be the worse of it.

What's the matter with Kingston's horsemen that they cannot hold winter ice races? The Lampman sees them tearing over the streets with their racers, and yet he has not heard of ice races being held here for ten years. Little villages like Wolfe Island, Bath and Batsera can have successful horse meets each winter, and yet Kingston's speed representatives with a fine harbor and a fair grounds track cannot run anything.

So William McCannion is after bad meat on the market, the Lampman observes. That must have been a pretty "savory" quarter that William sent to the nuisance ground for the birds and the rodents to feed upon. And yet, the Lampman has no doubt that some people, who have a "high" taste might relish such a quarter, just as "Zacheus" would look happy with limburger on the table. The Lampman is told that last Saturday fully fifty per cent of the meat offered for sale on the town market was unfit for consumption by human beings. Veal especially requires to be watched later on, for farmers will offer stuff a few days old for sale, when it should be three weeks old. As the market clerk is an old butcher, he will no doubt have this unwholesome stuff carted to the nuisance heap.

Nat. Goodwin, the actor who plays at the Grand to-night, is the exception to that old proverb that a man never survives his third wife, as he has been wedded to no less than four wives, but, of course, he did not wait for them to die. The divorce court was responsible for his grand record. The Lampman saw "Nat" on the stage years ago, and liked him because he reminded him of the late Harry Lindley, the actor who also lived through several marriages and died recently at a good old age.
